THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

It is, of course, impossible to appraise at this time with any degree of accuracy the damage which has been inflicted upon financial markets by the destruction wrought in San Francisco and California generally by earthquake and fire. It is even doubtful if the full extent of the losses growing out of this great disaster is ever learned, for a catastrophe of such magnitude has inevitable ramifications which are never discovered, but which have cumulative influence upon the financial well-being of a country when their origin is little more than a memory. If it be borne in mind that the stock market of this city has never before been called upon to face a calamity so overwhelming in its financial aspect there can be only wonder at the comparative calmness with which the news was received, for an average decline of 4 points in two days has often overtaken securities on pretexts dwarfed into insignificance by the reality of last week's events. To realize the truth of this it is only necessary to recall the opening days of the now famous "publicity campaign" against Amalgamated Copper. While quick appreciation of the various mitigating factors in the present situation, such as the sources of relief opened to the money market through gold imports to pay claims against foreign insurance companies, probable deposits of Government funds by Secretary Shaw, and heavy demands upon manufacturing companies for materials and upon the railroads for transportation of these materials in the work of rebuilding the city, accounts in large measure for this attitude of the stock market, underlying these matters, and fully as important, if not more so, is the fact that the present general level of prices in the stock market is so far in accord with the amazing prosperity of the country, speculation in securities being at the lowest ebb, and outside or public holdings reduced to what might be termed "investment limits," that the stock market situation itself is unusually sound, and therefore capable of resisting within normal bounds even so thoroughly an unsettling development as the destruction of one of the country's great cities. It was noteworthy that outside of the stocks of those railroads and miscellaneous corporations which have to do directly with San Francisco's business life the only sensational fall in the whole active list of securities was in Reading, a stock which every one knows has been the subject of pool manipulation for many months. If there were in the stock market either pools or individual holdings of securities in large amounts, the declines in stocks failed to exhaust their margins or their patience so far as to produce unsettling liquidation; nor were the many rich men who are or have been citizens of California and investors in her business enterprises forced to sacrifice their securities. If it becomes necessary, in the process of reconstruction, for these capitalists to realize on their holdings, and for the insurance companies of this country to take similar steps to meet their losses, it is wholly probable that the liquidation will be so gradual and cautious as in no wise to unsettle the markets.

If this cheerful view of this aspect of the situation is correct, it is, nevertheless, obvious that money market conditions have undergone a radical change, so radical, in fact, that any substantial advance in the level of prices must come in spite of active money. For it is clear that the demand for funds, to care for the destitute in the first place and later to reconstruct the city, will be so insistent as to curtail, if not to exhaust, such supplies as might in the ordinarily easy period between this time and August have been at the disposal of the stock market. At the close of the week our bankers were, in most cases, of the belief that throughout the rest of the present year there would be little time money available under 5 per cent., and that day-to-day loans would be proportionately firm. The money to be used in the work of reconstruction will come from various sources, but chiefly in the form of payments by the insurance companies; in the recall of deposits in this city and in Chicago belonging to California banks, and through flotations of loans. If it proves true that the damage to property amounts to $150,000,000 or thereabout, the loss to the insurance companies may easily rise to $100,000,000, the conservatism of this estimate being evident from the fact that in the Baltimore fire, where the total loss was placed at $70,000,000, that to the insurance companies was between $35,000,000 and $39,000,000. Our own insurance companies must meet these claims through sales of securities, steps in this direction having already been taken, and by borrowings. Insurance company loans following the Baltimore and Rochester fires in February, 1904, were so heavy that Eastern buyers of commercial paper were temporarily out of the market, and there is every reason to believe that this will be even more true in the present contingency. An alleviating feature of the insurance situation, so far as this country is concerned, is the fact that a large part of the loss, estimated at from $35,000,000 to $50,000,000, falls upon European companies, and with characteristic business acumen many of the most important of these companies have already announced that in this emergency they will not attempt to secure funds to meet these losses through sales of American securities, but will find the necessary money at their home offices in London or on the Continent. The result of this determination was found in a decline of nearly 2 cents in the pound in demand sterling during the closing days of last week, the foreign exchange market sinking to a level well below the gold import point. Announcement of heavy engagements of gold were made at the end of the week, and it is evident that as gold comes into the London market from time to time, it will be secured by our bankers, and the importations will, in the aggregate, be very large. They will be welcome, as would also deposits of additional Government funds by Secretary Shaw, a step which, if taken, could arouse not the least justifiable criticism, for the destruction of San Francisco, which has always been the financial centre of the Pacific Coast, distributing funds up and down that coast and carrying loans for interior banks, imposes this burden upon New York directly. Evidence of this fact was forthcoming last week in the heavy transfers of currency both by telegraph and by express to California banks. Many of our local bankers in order to expedite the payment of these funds drew upon Chicago, from which they were forwarded by express, and for this reason the shipments to Chicago also were unusually heavy. The length to which this movement is likely to go is illustrated in the statement of one of the greatest banks of this city that it expects to lose in all, in this way, not less than $5,000,000. What this means to a money market painfully recovering from a stringency almost without precedent at this season of the year is, of course, quite clear.

COPPER DEMAND CONTINUES.

High Price of Metal Favors Working of Low Grade Ore.

BOSTON, April 21.—The San Francisco calamity found the copper market in a very strong position, with demand equaling supply and mines in full operation. What the effect of the catastrophe will be is problematical.

In general the situation may be said to be unchanged; output is absorbed at prices approximating 18 cents, and the market for stocks retains its hardness.

Of actual mining news this week there is dearth. Most of what there is comes from the lake district. The Parrot Mine is at present producing copper at the rate of 12,400,000 pounds per annum. The daily shipment of ore to the smelter is 550 tons, against 400 tons in December last, or a gain of 40 per cent.

Fire and water are interfering greatly with Tamarack, and very inopportunely, for Tamarack is a high-cost producer. Three shafts are understood to be idle, and it will be some weeks before work can be resumed.

Renewed disturbances, the latest very like an earthquake, in the Quincy mine have drawn attention to the dangers which beset men at work deep in the earth, and a small fire in the tenth level of the South Kearsage branch of the Osceola has also acted as a warning.

Speaking of Quincy, it must be noticed that the production for the first three months of 1906 is ahead of the corresponding period of last year. The annual output is estimated at 18,600,000 pounds of fine copper. The dividend has been increased to $9 per share. Last year it was $6.

Atlantic and Wolverine make excellent showings. The latter company is now stamping all the rock that its mill can handle.

A letter writer at the Lake sends this interesting papagraph about Calumet and Hecla, the Golconda of copper mines:

> While the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company has largely increased its stamp mill facilities and is shipping more rock at the present time than ever before in its history, it is not producing as much as 100,000,000 pounds of refined copper annually, as has recently been stated. Rock shipments to the mills at Lake Linden probably average slightly in excess of 6,500 tons daily, but much of this product is coming from the shafts on the Kearsarge and Osceola amygdaloid belts, which are not nearly so rich as the workings in the Calumet conglomerate.
>
> In former years the rock stamped by the Calumet and Hecla Company averaged 3 per cent. in refined copper contents, but at the present time it is doubtful if the rock yields more than 2 per cent. This does not mean necessarily that the mine is becoming poorer. As a matter of fact, the Calumet conglomerate workings contain large blocks of ground which would average in excess of 3 per cent. copper. But the improved methods of mining and milling and the present price of the metal render it advantageous to treat a lower grade of ground than was practicable some years ago.
>
> Winona is again to be put upon a producing basis.

The North Butte Mining Company, according to its annual report, is hoisting 900 tons of rock daily, and will soon increase to 1,500 tons. The smelting contract runs for three years.

It is indeed an idle day when some new incorporation is not announced from the Butte camp. This week's include the Northeast Butte, with $1,000,000 capital; the Butte Hill, with five times as much capital, and the North Butte Mountain, also with $5,000,000 stock.

Butte Exploration's Superintendent reports this week finding 26 per cent. copper at a depth of 447 feet, in pockets.

Daily shipments from the Raven mine are reported to be 100 tons. It is also reported that there are 150,000 tons in sight.

The Utah Copper Company has orders out for 2,000 tons of structural steel for the second unit of its mill at Garfield, and for eighteen Chilean grinding mills.

Salt Lake is looking for a visit from Mr. Heinze, during which it will be learned just how great is his interest in Bingham Consolidated. The expectation there is that he is to be the head of that company.

In view of recent occurrences in the Tintic district it would not be surprising, it is thought here, if the Guggenheims should soon take over the Carisa and Mammoth, to combine their ores with those of Utah copper and other Bingham mines.

INSURANCE STOCKS DEAD.

No Sales of Fire Companies Shares Here as in England.

The prompt falling off in English fire insurance shares following the news of the San Francisco disaster finds no parallel in the market here, chiefly for the reason that while stocks of the English companies are regularly quoted on the Liverpool Exchange, here the price is fixed by the negotiations of brokers with individual clients. There have been no announced sales of insurance stocks here since the disaster, and the only index of the state of the market is the withdrawal of all bids on the brokers' quotation lists, and the general drop of the asking prices on the same lists, to the level of the bids of a week ago. As bids and offers for insurance stocks are often as much as 100 points apart, this in itself shows that the fire and quake have pretty completely disorganized the market.

The drop in the English companies' shares ranged from 10¾ for the Royal to 1¼ for the Sun. The Scotch companies which are unprotected by an earthquake clause suffered more heavily.

Another point of difference between the English and the American stock as pointed out by a broker who makes a specialty of insurance stocks is the fact that the English stockholders are liable for a margin of unpaid-up capital, which in some cases is considerable. In the event of losses greater than the companies could meet, one of the first procedures would be the assessing of the stockholders for the difference between the subscribed capital and that actually paid in. With this possibility of an assessment hanging over them, weak holders are prone to get rid of their shares at the first indications of panic.

CATASTROPHE MARKETS

How Stocks Were Affected Last Week by Disasters.

QUICK RECOVERIES USUAL

Chicago Fire Caused Much Greater Declines Than Those Due to News of San Francisco Conflagration.

The effects upon the stock market of the calamity which last week overtook San Francisco were felt chiefly on Thursday, the day after the news reached this city. On Wednesday the market declined sharply, it is true, but the selling movement gained greater headway the following day, and in many stocks the declines were heavier than those which occurred on the first day of the catastrophe. On Friday the market enjoyed a substantial recovery, which was due partly to more encouraging news from San Francisco concerning the possibility of saving a portion of the city, and partly to a natural recovery following the first effects of the selling movement.

Much interest was taken this past week in the probable future effect of the San Francisco conflagration upon the stock market. The view which was most commonly expressed was that after the first shock it was not to be expected that the losses which have been incurred in San Francisco will continue to assert unfavorable influence upon security values. The familiar argument was heard that in effect trade would be stimulated by the rebuilding of the city. The movement of the stock market following other similar disasters was pointed to as proving the assertion that the effects of such calamities are not long felt by the market.

An examination of market records covering the periods immediately following other great disasters which have visited this country for the most part sustain this contention. It is interesting in this connection to set forth the immediate effects upon the market of last week's catastrophe, of the Baltimore fire of two years ago, and of some other disasters in earlier years.

The heaviest losses this last week were those which occurred in the stocks of the United Railways Investment Company. That company's common stock declined 43½ points and the preferred 37 points. The only other very severe decline was the 12¼ point drop in Reading common, which was influenced by other factors more, of course, than by the news from San Francisco. It is noteworthy that the declines in the two railroad stocks most directly affected by the losses in San Francisco—Atchison and Southern Pacific—were smaller than the losses in some other stocks which were affected rather sympathetically than actually by the Pacific Coast disaster. The low prices of the week for a dozen or more of the active issues compared with the closing prices of Tuesday were as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO CONFLAGRATION.
April 18, 1906.

	Tuesday's Close.	Low of Week.	Decline.
Atchison	93¼	89	4¼
Southern Pacific	69¼	64	5¼
Union Pacific	157¾	150¾	7
United Rys. Inv.	93½	50	43½
Un. Rys. Inv. pf.	92	55	37
Amalgamated Copper	113⅜	107	6⅜
Baltimore & Ohio	112¼	109⅞	2⅜
Brooklyn Rapid Transit	87½	82½	5
Chi., Mil. & St. Paul	177⅝	171½	6⅛
New York Central	144¾	141	3¾
Pennsylvania	142⅞	138¼	4⅝
Reading common	137¾	125½	12¼
United States Steel	43¼	41⅝	1⅝

Recoveries varying from 1 to 8 points occurred in a number of issues on Friday, and much more substantial gains were recorded in the United Railways Investment stocks, which had been sacrificed by panic-stricken holders. Compared with the losses recorded after other catastrophes, those of the past week were, in some cases, relatively light. Taking, for instance, the record of the market in February, 1904, on the 7th of which month occurred the great fire at Baltimore. It is seen that losses of as much as 6 to 10 points were recorded in a number of issues, some of them not directly affected by the Baltimore losses. In this instance, however, it must be recalled that other important factors were at work. In that same month—in fact, the day after the Baltimore fire—war broke out between Russia and Japan, and before the month closed a serious fire in Rochester added to the losses which had been incurred in Baltimore. Compared with the $200,000,000 which the insurance companies are estimated to have lost as a result of the burning of San Francisco, the losses in Baltimore appear small. The total property loss resulting from that fire was placed at $70,000,000 and the insurance loss at $39,000,000.

The declines in a number of stocks from the high price of February, 1904, to the low price of the month were as follows:

BALTIMORE FIRE,
Feb. 7, 1904.

	High. Feb.	Low of Month.	Decline.
Baltimore & Ohio	84	73⅝	10⅜
Pennsylvania	121½	112½	9
Atchison	70⅝	64	6⅝
Chi., Mil. & St. Paul	144⅞	137¼	7⅝
Erie	27⅞	22	5⅞
Louisville & Nashville	107⅜	101	6⅜
Missouri Pacific	94	87	7
Norfolk & Western	60⅞	55	5⅞
Reading common	45⅝	39⅛	6½
Southern Railway	22⅛	18⅜	3¾
Southern Pacific	50⅝	42½	8⅛
Union Pacific	81⅞	72⅛	9¾
U. S. Steel	11⅞	10⅛	1¾

The Charleston earthquake, which occurred on Aug. 31, 1886, had much less influence upon the stock market than the Baltimore fire. Comparing the low price of September with the high price of August, 1886, the declines are seen to be in most cases unimportant. This is the record for a dozen stocks, including several which were likely to be most affected by the partial destruction of Charleston:

CHARLESTON EARTHQUAKE.
Aug. 31, 1886.

	High. August.	Low. Sept.	Decline.
Louisville & Nashville	47½	43¼	4¼
Memphis & Charleston	40	38½	1½
Richmond & Danville	148	140	8
Richmond & West Point	31⅝	27⅛	4½
South Carolina Railway	13	11⅞	1⅛
Atchison	89⅝	87⅞	1¾
Chesapeake & Ohio	9¾	8	1¾
Chi., Milwaukee & St. Paul	94⅛	90⅛	4
Missouri Pacific	112⅞	109⅛	3¾
New York Central	111⅞	108⅛	3¾
Philadelphia & Reading	27⅛	24⅝	2½
Southern Pacific	33	30¼	2¾
Union Pacific	59	54⅝	4⅜

The great Galveston flood, which occurred in 1900, had even less effect upon the prices of securities than the Charleston earthquake. The catastrophe occurred at the time when the stock market was in the midst of a sustained upward movement, and such reactions as occurred on the news of the disaster were quickly made up.

The Chicago fire presents a very different record. The beginning of that catastrophe occurred on Oct. 9, 1871. It was several days before New York was advised of the disastrous occurrence. The receipt of the news here was followed by an actual panic in the stock market, during the course of which declines of from 10 to 18 points occurred in some of the leading railroad stocks. The losses were heaviest in Chicago & Northwestern and Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, two of the railroads most affected by the tremendous loss of property in Chicago. Somewhat curiously, Reading, one of the stocks not directly affected, sold off very heavily, just as it did this past week. In October, 1871, that stock dropped 14⅛ points, compared with Chicago & Northwestern's loss of 18⅞ points and Lake Shore's loss of 16⅝. The decline in Reading last week amounted to 12¼ points. Following is the market's record for October, 1871:

CHICAGO FIRE.
Oct. 9, 1871.

	High. October.	Low of Month.	Decline.
Chicago & Alton	119½	112	7½
Chi., Bur. & Quincy	133	125	8
Chicago & Northwestern	70⅛	51¼	18⅞
Cleveland & Pittsburg	126½	112	14½
Erie	32¼	26⅝	5⅝
Illinois Central	135½	132	3½
Lake Shore	107⅛	90½	16⅝
Michigan Central	120	114	6
New Jersey Central	114½	100	14½
New York Central	93⅞	84½	9⅜
Ohio & Mississippi	43⅞	34⅜	9½
Reading	114⅛	100	14⅛
Tol., Wabash & West	61½	52	9½
Union Pacific	28⅜	20¼	8⅛

After the declines which occurred in October, the month of the Chicago fire, there were sharp advances in all the stocks which suffered as a result of that disaster. In fact, during either November or December of that year, most of the stocks in the list sold higher than they had at any time in October prior to the Chicago fire. In most cases, in fact, it is found that declines in the stock market resulting from news such as that which came from the Pacific Coast last week are quickly followed by substantial recoveries.

TOLD ROUND THE TICKER.

H. H. ROGERS, Jr., and Thomas W. Lawson's eldest son last week came home from the City of Mexico on board the same train, each ignorant of the other's presence. Some of their fellow-passengers who knew both by sight were wishing all the way from the City of Mexico to St. Louis, where the party changed cars, that something would happen to bring them together, and that there might be a public exchange of opinions between the two men. Some of the passengers who thought that the younger men might profit by an opportunity to tell each other what they thought of their fathers regretted that the trip brought no opportunity of having young Rogers and young Lawson meet.

D. O. MILLS took the appalling news from San Francisco with characteristic calmness, and with a sanity and cool judgment equally characteristic immediately set about preparations for the restoration of what had been destroyed. He was never for a moment of those who saw in the disaster the end of the city as the metropolis of the Pacific. No individual New Yorker, perhaps, lost more heavily than Mr. Mills. He has always retained a heavy financial interest in the affairs of the Pacific slope, and, besides being the last of the big figures of '49, has always been one of the most faithful to California, although a native New Yorker. He spends some time every year on the Pacific slope, and his country place is one of the finest in the State.

The Stock Exchange bulletin Saturday contained announcements of seven branch offices discontinued, most of them in the Winter resort belt of the South. Here is one of the unfailing signs that Spring has arrived.

THE STEEL TRADE POSITION.

Pittsburg Reports Continued Betterment—Coal Strike Fiasco Helps.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 21.—There has been a decided picking up in the iron and steel business here during the week just closed. All the finished lines are in good request, with rails in exceptionally great demand. And both pig and Bessemer iron enjoyed the best of inquiry during the week, while some good contracts along these lines were booked.

The cause for the looking up of this trade is placed to a great extent on the winding up of the coal strike in the Pittsburg district. It can safely be said that the strike never came to the district and not a wheel was checked in the great mill centre, though for a long time previous to April 1 it was feared that the strike would come and block matters. This was the reason the orders did not come piling in here last month, as is the custom with each returning Spring. Those who wanted to place orders were not at all sure that they could have them filled, but now they are coming with a rush.

Pig iron is very strong, Bessemer valley being quoted at $17.50 and $17.75, while Bessemer Pittsburg is quoted at $18.45 and $18.60, and the pig iron people do not seem to care whether or not they make the sales. There are so many inquiries for pig now that life looks rosy to the men who make it—quite a difference from this time last month. No. 1 foundry pig is going from $18 to $18.90, No. 2 foundry, $18.25 and $18.45; gray forge, $17.10 and $17.60 basic; Pittsburg, $18.50 to $18.55. Bessemer billets continue very strong at $27@$27.50.

It begins to look now as though it would be necessary for some more bar mills to be changed for rail work, as the orders are piling up in this district at the present time. There were quite a few sales made during the week, according to reports coming from headquarters, but details are lacking. In any event there is on hand now more orders than can be well supplied on short notice, and the rail mills are working overtime. There is some rumor that prices have been boosted by certain buyers on promise that their orders will be filled at once, but the rates are openly quoted now at $28 for standard sections of fifty pounds and over; car lots and less than 500 tons, $30; light rails, sixteen pounds, $30; twenty-eight pounds, $28.50@$29; twenty-five to forty pounds, $28.

The structural steel business is again coming in to its own in the district also. For a time even this business looked bad, but it is picking up in a way that pleases all. The quotations now are as follows: Beams and channels, fifteen inches and under, $1.70; over fifteen inches, $1.80; zees, $1.70; angles from three to five inches, $1.80; universal and sheared plates, six and a quarter inches and wider, $1.60 base.

Bar iron is busy and strong going at $1.80. Hoops are rolling at $1.85 if the order is a big one, but if less than car lots $1.95 is asked and obtained quite readily. Bessemer steel bars bring $1.50; open hearth bars, $1.50; plow and cultivator, $1.50 net.

Wire business has been stronger than it appears now, yet it is quite brisk. Wire nails are quoted in carload lots to jobbers at $1.90. Less than carlots demand $2. Painted barbed wire is quoted strong. In carloads it comes at $2 to the jobbers and at $2.05 to the retail. Less than carload lots bring the price up to $2.15.

In other lines the markets seem about the same as last week, but the coming week promises to be something neat in the way of business booms.

Disconto-Gesellschaft's Turnover.

Through an inadvertence, THE TIMES, in a recent article on German banking, printed incorrectly the turnover of the Disconto-Gesellschaft Bank of Berlin for 1905. The correct figure is $8,538,575,000.

AMERICAN YARNS SELL WELL

Raw Cotton Quieter—Pig Iron in Good Demand—Copper Firmly Held.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

LONDON, April 22.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"Business and industrial reports for the last week, excepting in a few unimportant branches, were encouraging. The demand was satisfactory, with prices occasionally better. Breadstuffs very very firm, and in many cases dearer. Maize brought higher prices, while barley and oats were firm. Oilseeds and oils were strong.

"The cotton trade was quieter in raw material. Yarns were irregular, the American selling well, but Egyptian doing badly.

"The cloth business was satisfactory. Home-grown wool was scarce and prices were firm. Native and colonial sorts of yarn had fair sale. Woolens had a satisfactory demand, and clothing houses were fully employed.

"Pig iron was in better demand, with warrants improved, while finished iron and steel makers were generally well engaged, although Birmingham complained of the scarcity of fresh business.

"Copper was firmly held, while tin again advanced. Lead and spelter were steady."

BERLIN BOERSE WEAK.

Meager Subscription to Imperial and Prussian Loans Disappointing.

Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

BERLIN, April 22.—Listlessness is still the prevailing mood on the Boerse. Business in all kinds of shares was very slack last week, and though the tone was at first pretty firm, an unmistakable tendency toward weakness developed later.

Among the depressing considerations must be added the disappointment caused by the meagre subscription to the new imperial and Prussian loans. If all the applications actually made had been of the nature of serious investments, the fact that the amount of the loans was covered only one and a half times need not, perhaps, have caused misgivings, but that was not the case. Large sums were subscribed for purely speculative purposes.

The loans were not regarded with favor, as is plain from the fact that they were offered on the Boerse within the last few days, and the price has already fallen 30 pfennigs below 100.10, at which they were issued.

The continued stringency in the money market also exercised an unfavorable influence on the Boerse.

There is no prospect that the official discount rate, which still remains 5 per cent., will be reduced during April. Indeed, it is doubtful if relief can be expected even in May.

It is said that the recent German and Prussian loans were cautiously avoided by the usual syndicates. The Frankfurter ascribes the ill success of the loans partly to the distaste of the German investor for gilt-edged securities, and partly to the fact that the earlier loans have not yet been digested. Another trouble was that the notice was insufficient.

PARIS BOURSE DULL.

Most Financiers Are Preparing for the Russian Loan.

Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

PARIS, April 22.—The dullness noticed on the Bourse on the eve of the holidays was again perceptible when business was resumed last Tuesday, and there was a downward tendency attributed to the scarcity of money for carrying purposes, which induced some belated operators to liquidate.

There was, moreover, little disposition to undertake new commitments, as most financiers are preparing for the subscription to the Russian loan.

It is generally believed that the allotment will be very small, as holders of 5 per cent. Treasury bonds of 1904 have the preference right in the new issue.

These bonds have been carried on settlement with backwardation of 18 to 20. About an equal premium is quoted on scrip of the new loan.

Some surprise may be expressed that the premium is much higher here than in London, but this is explained by the provision that the portion of the loan issued abroad is not to be negotiable in France for two years, and then must be subject to the French stamp tax of 1 per cent. on the par value of the securities.

The riotous demonstrations of the coal strikers in the north of France, and the apparently wavering attitude of the Government, have created a bad impression, which was reflected by the general decline in prices, until recovering set in on Friday under the influence of better news from the mining districts.

The appalling news from San Francisco had little effect on the Bourse, as American railway shares are not quoted here, and there is but a small interest in these securities outside of a few banking houses.

The markets closed steady, with insignificant changes in quotations as compared with Saturday last.

'FRISCO'S PACIFIC TRADE.

Growth of Her Oriental Commerce Compared with Puget Sound's.

Predictions which were general when the completeness of the destruction of San Francisco became apparent, that the disaster marked the end of the Golden Gate's supremacy in the Pacific trade, make interesting a comparison of her import and export figures with those of the Puget Sound cities, Tacoma and Seattle, which are her chief rivals.

As is made plain in the table subjoined, San Francisco's exports are considerably more than those of her two Puget Sound rivals combined, but what is more significant, the figures for four years past show that, notwithstanding Mr. Hill's strenuous efforts in behalf of the Washington cities, San Francisco has fully held her own, and taken something more than her proportionate amount of the increase in Oriental trade. Of imports Puget Sound gets an inconsiderable amount compared with the Golden Gate, and, while San Francisco's quota has increased at about the same rate as her exports, the Puget Sound cities have actually lost ground.

That your petitioner is a street surface railway corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, having filed its certificate of incorporation in the office of the Secretary of State of New York on the 29th day of July, 1905, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating a street surface railway in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York.

2. That your petitioner desires to obtain from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York its consent to and a grant of the right, privileges, and franchise to use a portion of Bowne Street, in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York, for street railway purposes, and for the construction, maintenance and operation of a single track street surface railway upon and along the surface of said Bowne Street, a description of such proposed railway being as follows: Beginning at a point southeast of Imlay Street, where it will connect with the track of the New York Dock Company, and running southeasterly along Bowne Street to and into the property of J. RAILROAD COMPETITION

Weakening of Community of Interest Principle.

Separation of Railroad Interests Indicated by Recent Changes in Southern Pacific and Other Directorates.

Several announcements of the past fortnight—the changes in the make-up of the Illinois Central committees and in the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Company and the retirement of H. C. Frick from the Rock Island Company Directorate—have served to emphasize the breakdown, or at least the partial failure, of the community of interest principle, which was invoked a few years ago as the panacea for all railroad ills arising from the natural disposition of railroad lines to compete with each other and to extend their own business at the expense of others. Within recent months Wall Street has been reminded on numerous occasions of the fact that the failure of the Northern Securities scheme was the beginning, rather than the end of a movement of separation of railroad interests, which, as a result of several years of planning, had become closely interwoven.

When the Union Pacific representatives on the Northern Pacific Board retired from that company after the rendering of the final decision in the Northern Securities case by the Supreme Court of the United States, it was considered that this action was taken rather in obedience to what appeared to be the clear interpretation of a mandate of the Supreme Court than in response to any policy adopted by the railroad interests themselves. The subsequent retirement of the Gould representatives from the Union Pacific Board, however, owing to George Gould's determination to proceed with his ambitious project of a transcontinental line reaching tidewater at the Pacific as well as at the Atlantic, could not be regarded in the same light. It was made very clear at the time, and subsequent events have emphasized the fact, that the Gould withdrawals from the Union Pacific were a step taken in direct opposition to the community of interest principle. Had this principle contained all the vitality claimed for it by those who eagerly adopted it in 1901 and in earlier years, Mr. Gould's presence on the Union Pacific Board would have been all the more necessary after the construction of the Western Pacific than it had been previously.

When E. H. Harriman last Fall, upon his return from the Far East, made his now famous declaration that the country was about to experience a period of competitive railroad building, he was merely giving public expression to a condition which Wall Street now believes had for a long time existed, but which had been kept in hiding by the semblance of harmony, supplied by the Northern Securities expedient. The plans which had been formed by both the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific-Great Northern interests, even in advance of the organization of the Northern Securities Company, were held in abeyance rather than abandoned while the right of that company to existence was being argued from one court to another. Finally the Supreme Court set its seal of disapprobation upon the Northern Securities scheme, which was to have been the crowning accomplishment of the community-of-interest principle.

No pretense is now made by either side that the competition in the Northwest is not real and energetic. Already both the Union Pacific and the Hill roads are engaged in the construction of hundreds of miles of new lines, and from time to time the law courts in the Northwest are appealed to by one side or the other to interfere with plans which the Hill or the Harriman roads regard as threatening their own interests. Even more energetic has been the contest further South between the Harriman roads and the Western Pacific. There even armed force was resorted to to secure or to retain possession of disputed ground. Coming so shortly after the adoption of gentlemen's agreements, based on the community of interest idea, as the supreme law governing the great railroad systems of the country, the patrolling of the Oakland Creek by armed launches, manned by representatives of the opposing railroad companies, offers an interesting comment upon the futility of the scheme that was formed to prevent energetic railroad capitalists from adopting plans distasteful to their neighbors.

The retirement recently of the members of the firm of Speyer & Co. from the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Company is generally regarded in Wall Street as due, if not wholly, at least to a large degree to the fact that the firm of Speyer & Co. had become closely identified with the affairs of the Rock Island system, whose plans in many directions are more or less distasteful to Mr. Harriman. When these changes in the Southern Pacific Board were followed a few days later by the withdrawal of H. C. Frick from the Rock Island Company, Wall Street was confirmed in its belief that these changes were due to the open acceptance of the fact that Mr. Harriman's plans and those of the Rock Island and other railroad systems could not be entirely harmonized.

It is true that last week's selection of A. J. Earling, President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, as a Director of the Union Pacific caused some modification of the belief widely held in Wall Street that community of interest in the Western railroad field was altogether a thing of the past. In this case the building of the St. Paul's extension to the Pacific Coast appears to be made the occasion not of a breach but rather of a closer alliance between the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Union Pacific. This alliance, however, serves at the same time to emphasize the sharp division that has been made between the interests of these two roads and the Hill roads to the north and the Gould projects to the south of the Union Pacific-St. Paul lines.

As it happens, E. H. Harriman has been the central figure in most of the railroad controversies which have been brought to light during recent months, either by the announcement of plans for new lines or by resignations of Directors, who in the past have been regarded as the links uniting the interests of the great railroad systems in the West. The fact is an interesting one as bearing upon the importance attached to Mr. Harriman's statement that we were running into a period of greater railroad competition.

In the case of the changes in the Illinois Central, Mr. Harriman's part is regarded as even more personal than that in most of the other controversies which have arisen in recent months in the railroad world. There, Wall Street is convinced, it is a question plainly of control of the Illinois Central by Mr. Harriman or by President Stuyvesant Fish and his personal supporters among the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad. The naming of a man regarded as favoring Mr. Fish as Chairman of the Illinois Central Committee on Finance in place of Mr. Harriman, and his subsequent retirement because of the interpretation put upon his choice, serve to emphasize the fact that a very active controversy is under way in Illinois Central affairs.

So many happenings, pointing in the direction of former competitive conditions supplanting the community of interests principle, have naturally led Wall Street to the conclusion that for the future the operation of this principle will be limited to a relatively narrow field. There is no suggestion of a breach among the Eastern roads which have gradually brought under their control the great anthracite companies as well as other lines. In this instance, however, the Pennsylvania and New York systems relied less on the community of interests principle than they did on the actual ownership of a practically controlling interest in the roads which have been brought under their domination. Thus to all intents and purposes the Baltimore & Ohio and the Reading are not independent systems cooperating with the Pennsylvania and New York Central, but rather integral parts of those systems. The conclusion which Wall Street is likely to draw from the present situation is that gentlemen's agreements, without stock ownership, offer no great assurance of a continuance of friendly relations between railroad systems which under ordinary conditions must necessarily compete with each other, both for traffic and in the construction of new lines, unless one or the other is willing to see the natural advantages of the development of the country accrue wholly to its neighbor.

TO TEST A SUBMARINE DEVICE.

Plunger to be Equipped with a Signal Buoy for Use in Case of Trouble.

The submarine torpedo boat Plunger, the craft in which President Roosevelt went to the bottom of Long Island Sound last Summer, is soon to be used in testing a device that, it is believed, will make submarine navigation a great deal safer that it is at the present time. The Plunger is now at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and as soon as the repairs upon her are completed she will be fitted with the device and tested, under the supervision of Lieut. Charles Preston Nelson, the submarine expert.

The device which is to be tried on the Plunger is a reel buoy, and is the invention of Naval Constructor Robert Stocker, United States Navy, the present head of the Bureau of Construction and Repair at the Norfolk Navy Yard. The buoy is attached to the submarine, and is so arranged that it can be instantly released if the submarine boat gets into trouble. When the reel is released the buoy shoots to the surface of the water, its position indicating the exact location of the submarine and the necessity of rendering assistance to the craft.

In addition to the Stocker device the Navy Department is also considering another safety device that will be of special use at night. This signal is arranged with a spool of light wire, the spool being carried on the outside of the submarine shell, and so connected with the interior that the crew can release the signal, which a second later will appear on the surface, the light in the signal indicating at night the position of the submarine, in the same manner as the reel buoy does in the daytime.

FIRE LOSSES IN 1905 HEAVIEST ON RECORD

Total of $5,271,955 in Manhattan, Richmond, and the Bronx.

57 ARRESTS FOR ARSON

Fire Marshal Wants a Bigger Force—Says Insurance Companies Assume Too Hazardous Risks.

Greater fire losses than in any preceding year are reported for the year 1905 by Peter Seery, Fire Marshal, in his annual report made to Fire Commissioner John H. O'Brien Saturday. The Fire Marshal complains that his force is inadequate. Four policemen who were detailed to his office have been removed, two of them by order of Commissioner Bingham. On account of the large number of aliens usually interested in cases which call for investigation by the Fire Marshal's office the services of an interpreter are absolutely required.

"There were for the year 1905 in the Boroughs of Manhattan, the Bronx, and Richmond 7,750 fires," says Fire Marshal Seery, "an increase of 201 fires over the year 1904. The total estimated loss amounted to $5,271,955, an increase of $741,012 over the total loss for 1904. The average loss per fire was $680.25, an increase of $80.05 over the previous year's average.

"The following is a summary for the different boroughs:

	No. of Fires.	Estimated Loss.	Average Loss.
Manhattan	6,707	$5,105,578	$761.23
The Bronx........	691	87,841	127.12
Richmond	352	78,536	223.11
Total...........	7,750	$5,271,955	$680.25

"Of the whole number of fires 3,337, or 43 per cent., were for losses less than $10,000; 2,644, or 34 per cent., for losses between $10 and $100, and 1,297, or 16 per cent., for losses between $100 and $1,000.

"In ascertaining the origin and cause of the different fires the following were found to be among the principal causes:

Carelessness with matches..................	757
Children playing with matches..............	244
Carelessness in use of lighted cigars &c...	404
Overheated stoves, stovepipes, &c..........	444
Chimney fires, defective flues, &c.........	439
Bonfires and brush fires...................	476
Carelessness in use of candles, &c.........	256
Gaslights in contact with curtains, &c.....	217
Kerosene oil lamps, &c., exploding.........	165

"There were also 2,681 fires, causes of which could not be positively ascertained. They were in most cases probably due to carelessness with matches or with lighted cigar or cigarette butts.

"Respecting the record of arrests for arson and the disposition of the cases in the courts, 57 arrests were made during the year. These, together with 4 cases pending from the year previous, made 61 cases to be disposed of; 14 convictions were secured, 8 prisoners were found guilty and sentenced, 2 were found guilty and sentence suspended, while four pleaded guilty and were sentenced; 36 prisoners were discharged by Magistrates or Justices of the Court of General Sessions, 8 were acquitted by juries, and in three cases the Grand Jury failed to indict. One prisoner was adjudged insane and committed to an asylum.

"I find that not a few fires happen through apparent negligence in the use of candles used in religious services in homes; caused by draughts from open windows blowing curtains against the lighted candles.

"Risks have come to my notice which were decidedly hazardous, but not apparently deemed so by the companies, in view of the heavy insurance which they carry on the property in which the fire occurred. It appears, therefore, that if some insurance officials were not so lax in respect to 'risks assumed,' if more discrimination were used in the disposition of claims and the 'moral hazard' and other features of the risk taken into consideration, there would be material decrease in the number of fires.

"It might also be suggested that a good law could be enacted for the purpose of licensing electricians in order to lessen danger to life from the imperfect work of incompetent electricians."

FOUND TOO MANY CHECKS.

Clothier Says Man Who Handled His Account Drew Without Authority.

Jacob Block, manager of a liquor store in Seventh Avenue, was arraigned in the West Side Court yesterday on a charge of larceny made by Louis Horowitz, a clothier, of 458 Seventh Avenue. The complaint alleges that Block drew a sum of money from the West Side Bank which belonged to Horowitz.

Magistrate Barlow adjourned the case until Tuesday, holding Block in $1,000 bail.

According to Horowitz he cannot write, and for some time Block has been making out his checks for him. A few days ago he drew all his money except $205 from the bank. Later he says he received a check made out, he alleges, by Block, which he had not authorized.

Block refused to make any statement in court.

POKER PLAYERS LOCKED UP.

Including the Woman Who Complained of the Others.

The more than middle-aged woman who rushed into the West Forty-seventh Street station yesterday to complain bitterly about losing $35 in a poker game because her fellow-players had stacked the cards, came finally to the conclusion that the cards had been stacked all the way around for her. She said she was Mrs. Irene Lockman of 158 West Eighteenth Street, and her full pedigree taken later on set her age at 51.

"Sergeant," she exclaimed when she had caught her breath after the quick run to the station; "Sergeant, I've just lost $35 in a poker game, and they stacked the cards on me. That's not fair at all, and I want 'em locked up, the mean things! Stacking cards on me!"

Sergt. Palmer sent Policeman McEntee to the house that Mrs. Lockman had named. He arrested May Vergnolles, who said she lived there; John Ferguson, 63 years old of 40 East 107th Street, who said he was a tobacco merchant, and Louis Arachtingi, 23 years old, of 38 Washington Place, who described himself as a real estate agent.

"And now, Mrs. Lockman," said Sergt. Palmer, when the complainant and the other three players had been lined up before the desk, "these people admit that they were playing cards for money, though they deny stacking any cards. And you also say you were playing cards for money. Therefore, Mrs. Lockman, I'm going to lock up the whole lot of you as common gamblers."

"Stacked again," she said, as the prisoners were led to cells.

A girl who said she was Mrs. Lockman's daughter obtained her release in the afternoon with a bond signed by a Magistrate.

CHURCH CORNERSTONE LAID.

Pennsylvania Railroad Will Erect New Buildings for St. Michael's.

Archbishop John M. Farley laid the cornerstone of the new St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church, on West Thirty-fourth and West Thirty-third Streets, yesterday afternoon. In connection with the church there will be not only a pastorate, but a school, and a convent for the Presentation Nuns. The frontage on Thirty-fourth Street extends from 408 to 416.

The new buildings are provided by the Pennsylvania Railroad, which will take the old property for its terminal station. The church was designed by an architect selected by the congregation, but aside from that the railroad company has assumed entire charge of the work, save in one detail. The front of the old church will be used in the new one.

There was a parade from the old church to the new site yesterday, in which the Holy Name Society, the St. Vincent de Paul Society, the Knights of Columbus, and other societies took part. The throng filled the entire platform, which covered most of the plot and overflowed into both streets.

It is expected that it will take about a year to complete the new church and other buildings.

MOB THREATENED MOTORMEN.

Police Had to Protect Them After Car Killed Boy.

While playing with other small boys at Grand and Clinton Streets yesterday afternoon Herman Bloom, 4 years old, of 184 Clinton Street, was run over by a Grand Street car, operated by a probationary motorman, and instantly killed. Rocco Leirito, 30 years old, of 58 Goerck Street, was running the car, under the direction of Patrick Keane of 419 Cherry Street, an experienced motorman, who was breaking the Italian in. Both were arrested on charges of homicide.

Patrolman Halpin of the Delancey Street Station saw the mob that gathered about the car and fought his way through to the front platform. He made the two motormen stay inside the car, and telephoned to his station for help. Three other patrolmen were sent to the scene. Keane and Leirito were put in a patrol wagon and taken to the station.

The angry crowd followed, making a great uproar, but offering no violence to the prisoners or police.

WHOLE FAMILY IN COURT.

Mother and Two Girls Are Accused of Shoplifting.

A mother, with her three children—one a baby of 2 years and the others girls of 9 and 12, respectively—appeared in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning, the mother and the two elder children being accused of shoplifting.

The goods which the prisoners were alleged to have hidden about them represented a value of $75. The prisoners were Mrs. Alice Rand of 448 East Tenth Street; Anna, 12, and Fannie, 9.

Ex-Judge Wentworth appeared on behalf of the dry goods firm which complained. Private detectives told the Magistrate that the mother and the elder girl entered the store, and left the nine-year-old child out on the street. They stated that when something had been purloined by the mother and older child they brought it out to the nine-year-old, who hid it in a big fishnet.

The mother and Anna were held for trial. Fannie and the baby were sent to the Children's Society, to be cared for during their mother's imprisonment.

SHOT HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW.

Then Gerrity Made His Escape—His Wife Held by the Police.

Joseph Gerrity had a quarrel early yesterday morning with his brother-in-law, James Walker, who shared his flat at 226 East Eighty-first Street. He objected strongly to women whom Walker brought to the apartments, one of whom he had turned out an hour or two before.

Walker knocked him down as he ordered him to leave the house and Gerrity ran into his bedroom and got a revolver. Walker again struck him. A scuffle followed and Gerrity, placing the revolver within a foot of Walker, shot him in the body.

Walker was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital and died in two hours. Gerrity disappeared, but Mrs. Gerrity and Fred Lacke of 217 East Eighty-fifth Street, who saw the shooting, are held as witnesses.

BOY SAVES HIS PLAYMATE.

Eight-Year-Old Lad Rescues Companion Who Fell Into Harlem River.

Christ Zemella, 6 years old, of 311 East 104th Street, and Frank Stanawitz, 8 years old, of 165 East Ninety-sixth Street, were fishing in the Harlem Basin at 108th Street yesterday afternoon, when Christ fell into the Basin. Frank, despite the fact that the water is deep there, jumped after him.

By hard work he managed to get the little fellow to the pier, but was so exhausted that had not Patrolman Fanning of the park squad arrived at that moment both boys would have drowned. Fanning pulled both boys to safety, and then called a Park ambulance. The boys were soon none the worse for the accident.

AUTOISTS WOULDN'T STOP TO HELP INJURED GIRL

Miss Waters Hurt When J. B. Brady's Car Was Smashed.

TEN MOTORISTS REFUSED AID

But the Eleventh Hurried Unconscious Girl to the Hospital—She May Die—Machine Hit Pole.

James B. Brady of 7 West Eighty-sixth Street took a party of friends out for an auto ride on Long Island yesterday afternoon. Just the other side of the village of Baldwin, after having crossed a little bridge over a deep ditch, one wheel of the touring car skidded, and the machine slid against an electric light pole. The automobile was almost demolished, and all the occupants were hurled out.

Miss Harriet Waters of 206 West Fifty-fifth Street was picked up unconscious and taken to Nassau Hospital at Mineola. Dr. W. J. Steele of Baldwin, who first attended her, and Dr. Louis Lanehart, at the hospital, said that her skull was fractured. She probably will die. Except for bruises the other occupants of the car were not injured.

Mr. Brady sat with the chauffeur of his car. Alone on the second seat was Fred Housman, who, the Directory says, is a broker who lives at 55 West Thirty-third Street, and has offices at 20 West Thirty-fourth Street. In the third seat were Miss Waters and Miss E. R. MacCaulay of Columbus Avenue and Seventy-first Street.

Shortly after the party left Baldwin something went wrong with the car, and a stop was made to tinker with the mechanism. The machine had just been got under good headway again, going at about twenty miles an hour, when the accident occurred. When the other occupants got up they saw Miss Waters lying in the middle of the road. Mr. Housman lifted her up, and then some of the villagers who had been attracted to the spot ran for Dr. Steele.

Dr. Steele wanted Miss Waters removed as soon as possible to the Nassau Hospital, some ten miles away. It being Sunday, there were many machines on the road. Appeal was made to ten passing cars, but the occupants, though told that the girl was dying, would not agree to remove Miss Waters to the hospital. The villagers were for seizing one of the cars, putting the occupants on the ground, and using it for the injured girl. And then came a man and his wife who agreed to lend their machine.

Mr. Brady had telephoned to the hospital, and an ambulance met the automobile two miles away from Mineola. Dr. John A. Bodine of 9 East Thirty-fourth Street was asked by telephone to jump into his machine and get to the Nassau Hospital as quick as he could. Up to a late hour last night Miss Waters had not recovered consciousness.

ARRESTED MANY SPEEDERS.

New York Motorists Captured in Mt. Vernon and New Rochelle.

Thirteen motorists, including New York bankers, brokers, and merchants, were arrested by the Mount Vernon police yesterday for violating the speed law. Each one had to deposit $100 in cash or its equivalent for his appearance in court this morning.

Sergt. Clark took in $1,020 in cash, besides gold watches and checks, which were deposited as security. The campaign was brought about by the reckless manner in which an automobile was driven in New Rochelle several weeks ago when it struck and killed two aged women of that city.

F. B. Kellogg, a New York publisher and a resident of Mount Vernon, Policeman Reilly says, covered a sixth of a mile in twenty-five seconds. The speed limit in Mount Vernon is ten miles an hour. Austin Morrison, Jr., a lawyer, who gave his address as 691 Fifth Avenue, was also arrested. He said the charge was preposterous, but he had to put up $20 and a $200 gold watch in order to get his liberty.

Others arrested said they were M. J. Dodge, a banker, of 128 East Fifty-sixth Street; Charles Liebler, P. H. Lucas, Mount Vernon; George A. Harris, manufacturer, of 506 Broadway; C. S. Peets, 110 West Eightieth Street; E. S. Benjamin, merchant, of 1,019 Madison Avenue; E. L. Walter, 145 West Ninety-second Street, and George F. Olt, bank clerk, of Mount Vernon.

Charles H. Paul, chauffeur for Lawyer H. T. Dyckman, son of the late Supreme Court Justice Dyckman, was also arrested. Mr. Dyckman, who was in the machine, left a $100 bill and had his driver released, remarking as he did so:

"We were not traveling seven miles an hour. We had our brake set, and I shall fight this charge to a finish."

P. H. Lucas was one of the auto drivers caught. He was notifying auto drivers of the police trap when he strayed into it himself.

In New Rochelle, where the police had two motor cycles, which could travel at the rate of fifty miles an hour, eleven motorists were caught. Each of them except two was fined $35 each. Those arrested in New Rochelle said they were Lewis E. Nagel of 83 West Ninety-first Street, W. F. Bietz, 131 West Ninety-sixth Street; A. E. Bechstein, 58 West Forty-seventh Street; Louis Duval, 226 West Twenty-fifth Street; William Watson, 354 West Fifty-sixth Street; William Totten, 114 West Thirtieth Street; J. F. Matthews, 690 Broadway; Andrew Bardier, 136 West Twenty-ninth Street; Henry B. Welsch, New Rochelle; Albert Olsen, Brooklyn, and W. Van Buren, Mount Vernon.

AUTO PARTY ARRESTED.

Policeman Says Noisy Occupants of a Car Tried to Run Him Down.

Michael Meeney, a chauffeur employed by the Northern Automobile Company in its garage, at 124 West Thirty-eighth Street, took six of his friends out Saturday night in a new car. At an early hour yesterday morning they were arrested at Fourteenth Street and Avenue B for creating a disturbance.

Patrolman McCarthy of the Union Market Station tried to stop them, and alleges that the chauffeur tried to run him down. The machinery broke and the car stopped before it reached him. McCarthy held his prisoners with his revolver until he could rap for help. Then he and another policeman made the prisoners push the disabled automobile to the station, ten blocks south. The men were arraigned in Essex Market Court later in the morning on charges of disorderly conduct and fined $3 each.

Would-Be Suicide Changed His Mind.

John Glover, 28 years old, a shoe salesman of 14 Powell Street, Marblehead, Mass., jumped off the ferryboat Chautauqua, of the Erie Railroad, as she was entering her slip at the foot of Chambers Street early yesterday morning. When a life preserver was thrown to him he grabbed it and hung on until rescued by two men in a boat. He refused to explain why he attempted suicide.

Mother Accidentally Kills Child.

Dr. W. H. Hartshorn of 200 West Fifty-seventh Street reported to the Coroner's Office yesterday morning the death of Alice Meceahon, five months old, of 417 West Fifty-third Street, by suffocation. The child's mother, the Coroner said, while asleep rolled upon the child and killed it.

DELEGATES DISAGREE ON THE DRAMA'S MERITS

Federated Union Split Over the Abolition of the Theatre of Labor.

VAUDEVILLE ACTORS OBJECT

Say the Theatre of Labor Is a Rival Institution—Organization Disbanded After a Heated Debate.

To the disgust of some of the delegates of the Central Federated Union the central body yesterday issued an order directing all delegates of unions in the central body affiliated with the "Theatre of Labor" to withdraw from that institution. Before the action was taken there was a heated discussion, in which the drama was discussed from various standpoints, especially from the standpoint of labor. Personalities were introduced, in spite of the Chairman's efforts to prevent them.

The "Theatre of Labor" was founded by Julius Hoppe for the production of labor plays. For some time meetings have been held weekly in the Berkeley Lyceum between the delegates who are in favor of the plan and Mr. Hoppe. The matter came up on a report of the Executive Committee of the central body, which had been instructed to investigate the Theatre of Labor. The committee reported that the theatre was inimical to labor, and the central body was recommended to direct delegates of all affiliated unions to withdraw from it.

A storm of opposition followed.

"We shall be acting like fools if we get out of this scheme," said Delegate Abrahams of the Pressmen's Association. "You see nothing at the other theatres but capitalistic plays. We want the dignity of labor upheld."

Delegate Henry De Veaux of the Actors' Protective Union, composed of vaudeville actors, said that the Theatre of Labor was an opposition body. It therefore should not be encouraged.

"When it comes to talent," he said, "our organization can provide all the talent that is necessary."

Abrahams said that it was all very well to talk of the Actors' Protective Union, but the Theatre of Labor was given over to the legitimate drama. This made a hit with the meeting. Abrahams denounced a play produced at an uptown theatre, which, he said, made the walking delegates of labor unions appear ridiculous and tyrannical. He declared that Richard Wagner was a friend of the working people and was a union man.

The delegate of the Ornamental Iron Workers, which is represented in the "Theatre of Labor," resented De Veaux's charges. He said that the Actors' Protective Union was very intolerant. Mr. Hoppe, he said, when he talked to the labor unionists, showed that the workingmen needed an institution for labor plays.

"I helped to investigate this matter," said Delegate Holland of the Eccentric Firemen's Union, "and we believe that Mr. Hoppe is a fanatic."

"There is no reason why we should not build a theatre of our own, and get union men to play," said Delegate Hanna of the Bluestone Cutters.

"I'll tell you what it is," said Michael Fitzgerald of the Letter Carriers' Union, "if any one wants to see a 'Theatre of Labor' he should be here now."

The personalities which followed were cut short by the Chairman, and the recommendation of the Executive Committee was adopted.

MEMORIALS TO COMMANDERS.

Governors Island Chapel to Have Several Stained-Glass Windows.

The new chapel now nearing completion on Governors Island, which will be the finest structure of the kind to be found on any Government reservation in this country, is to have several beautiful memorial windows, a number of which have already been offered by friends and relatives of officers, who, in their day, won distinction in the regular army of the United States.

One of the handsomest of the windows will be a memorial to Major Gen. and Mrs. Winfield Scott Hancock, the widow to be paid for by relatives of the old commander. Another window will be in memory of Major Gen. Daniel Butterfield. This window will be given by Gen. Butterfield's widow.

All of the windows will be made in London, John Hardman, of that city, having the contracts. The windows will cost a total of about $11,000.

We've prepared for the coming rush to the country with a generous stock of whipcord liveries.
Realizing that liveries must suffer constant exposure to rain, sun and dust, we use only fine all-wool fabrics which we can guarantee.
Our stand for serviceable materials at a fair price is evidently appreciated by those who in the past have had our clothing for their men servants, for though our livery customers already number more than eight thousand, the list is growing rapidly.
Price list on request, illustrating everything any sort of man servant wears.

COUNTY FAIRS LOSE RACING HUSH MONEY

Governor Vetoes Measure Providing Added Rake-Off.

DENOUNCES MOTIVES OF BILL

Handles Question of Race Track Gambling Without Gloves—To Name New Racing Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 23.—Senator Coggeshall's bill giving the agricultural societies of the State an extra rake-off from race track receipts was vetoed by the Governor to-night. The measure was the embodiment of an arrangement by which the Cassidy bill to prohibit race track gambling was allowed to die in committee.

In a memorandum giving his reasons for the veto, the Governor roundly condemns the practice of the race tracks giving hush money to county fairs, so that the tracks may keep up their evasion of the Constitution regarding gambling.

The statement of the Governor's attitude is believed to be fraught with particular meaning, as he said to-day that he would shortly appoint a new Racing Commission. It is generally believed that it will not be headed by August Belmont. He thus explains his veto.

"The present law provides for the division among agricultural fair associations of 3 per cent. of the gross receipts of the licensed racing associations in exchange for which the racing associations expect and receive the aid and support of many persons who are interested in agricultural fairs.

"This results in preventing the enactment of more rigid action to enforce the Constitutional prohibition of racetrack gambling. The amendment proposed by this bill takes for the same purposes a larger share of the gross receipts of running race meetings.

"The present law makes gambling on horse races outside of tracks of the licensed racing associations a felony, punishable by imprisonment in State prison for not more than two years, while the same act if committed on such race grounds is not a crime at all, but subjects the offender only to repayment of the money he has received on the bets.

"Race track gambling, while technically prohibited, is in fact fostered and encouraged and made a monopoly by law. If the present tax were expended for general purposes, the moral sense of the community would scarcely tolerate race track gambling, but the largess of a quarter of a million dollars, distributed annually among agricultural fairs throughout the State has created a selfish and unnatural community of interest which is to be deplored.

"The toleration by our people of this evasion in the spirit of constitutional prohibition against gambling is due in large measure to the method of distributing this tax. I feel that the State could better afford to make direct appropriations to support the agricultural societies than to perpetuate race track gambling by increasing or continuing the revenues derived by the agricultural societies therefrom."

Senator Cassidy to-night refused to comment on the message. He said he would have a conference with the Governor to-morrow on the subject.

WAITING FOR MITCHELL.

Scale Committee Ready to Make Report—Peace Sentiment Growing.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., April 23.—All interests in the anthracite region are now centred upon the coming of President Mitchell to this city to-morrow, and the meeting of the Scale Committee on Wednesday.

A number of the Scale Committee members, including the three district Presidents, Dettry, Nichols, and Fahey, arrived here to-day and are now busy making arrangements for the convention and the preparing of the reports of conditions in each district for President Mitchell. There is a marked desire for peace among them.

While far from satisfied with the final answer of the coal operators, some members believe that it will be wiser to accept the offer than to order a strike. They realize, they say, that the operators are well prepared for a strike; that they have coal enough stored for several months, and one of them who has made a thorough investigation of conditions, declared that it will require an eight months' strike to win from the operators this time. Some doubt whether the union can withstand a strike of that duration, and fear that if there is a strike and the union is beaten it will be annihilated.

TAFT ON SOCIALISM.

Warns Yale Men Against Joining "Class of Cranks."

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 23.—Secretary of War W. H. Taft delivered the first lecture in the Dodge Foundation course at Yale to-night, dealing with "the responsibility of citizenship." Mr. Taft treated the subject from the standpoint of the recent college graduate.

He began by praising the young man of independent means and good education whose patriotism led him to devote himself to public service, at the same time saying that the poor young man who has to earn his livelihood after getting out of college is more apt to take an interest in politics and to do his duty as a citizen.

Mr. Taft discussed in outline the position of the Government with regard to the management of business enterprises that are not strictly governmental. He cited the Post Office Department as an instance of invasion into the business field by the Government.

But although that entrance into a business field is an acknowledged success, Mr. Taft said he had scant sympathy for those among the college graduate class who are eager for a general socialistic scheme. Although that class seems to be increasing, he felt confident, he said, that it will pass away, like other classes of cranks.

TWO DEMOCRATS AS SPEAKER.

Littlefield Gave Chair to Them and House Machine Was Horrified.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The House to-day was treated to the novel spectacle of two Democrats acting as Speaker, one after the other. They were Fitzgerald of New York and Sullivan of Massachusetts. It came about not through any design of the House machine, to whom it gave scandalized horror, but because of the temporary appearance in the chair of Littlefield of Maine.

Littlefield is a Republican who has not been in favor with the Speaker and the House triumvirate because of his insurgent tendencies. Hence, although a first-class parliamentarian, he has seldom been invited to preside. To-day the Speaker decided to intrust him with the Chairmanship during the discussion of District of Columbia affairs, feeling sure that Littlefield could not do much harm on such a subject.

Presently the Committee of the Whole had to rise to receive a message from the Senate. Chairman Littlefield, in an off-hand way, announced, "The gentleman from Massachusetts will take the chair."

Sullivan, looking stunned, came forward, took the sacred gavel of Uncle Joe, and became, not Chairman, but Acting Speaker, for a few all too brief and halcyon moments. The Democrats wildly applauded, and the Speaker, Sereno Payne, and Dalzell looked on in incredulous horror at this desecration of the sanctuary.

Later Littlefield went out to luncheon and turned over the chair to Fitzgerald. For many pregnant minutes a Democrat sat in the chair and guided the destinies of the Nation. Littlefield only took some corned beef and cabbage and a piece of pie, so he was not gone long, but the Speaker, Payne, Dalzell, and Grosvenor shuddered continuously till he got back.

IT SNOWED YESTERDAY.

Hasn't Done So in Over 20 Years So Late in April—A Fine Sunset.

It actually snowed yesterday. Never since the year 1884 has snow appeared in April as late as the twenty-third day thereof. Flurries have occurred in May, but until this year the last ten days of April have always been snowless.

The weather man was asked what sort of a deal New Yorkers might expect for the rest of the week. He said:

"The present storm had its origin in Western New York and Pennsylvania, whence it has traveled toward the coast, and by Wednesday it will have disappeared over the Atlantic Ocean. It was colder in Pittsburg and Binghamton than here, the thermometer stopping just short of the freezing point in both places. During the noon hour yesterday the mercury in the city fell five points, and a similar drop may be expected to-day. No more rain is expected. Wednesday the cold spell will be over, and we shall probably have a good stretch of warm weather."

The sun dropped behind the Jersey hills last night a ball of deepest crimson, giving promise, to the unofficial forecasters at least, of fine weather to-day. It showed for only an instant, breaking through a mass of dark-gray clouds. Then the dark came down.

AUTO CRASH KILLS ACTRESS.

Harriet Waters, in Smashup with "Diamond Jim" Brady, Dead.

MINEOLA, L. I., April 23.—Miss Harriet Waters, an actress, who was injured in an automobile accident near Baldwins, on the South Shore turnpike, yesterday, died in the Nassau Hospital this afternoon. James B. Brady, sometimes known as "Diamond Jim" Brady, whose guest she was on the trip, will soon be able to be out. The other members of the party, Miss Edna R. Macauley, an actress, and Frederick Housman, a broker, were only slightly injured.

Assistant District Attorney Earl Bennett said to-day that he had investigated the accident and believed some one was at fault. The machine ran into a telephone pole after going down a steep grade at a rapid pace. All the occupants were thrown out except Hugo Dotzer, the chauffeur. Bennett said he would ask Coroner Remsen to arrest Dotzer.

Justice of the Peace Archer Wallace began an investigation yesterday, but the inquiry has been taken out of his hands.

ROOSEVELT TO MOTHERS.

President Breaks His Rule to Write to Georgia Congress.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 23.—A message from President Roosevelt to Mrs. Theodore W. Birney, President of the National Mothers' Congress, was read at the opening session of the Georgia Mothers' Congress here to-night. It follows:

> White House,
> Washington, April 16, 1906.
>
> My Dear Mrs. Birney: I believe so heartily in the Congress of Mothers that I will break through my rule of not writing such letters to wish you all possible success in your Mothers' Congress of Georgia, which is your native State and was the native State of my own mother. With all good wishes, believe me sincerely yours,
>
> THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The Georgia Congress, which will continue its session until Wednesday evening, began here this evening with a representative attendance from a number of Southern States.

REGICIDE OFFICERS RETIRED.

Action by King Peter Taken at Their Request, It Is Said.

BELGRADE, Servia, April 23.—There is good authority for the statement that Cols. Mashin, Poppovitch, Solarovitch, and Lazarevitch, and Major Kostich, all of whom were prominent in the plot against King Alexander and Queen Draga, have asked to be retired, and that King Peter has signed a proclamation complying with their request.

It is expected, therefore, that the present Cabinet, slightly modified, will retain office, and that diplomatic relations with Great Britain will be renewed.

There is an unconfirmed report that some sixty minor officers who were concerned in the plot also have consented to be retired.

Philadelphia Detective a Suicide.

PHILADELPHIA, April 23.—Harry Miller, a member of the city detective force and a son of the late Captain of Detectives Peter Miller, committed suicide to-day in Fairmount Park by shooting himself in the head.

MARION STORY, INSANE, SENT TO BLOOMINGDALE

Brother-in-Law of Emma Eames Suffering from Overwork.

A NOTED HORSE SHOW MAN

Taken to the Asylum from His Country Place in Westchester County — May Recover.

Marion Story, a brother of Julian Story, the husband of Emma Eames, the grand opera singer, and one of the best-known society men and horse show exhibitors in Westchester County, was committed to the Bloomingdale Asylum on Saturday last. He was declared insane by two physicians, one of whom was Dr. H. E. Schmidt of White Plains. County Judge Platt signed the committment.

Mr. Story was taken to the institution in a carriage from his country place, Brook Farm, at Rye. It is not known who applied for the order for the examination. The papers are not on file in the Westchester County Court House. Neither Dr. Schmidt nor any one connected with the case would discuss it.

It is said that in the opinion of Mr. Story's family his mental breakdown is but temporary, being due to overwork.

It is said that Mr. Story, who is a broker, has been very actively engaged in trading of late.

Mr. Story has been prominent in the Westchester and Newport social sets, and is a member of the American and Larchmont Yacht Clubs, the Apawamis Golf Club, the Westchester Horse Show Association, the Westchester Country Club, and other clubs.

About three years ago he captured a burglar who was in the act of ransacking his mansion and compelled him to surrender. With the assistance of the servants he then bound him hand and foot and took him to Port Chester in his automobile, where he turned him over to the police. The prisoner proved to be a former butler.

At Mr. Story's city address, 17 East Thirty-eighth Street, it was said last night that he had been in Westchester County since Easter Sunday, and it was understood that he was ill.

PASTOR SEEKS DIVORCE.

Rockefeller Church Minister Says Wife Joined Colored Community.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 23.—As the result of Mrs. Adelia Arnold's taking up Holiness religion and going, as he says, to live with a company of colored believers in Chicago, the Rev. I. R. B. Arnold, associate pastor with Dr. C. A. Eaton at the First Baptist Church, began suit for divorce.

The Rev. Mr. Arnold is in charge of the reform work among newsboys at the church in which John D. Rockefeller is interested. He and his wife were married in 1867. Of the thirty-nine years since eighteen have been happy, the minister says. The couple have five daughters, all adults now. Mrs. Arnold went to New York for a visit and there became acquainted with teachings which the clergyman calls "fanatical."

He has lost all his property, he says, in seeking to induce her to live with him, at one time selling a farm for $3,800 and giving her half. He found employment for his daughters, but she compelled the girls to abandon their work and go with her to reside with a company of colored people in Chicago, because, as she said, it was wicked to earn money or engage in any business.

POPULAR VOTE FOR SENATOR.

McCreary and Beckham to Abide by Result of Kentucky Primaries.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 23.—Kentucky will in all probability choose her next United States Senator by popular vote. Announcement was made to-day by Senator James B. McCreary, who is a candidate to succeed himself, that he and Gov. Beckham, who is to be his opponent, have agreed that their aspirations shall be submitted to the people.

The Governor will head the Administration ticket in the next Democratic primary, which will choose all State officials, while Senator McCreary will wage war on machine candidates all the way down the line.

The nominee in the primary will be confirmed by the Legislature, provided it is Democratic.

MUSTN'T ALTER FACES.

Commuters Who Take Off Winter Whiskers Get Warning.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 23.—Commuters who ride on the Pennsylvania Railroad between Wilmington and Philadelphia must not shave their beards if they have them, or grow them if they have them not. That is because one of the requirements which the commuters must meet is the placing of a photograph on tickets for the purpose of identification.

Recently several commuters cut off their Winter mustaches and beards, and this was met by a warning from the railroad to have new pictures taken at once, and not to offend again. The commuters will obey.

ROW OVER PRENTICE BILL.

It Amends Rapid Transit Act—Went Over Until To-day.

ALBANY, April 23.—Mr. Prentice of New York had a bill on the calendar to-night amending the Rapid Transit act. A. E. Smith of New York charged that it was designed to afford the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad access to the New York Connecting Railway, and thus with the Pennsylvania Railroad. This was not denied.

Mr. Prentice was called upon to explain his bill. The explanation was not adequate, and Mr. Palmer, leader of the minority, added further to Mr. Prentice's troubles by showing that the bill was so faultily drawn as to kill its prospects of passage.

Speaker Wadsworth came to Mr. Prentice's rescue and asked that he allow the bill to go over until to-morrow. This was done.

ANOTHER EARTHQUAKE

Felt in San Francisco Last Night—No Damage.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—A sharp earthquake shock was felt here at 10:39 o'clock to-night. (1:39 A. M. New York time.)

CADET SHIP SINKS, 35 LOST.

Hoodoo Belgian Vessel Goes Down in the Bay of Biscay.

LONDON, April 23.—The Count De Smet De Naeyer, a cadet sailing ship used by the Belgian Government for training officers for the Government service, foundered in the Bay of Biscay on April 18, with a loss of thirty-five lives, including the Captain and the officer commanding the cadets. The cadets included the sons of many prominent Belgians. Twenty-six survivors of the wreck were rescued by the French bark Dunkerque.

It is difficult to get precise details of the disaster, owing to the Dunkerque, which was proceeding to Hamburg, refusing information or the names of the survivors and also declining an invitation to land the survivors at Dover.

The Count De Smet De Naeyer was built at Greenock in 1904. It is alleged that she turned turtle when she was launched, necessitating alterations to improve her stability. Most of her officers resigned after her first voyage, declaring that she was still top-heavy. She started on her ill-fated second voyage April 11 and anchored off Flushing till Easter Saturday, when she was towed into the North Sea and started on her voyage for Australia. She encountered terrible weather in the Bay of Biscay, labored heavily, and foundered.

It is supposed that a boat or raft was launched and that by this means the survivors were rescued; but no details or list of survivors is obtainable. She was a full-rigged sailing ship 270 feet long.

RAIN DRENCHES HOMELESS HOST

New Misery Visited on San Francisco Camps.

RELIEF LEADER IS SHOT

Anger at Citizens Patrol Over a Killing.

FOOD FOR A WEEK ON HAND

Dynamite Corps Blows Down Walls and Ground Is Cleared —Bankers Prepare to Resume Business.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—Rain has added to the misery of the homeless hosts of San Francisco. Beginning at midnight last night it drenched thousands in the refugee camps who had little or no shelter. All during the morning the rainfall has continued at intervals, and many persons are in grave danger of illness in consequence.

In order to avert disease Mayor Schmitz has ordered the breaking up of the big camps, and as many people as possible are being sent out of the city free of expense. Barracks are being rushed for those who remain, and blankets, clothing, and medical supplies are coming in rapidly.

The food problem has been solved. A supply for a week is on hand, and the distribution has been reduced to a system that gives provision for every person in need.

Work is being pushed in the burned district. Soldiers were busy to-day blowing down walls and big squads of men were clearing up the débris. Bankers met and planned to resume business. There is plenty of money in the mint, and it will not be long before things are humming.

Major Gen. Greely took command of the military forces to-day. An incident that created a bad impression was the killing of Major Tilden, a leading relief worker, by citizen patrols because his automobile did not stop. Great indignation has been caused, but the patrols declare their challenge was unheeded.

Rain Falls on Homeless Ones.

A drenching rain fell upon San Francisco last night. From midnight until 3 o'clock it poured and drizzled at intervals, and after daylight there were more downpours, while a high wind added a melancholy accompaniment, whistling and singing about the camps and the ruins of buildings in the burned district.

Five days ago, when the fire was raging, the rain would have been regarded as a godsend. This morning it could be regarded in no other light than as an additional calamity. It meant indescribable suffering to the scores of thousands of people camped upon the naked hills and in the parks and open places in the city.

Few of the homeless ones were provided with waterproof covering. For the most part their only protection from the wet was a thin covering of sheeting tacked upon improvised tent poles. Through this the water poured as through a sieve, wetting the bedding and soaking the ground upon which they lay.

When it is understood that thousands upon thousands of delicately nurtured women and infants in arms and old and feeble people were in this plight, nothing need be added to describe the misery of their condition.

The downpour aggravated the already unsanitary conditions of the camps, and will doubtless add great numbers of pneumonia cases to those already crowding the regular and temporary hospitals of the city.

Rifles Open Inhospitable Doors.

What could be done was done by the guards in charge of the camps to relieve the distress. Whenever covering could be had for the women and children it was used. They were housed in cheerless churches, in garages and barns, and persons whose homes stood were called upon to take care of the unfortunates exposed to the storm. With few exceptions they responded readily to the new call made upon them. Where they did not the butt ends of rifles quickly forced a way through inhospitable doors.

While the storm has added to the difficulties of the general committee, especially of those having in charge the care of the sick, the sanitation of the city, and the housing of the homeless, it has been a spur to even greater efforts to bring order out of the chaos prevailing. Regular shelter tents will be provided, as well as cots standing off the ground. It is realized that these provisions are imperative.

After several hours of clear weather there was another precipitation at 8 A. M., and again at 9 o'clock the fall was resumed and continued at intervals throughout the day.

Of individual instances of suffering the number is legion, but one will tell the story of them all. About 4 o'clock, when the rain had been falling heavily for an hour, a middle-aged man, white-faced in his distress and fatigue, appeared at the headquarters of the committee. He had walked two miles from his camping place in the park to make an appeal for his suffering wife and little ones.

As he told of their distress tears coursed down his cheeks. His wife and children were, he said, without covering other than a sheeting over their heads, and were lying on the naked ground and their bodies protected only by a quilt and blanket, which, of his household bedding were all he had managed to save. These had quickly been soaked, and, while unwilling to complain on his own account, he could not bear to listen to the wails of his loved ones, and had come to ask aid.

The condition of the 3,000 persons camped in Jefferson Square was terrible. Not more than 5 per cent. had even an army tent, and makeshifts were constructed of carpets, bed sheets, and every imaginable substance. They were inadequate to keep out the heavy rain. Houses were engaged for these people as fast as possible.

At Fort Mason there was the least misery on account of the cold rain. About 8,000 persons are encamped there, and on account of the sandy and sloping ground sanitation is not bad. Fod is plentiful and of a fair variety. The health of the refugees at this place is as good as can be expected under the circumstances.

Guards Kill Major H. C. Tilden.

The most unfortuate incident growing out of the strict military patrol of the city was the killing early this morning of Major H. C. Tilden, a prominent commission merchant of this city, a member of Gov. Pardee's staff, and one of the foremost workers of the General Relief Committee. He was traveling in his automobile, and was shot down by members of the citizens' patrol.

There has been much feeling that irresponsible men, intrusted with the duty of keeping order, have used their guns recklessly, and this feeling has been greatly intensified by the death of Major Tilden. The men responsible for the shooting, however, say that they merely acted under orders, and that they shot because their challenge of the swiftly moving machine was disregarded.

Mr. Tilden, accompanied by R. G. Seaman, acting Lieutenant of the Second Company of the Signal Corps, and Hugo Altschul, a coachman, had taken his three children and a nurse from the Fourteen Mile House, where they had been stopping since the earthquake, to Menlo Park, where he had a Summer cottage. His automobile had been used as an ambulance in conveying sick and wounded to the hospitals, and the Red Cross flag was displayed on it. Besides this he had the Red Cross insignia on his right arm.

According to Seaman six men stood in the middle of the road at Twenty-second and Guerrero Streets, and separated when the car got within fifty feet of them. When the car was within ten feet of the guard, Seaman asserts, the men began shooting without warning or challenge and kept up firing after the car had passed them.

"The machine had gone about fifty feet past the patrol," said Seaman, "when it stopped suddenly. Tilden, who was operating it, fell toward me, saying: 'Well, they got me. They killed me.' He then dropped back in the seat and rolled out of the car.

"I sprang up and fired five shots in quick succession at those who were still shooting behind us. A doctor came running from a house near by, and, after examining Tilden, said he was dead. Several policemen came running up and arrested three of the men who did the shooting. The men were in khaki uniform."

The body of Tilden was placed in the car and taken to the Central Police Station, at Bush and Fillmore Streets. It was removed later to the Elks' emergency hospital, in Bush Street, between Fillmore and Steiner Streets.

Altschul's right cheek was swollen where one of the shots grazed it. Another ball pierced the seat and struck the back of Seaman, but its force was spent and it did no harm.

The three men under arrest are E. S. Boyneton, a telephone inspector in the employ of the Pacific States Telephone Company; George W. Simmons, and Malcolm Vance. They are all young men and members of the citizens' patrol. Boyneton declares that he did not see the Red Cross flag on Tilden's car, and when the latter did not stop when challenged he fired. The coachman in the car then began shooting, and Simmons and Vance replied. The men were taken by Chief of Police Dian in an automobile to Fort Mason and turned over to Gen. Funston.

A vigilance committee, the first organization of the kind since the early fifties, has been formed with Dr. Donald McCulloch Gedge as the chief. He fought in the French Army, the United States Navy, and China war. His chief of staff is ex-Auditor Harry Baehr. The headquarters of the committee is at 2,924 Steiner Street. One hundred and thirty persons have joined the organization. The committee has charge of the Golden Gate valley district, near the Presidio.

Chief of Police Dinan has issued an order to Police Captains instructing them, in view of the carelessness of persons to whom has been granted the privilege of carrying firearms, to make all persons discontinue carrying weapons, as they are unnecessary.

The Citizens' General Committee, of which the Mayor is presiding officer, to-day resolved to have withdrawn the entire force of State militia that has policed a large residence quarter for the last few days. A vote of thanks was tendered the Governor and the State militia. From this time on the city will be patrolled jointly by the police and the Federal troops.

Until a city prison is re-established all persons held on felonious charges will be taken to Fort Mason and turned over to the regular troops for safekeeping.

City Not Under Martial Law.

San Francisco is not under martial law, and has not been during the present disaster. There has been a general misunderstanding among the troops themselves. The report that Mayor Schmitz is at the head of all partolling and is merely assisted by the troops has been officially confirmed. The officers of the army have stated that they are working subject to any restraining order from the Mayor.

Almost all the stories of rash violence on the part of the troops are flimsy rumors. During last night's partoling many of the troops admitted to newspaper men who made the rounds among them that they did not know what their orders were or where they came from. It appeared all were using their own judgment.

The State militia said they were under the orders of the State militia Commander, but whether they are working in pursuance of orders or not they failed to recognize city passes, thereby causing much confusion and inconvenience to those who were engaged in relief work. The regular troops are working in accordance with instructions from the Mayor's Office. Consequently, they have been the salvation of the San Francisco patrol system.

Confidence has been restored. The assurance of insurance companies, the measures taken by the financial institutions, the prompt and reassuring words that have reached the business men of San Francisco from Eastern financial centres, all have dispelled the feeling of uncertainty.

Using Dynamite on Walls.

Throughout the great business quarter, where the devastation by fire was the most complete, dangerous walls were razed, buildings that had not been disintegrated by fire were inspected with a view of re-occupancy, and ground was cleared for the immediate construction of buildings in which to resume business at the earliest possible time.

The heavy rains of last night and to-day did not weaken the walls left standing in the burned area, according to the Building Commissioner. Menacing walls are blown down as fast as possible, and danger from them is decreasing every hour.

Gen. Funston placed his dynamite corps at the disposal of the Building Committee, and they are throwing down dangerous walls along Market Street. When this thoroughfare is safe the dynamiters will devote attention to side streets, keeping up the work until they have covered all the streets in the business quarter.

They will not touch walls standing back in lots, or any walls that have supports. These must be removed by the property owners. Neither will they dynamite bank buildings, as such explosions might play havoc with safes and vaults.

Legal business will be resumed to-morrow morning. All the Superior Judges will open their twelve departments in the Jewish Synagogue, California and Webster Streets. Criminal cases will have precedence. Probate matters will follow, and civil cases, such as damage suits, and divorces, will be reserved for the last place on the calendar. All trials that were progressing at the time of the catastrophe will be recommenced.

Expenditure of Relief Funds.

The Finance Committee, whose duty it is to expend the millions of dollars subscribed for the relief of the homeless sufferers in San Francisco, met this afternoon to determine how to use the contributions impartially for the relief of those who are deserving.

The committee of which James D. Phelan is Chairman will no doubt dispense all the money and supplies, but it will do its work through the regular army, and looking to that end, a conference will be held at Fort Mason to-morrow morning. At that meeting the State will be represented by Gov. Pardee, the army by Gens. Greely and Funston, and the Finance Committee by James D. Phelan, William F. Herrin, Garret McInery, and M. H. De Young.

At the meeting this afternoon it was proposed that all persons who have homes left shall be forced to pay for their provisions, and that only the actual sufferers shall get free food.

Food Force Week Ahead.

Food was never more plentiful in San Francisco than to-day, and the only trouble is its proper distribution. The Committee on Feeding the Hungry reports satisfactory progress in the huge task, and has already established fifty-two food stations where all the hungry may get rations. Besides the Government and the General Food Committee, which are doing heroic work, a large number of independent organizations are attacking the food problem.

It is hoped that the distribution of supplies will be systematized under one head in the course of a few days, so that there may be no conflict or duplication of effort. The Committee of the Whole has designated a sub-committee of seven, which is directing this work. Dr. Vorsanger is Chairman, with headquarters in the City Hall.

From all points news of approaching relief trains is coming in, and already sufficient provisions have accumulated at the Oakland pier to supply the needs of the city for more than a week. Plain food of every description is plentiful, and luxuries are beginning to arrive. A coffee famine was threatened last night, but to-day fresh consignments of this stimulant were distributed from almost every food depot.

Meat in Abundance on Hand.

There is an abundance of meats for stewing, but all the finer cuts are used at the hospitals. Immense cattle trains are coming from the prairies of the Southwest, and chickens and eggs are coming from near-by towns. The most pressing need is for vegetables.

The lines of applicants at the various food stations are blocks long, and remain so until closing time. Every one receives rations for a single person as many times a day as he or she may ask. The spirit of the people is buoyant in the face of distress, and neither disorder nor complaint is evident along the bread line. Volunteer distributers are issuing the provisions under military guard.

The committee has taken two main warehouses, and all provisions as they reach the piers are carted there. These are the J. Folger Building, Spear and Howard Streets, which stands intact, although in the burned area, and the Moulder Schoolhouse, Page and Gough Streets, which will supply that part of the residence quarter spared by the conflagration. Depots for Government supplies are at the Presidio, the Folsom Street dock, and Fort Mason.

Bankers Hold a Meeting.

Members of the San Francisco Clearing House Association met to-day at the residence of Mrs. Eleanor Martin. The association was in session for about an hour, but its plans were not in sufficiently settled form to be given out.

It was announced, however, that the association had passed a resolution upholding and commending the action of Gov. Pardee in declaring a legal holiday from day to day. The association regarded this as the best possible method of giving time to the banks to get their affairs into such shape that they may pay their depositors and meet other obligations without the trouble that would be likely to ensue if they were to be called on at the present time.

It was the general opinion that the banks would be able to meet all calls when the time comes to reopen their doors.

Harriman Pledges His Aid.

E. H. Harriman, President of the Southern Pacific Company, was present at the meeting. He expressed the deepest sympathy for those who had suffered through the disasters which have overtaken the city, but he was optimistic over the future. He said that San Francisco would rapidly recover from the serious blow that had been struck at its commercial life, and he announced his intention to remain in the city as long as his interests in the East would permit, and to do all that he could to help in the rebuilding of the city.

While the Clearing House Association was in session, representatives of the savings banks of San Francisco were meeting in another room of the Martin home to consider the affairs of the smaller institutions. The savings banks formed a temporary committee to handle the present crisis. The savings banks also decided to act in unison in the present situation.

Plenty of Money in the Mint.

One fortunate condition exists in San Francisco. There is an abundance of gold and silver coin available in the vaults of the United States Mint. It had almost completed its coinage for the fiscal year when the earthquake and fire came. The furnaces and grate chimneys will be ready to start up at an hour's notice if suitable power can be obtained, and it is possible that a speedy makeshift for power will be soon arranged.

In Dewar's maturity is added to purity. The King and the people praise Dewar's.—Adv.

Mr. Leach, Superintendent of the branch mint, said to-day:

"The mint is intact. No damage has been done to the inside, either by earthquake or fire. We are ready to resume business just as soon as the public wants us to do so. All of our men have been at their posts since Wednesday, ready to meet any demand, but the outside financial system is not in shape to use money.

"We have in the vaults of the mint an abundance of money; in fact, more than San Francisco needs. Secretary of the Treasury Shaw is fully alive to the situation, and has instructed me to turn over money to banking institutions whenever needed."

Federal Sub-Treasury Opens.

Sub-Treasurer Jacobs opened his office in the mint to-day. Until he can get his books and papers, the mint will make necessary transfers of money.

"Thus far we have had no demands for money," continued Supt. Leach. "We will give up our spare room for commercial purposes. I have conferred with all of the representative bankers and will continue to keep in touch with their needs. They desire to get everything in shape first. All that they ask from the Secretary of the Treasury is the prompt transfer of funds. One of the first things Secretary Shaw did was to instruct me to consult with the bankers and see what was needed."

A significant indication of the early restoration of law and order and safety is the fact that there is not a soldier or city police officer guarding the many millions of dollars in the vaults of the mint. Only the special police officers regularly connected with the building have been on duty since the first day of the fire. Officials of the mint say that the reports of the shooting and attempts to break in by looters were the purest nonsense.

Kept at Work While Fire Raged.

The only Government department in the San Francisco Custom House in which work has continued uninterruptedly is that of Surveyor of the Port Woodward. He and his Chief Deputy, Chauncey M. St. John, were at their desks by 9 o'clock in the morning of Wednesday, and remained there all day.

The fire crept up toward them from the water front and finally was on all four sides of the building. Amid the roar of the conflagration, the crash of falling walls and the excitement attending the work of the 150 sailors who saved the building, their work went on uninterrupted. Inspectors fought their way to the building, reported to Mr. St. John, and received further orders regarding their work along the water front.

It was a severe ordeal, but neither the Surveyor, his deputy, nor his Inspectors showed any inclination to abandon their posts until their day's work was done. They have kept at their work ever since.

The first vessel to clear from San Francisco since the fire was the Expansion, a small steam schooner, which received her papers to-day. She was laden with provisions for the cannery men at Bristol, and on that account was allowed to sail.

Bluejackets Unload Ships.

It was ascertained to-day that provisions have been hauled from along the water front to various distributing stations at the rate of 1,500 tons a day. Several hundred bluejackets from the cruiser Boston are unloading arriving vessels and loading the endless procession of wagons at the wharves. Ships that do not carry provisions are not permitted to dock. Vehicles of every description are used to carry the food.

On the water front there was an endless procession of carts and drays carrying rood to the scores of sub-stations.

Large supplies of blankets, tentings, and other material, to provide coverings for those who have been scantily supplied, are reaching the supply stations rapidly. Barracks have been completed at several points, and in these many people have found comfort and shelter against the inclemencies of the weather.

The situation in the congested camps, such as Golden Gate Park and the various public squares throughout the city, has been considerably relieved by the departure of many people for points on the other side of the bay. While the number of people leaving the city is nothing like the vast crowds that packed the ferry building during the first two days following the earthquake, the number was sufficiently large to satisfy the Relief Committee that its task will become less difficult from day to day.

No Sign of Contagion.

General health conditions are satisfactory. While the number of cases at the various hospitals has increased each day, sickness is mostly due to exposure and worry. The most encouraging feature is the absence of anything like contagion or an epidemic of disease of any nature whatever.

The somewhat unsatisfactory sanitary arrangements in the various camps, the lack of a variety in diet, and the exposed situation of so many people necessarily develops ailments; and in some places there have been a few cases of such diseases as measles and chicken pox, but probably not more than would develop under ordinary circumstances in a large city. The primary causes of disease are removed as fast as possible.

That the chances of an epidemic may be lessened, Gov. Pardee has issued an order that all large camps be broken up and separated into as small communities as possible.

Glenn A. Durston of the Spanish War Veterans' Relief Committee has immediate charge of this work. He said: "We are impressing every wagon we can lay our hands on. We have about ten wagons now in which we are hauling all who will go to the ferry station and sending them out of town."

Work in Temporary Hospitals.

Sanitary work is going forward as rapidly as possible. Many cesspools have been dug, and all refuse is hauled away and burned promptly.

The St. Paul's Lutheran Church, near Jefferson Square, is utilized as an emergency hospital. In the main auditorium about forty-five patients are lying on mattresses which have been spread on the floor. There are nineteen physicians and twenty-nine nurses in it. The patients are mostly suffering from exhaustion, nervous strain, or slight wounds.

The contagion hospital at Harborview Park, established for cases of measles, mumps, scarlet fever, and other contagious diseases, reports little business. What few patients they have are well along toward recovery and happy.

A permanent sanitary camp for the Chinese left in the city will be established immediately in the blocks bounded by Franklin and Octavia, Chestnut and Bay Streets. The camp will be laid out and constructed under the direction of the army engineers. The Government has supplied for this purpose 4,000 shelter tents.

A temporary detention hospital is established in the basement of the Sacred Heart school, conducted by the Dominican Sisters, at the corner of Fillmore and Hayes Streets. The sisters turned over a part of the already crowded quarters to the Insanity Commissioners, and many patients are already housed there.

BIG CAMP AT RACE TRACK.

Followers of the Horses Sent Away—Escapes of Bookmakers.

EMERYVILLE, Cal., April 23.—Shellmound Park and the race track have been transformed into one big camp for the refugees.

Hundreds of track followers are being shipped from Emeryville to outside points. Horsemen who saved any money have not hesitated to divide with the less fortunate. John Lyons, a bookmaker, drew $7,000 from one of the San Francisco banks before it closed, and has provided living expenses for many of the track followers left penniless.

George Rose, a bookmaker, and principal owner of the Ascot Park track, Los Angeles, escaped in pajamas and slippers. He hastily gathered all his most valuable belongings in a barrel and rolled the barrel for over a mile to a place of safety.

"Billy" Jackman, a New York bookmaker, was enjoying an automobile ride during the earthquake, and was hurled high into the air. The frightened chauffeur raced away, leaving Jackman standing dazed in the midst of falling buildings. He escaped without serious injury.

"Art" Newman, horse owner, with Mrs. Newman and Jockey Preston, was at the Terminus Hotel. After the shock Newman and Mrs. Newman and the boy jumped to an adjoining roof and made their way over fallen timbers and plaster to a place of safety. They went at once to Oakland.

Barney Schrieber, bookmaker and horse owner, escaped with his bank roll and without a scratch. W. I. Engstrom and A. B. Stemster at once busied themselves in rescue work. Engstrom dug ditches and Stemster put in a day tossing brick.

The horse MacGraine and a filly, sister to Yellow Tail, were at the track at the time of the earthquake. MacGraine ran away and was slightly injured. The filly threw her boy, and ran into a post and was killed. As soon as possible all horses which were not shipped East will be sent to Seattle.

OAKLAND AIDS BUSINESS MEN.

Banks to Open There—Telegraph Supplies on Hand.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 23.—The City Council has opened West Oakland Park to the manufacturers and merchants of San Francisco who lost buildings and goods in the fire. Those firms will be permitted to erect temporary buildings for the transaction of business. No charge will be made for this public ground, which is about ten acres in extent. San Francisco banks are getting temporary banking rooms in Oakland.

Councilman Fitzgerald to-day advised Gov. Pardee that 500 plumbers to-day went to San Francisco to fixe gas and water pipes. These plumbers are residents of various California cities.

C. B. Stewart, Labor Commissioner of the Western Pacific Railroad, to-day telegraphed from Oroville that he could give steady employment to 3,000 men on the railroad. Some 1,500 men also can have work on Western Pacific Railroad construction near Oakland.

Newsboys are reaping a harvest, many of them clearing $30 a day. The line of newsboys in front of The Oakland Tribune office every day is two blocks long, and places near the door are readily sold to boys who arrive later and do not want to wait for their papers. So numerous are the boys and so anxious to get stocks that two militiamen are required to each newspaper office to keep order.

HOST GOING TO LOS ANGELES.

Preparations Made to Care for 50,000 Refugees from San Francisco.

LOS ANGELES, April 23.—A camp of tents is being rapidly erected at Agricultural Park by the local Relief Committee, for the accommodation of the hosts of San Francisco refugees, who are arriving by the hundreds. Their number is expected to reach almost 50,000 within ten days.

Probably 5,000 have already arrived in Los Angeles. On one Southern Pacific train there was a total of 800 passengers, and it was stated that there was scarcely a fare paid on the train. Many persons were coming to homes of relatives and friends in this city, but temporarily were without funds and were compelled to accept free transportation.

Plans are being perfected for the housing, clothing, and feeding of those who arrive here, and large sums of money and trainloads of provisions are still being sent at intervals for the relief of the sufferers in San Francisco. The city has subscribed $500,000 cash and provisions for use in the north, and this will be greatly augmented by the local relief fund.

The steamer State of California arrived at Port Angeles last night. She brought many passengers from the stricken city, as well as a lot of freight. Myron Hume, one of the passengers, credits Capt. Thomas of that vessel, Capt. Alexander of the steamer Santa Rosa, and the Captain of the ferryboat Ukiah with the saving of the San Francisco water front. Lines of hose were laid from the steamers, and skippers and passengers made a gallant fight.

The State of California also brought news of two steamers wrecked at the Union Iron Works in San Francisco. One was the Columbia, a big passenger boat, which was on the ways. The earthquake caused her to topple off and roll over on her side. She was practically wrecked.

The steamer City of Puebla was lying at the dock there, when a huge crane falling struck her and smashed her so that she sank.

Mrs. George C. Perkins, Miss Marie Perkins, Miss Katie Fink, and Miss Clara Callaghan are at the Los Angeles Hotel. They came from Oakland. Mrs. Perkins is the wife of United States Senator George C. Perkins of California. She was in a very nervous condition from her earthquake experience. Before she left she turned the family mansion in Oakland over to twenty friends as a refuge.

Gen. M. H. Sherman, a prominent local capitalist and Vice President of the Los Angeles-Pacific Railroad Company, has returned to Los Angeles from San Francisco. He left this city last Wednesday morning on a special train, and took the members of the Supreme Court, who had been holding court in Los Angeles. Gen. Sherman sought his wife, daughters, and nieces, and the Justices of the Supreme Court had like missions.

"The saddest experience of all fell to Justice Shaw," said Gen. Sherman. "The apartments at which Mrs. Shaw was stopping had gone down in the flames, and the only information that he could get was that she had taken a few of her belongings and gone away. Justice Shaw searched the burning city, now afoot, now in a vehicle, but only once did he find trace of his wife. That was when, inquiring at random, he found that she had mingled for a time with the unhappy refugees in one of the parks."

Justice Henshaw found his family at Redwood City, thirty miles away. Justice Lorrigan found his family at San José. Chief Justice Beatty found his wife in San Francisco. Associate Justice and Mrs. McFarland found their daughter at their San Francisco home. Gen. Sherman and his son Robert found all well at the family's home on Vallejo Street.

TRAINLOAD IN PORTLAND.

Anywhere to be Out of the Hell That Was San Francisco, Says One Man.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Oregon, April 23.—"God bless the people of Portland," murmured a little girl, well nigh exhausted by hunger and loss of sleep, when she was placed in the motherly care of the women who met the several hundred refugees who arrived at the Union Station this afternoon from San Francisco. More than half of them were destitute. All those so situated are being cared for by the relief committee, and will get food and lodging until they can communicate with friends or relatives.

Some of the fugitives were persons of means before the great calamity, but now they have nothing but the clothes they have on their backs. Among them are a few negroes and Chinese, but none of the latter applied to the relief committee. They were met and taken in charge by their countrymen in Portland.

The refugees are stunned and bewildered. Some of them had not eaten for hours, and were almost famished. They consisted mostly of whole families. Those who had become separated from their relatives have nearly all remained in San Francisco. The men looked haggard and showed signs of suffering both mental and physical; the eyes of the women were red with weeping.

A few are cheerful in the face of great adversity. One party carried all they possessed in a blanket, the corners of which had been fastened together.

"Who could have imagined that we would be brought to this?" the man said. "Only last week my wife and myself had nearly all the heart could wish for. Now we have absolutely nothing. I do not know what we shall do or where we shall go, but we wanted to get away from the hell that San Francisco proved to be. I suppose, though, that we shall go back there in time. Our house is gone, we still have the property on which it stood. I suppose I can secure employment. We have been treated like members of a long-lost family by the people here, and mere words cannot express our gratitude."

"My husband is dead, and about all we had in the world was our home," said a mother with a little girl. "We have friends in San Francisco, it is true, but it will be weeks before we will be able to communicate with them. Meantime I must get work."

These two were taken by a woman to her home. She says she will take care of them until they recover from their experiences, and will then assist them in finding employment.

A little boy, not more than 10 years old, was seen clinging to his mother and father. He was carrying a baseball glove. Besides the clothing they were wearing this was all the family had saved. The father said the boy risked his life to get the baseball glove. A little girl about 14 years old was carrying two large pictures. She and her parents had saved nothing else. The pictures had been given to her as Christmas presents, and she refused to let them go, although they had proved a hindrance to the family.

Not a few of the women carry young babies in their arms. A young woman had an eye injured by an explosion of dynamite when the firemen were blowing up a building. She made light of it.

"If you could have seen the mangled men, women, and children that I did you wouldn't think this was anything," she said to woman who wanted to take her to a physician to have her eye dressed again. "This is nothing at all; it is a mere scratch."

She told of seeing a woman killed who had twin babies in her arms. The woman had been pinned down by a huge piece of timber. This girl took the babies from her arms just as she died. They were given to a nurse at a hospital.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN IN SPEEDING TRAINS

Supplies Being Rushed West—Homeless Coming East.

NO CARFARE IS NEEDED

First Free Harriman Train Reaches Ogden—All Conditions of Men Crowd Overland Limited.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, April 23.—The Union Pacific and Burlington Railroads are smashing all records for fast running and handling traffic, with the facility with which they are speeding the San Francisco relief trains across the country. The six specials from Chicago handled over the Burlington made faster time to Denver than do the regular passenger trains. The Union Pacific took the trains at Denver.

Small towns in Nebraska sent two trains of provisions West to-day. Fourteen cars of canned meats, rice, and dry goods from Chicago went West this afternoon on a special. Thirteen cars of assorted supplies from New York made up a Union Pacific special this morning. Denver sent a special train of fourteen cars of canned meats.

Forty cars making up three trains, consisting of general supplies and provisions, from Philadelphia and Pennsylvania cities, followed each other at intervals of thirty minutes out of Omaha to-day. Three cars of water wagons from the Government stores were sent West to-night.

The Rock Island carried two specials of provisions from Iowa West. A Government train of seventeen cars from Jeffersonville, Ind., is on the way West. A special train of soldiers and hospital nurses from Philadelphia is crossing Wyoming. One car of Government stores caught fire and burned at Tipton, Wyo., to-day. The train was saved.

Eastbound Union Pacific trains loaded down with refugees from San Francisco are running in from three to five sections, with every section filled. The Overland Limited, supposed to be for first-class paying passengers exclusively, is filled with people holding passes, second-class tickets, first-class tickets, and every form of transportation. The trains are so crowded with passengers that all are requested to "double up" on sleepers and take bedfellows.

Every passenger can report some thrilling, hairbreadth escape, either of himself or of friends. According to some of these stories, the loss and damage are not confined to San Francisco, but extend more than 100 miles southward. The great loss at San Francisco has so eclipsed the smaller cities that the latter have been overlooked.

The Destitute Ride Free.

E. H. Harriman has issued orders that all destitute persons shall be brought back from California without charge, and has appealed to the people all along the railroad to bring provisions and clothing to the stations to succor the load of homeless and stricken passengers.

The first of these trains on which all passengers ride free reached Ogden to-day at noon, having on board 500 San Francisco survivors. This train is due to arrive in Omaha on Tuesday afternoon.

Citizens of the small towns along the way in Nebraska and Wyoming are to-night preparing to feed these 500 people and to give them such clothing as they can find.

Supt. Park of the Union Pacific announced to-night that 163 of these passengers would go East over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul from Omaha, and the Northwestern would take 175. Forty-six belong in Omaha and 58 in Kansas City.

The Harriman lines are preparing to run these free trains just as frequently as is possible until all the destitute people return from the coast. The eastbound rate on men with small means has been cut in half, so that this class of passengers will be able to reach home at small expense.

One Woman's Experiences.

One woman in a car arriving to-night escaped with a child of five years from the Occidental Hotel in her night dress, with bedroom slippers and such garments for herself and the child as she could grab in her haste to reach safety. The plastering of her sleeping room fell on her bed and cut a gash in her forehead. All Wednesday she and her child sought safety.

All Wednesday night she and the little one were out of house and home. Finally, by making a long detour, she succeeded in crossing the bay to Alameda, and by almost superhuman exertions got a berth in the sleeping car and came home—a nervous wreck from her awful experiences.

This case is one of thousands, for the city was full of Eastern people making their last visits in San Francisco before journeying homeward.

OGDEN, Utah, April 23.—A train containing 644 refugees reached Ogden to-day. They are being fed by the local relief committee.

The mental strain of the fleeing terror-stricken people is best illustrated in the misfortune of Mrs. Ida Reed. She arrived in Oakland apparently of sound mind, but when the tension of the scenes was relieved by a realization that she was safely on the train bound East, her mind gave way. She is detained in the city jail. Her destination was Waverly, Iowa. Her ten-year-old son is being cared for by the relief committee.

Like an Army's Flight.

The flight of the refugees can only be likened to that of a retreating army. The people arriving to-day apparently were driven from their homes without time to clothe themselves properly. Some are hatless and coatless, and others are garbed in misfits given by the relief committees between Oakland and Ogden. They all have the same story of horror to relate, and their one desire is to get as far away from the scenes of their misfortunes as possible.

Nearly all the refugees on this train are bound for Chicago. Individual lunches for 563 persons were handed out here, each lunch being placed in a cardboard shoe box. Then the distressed people were marshalled in front of improvised counters on which cups of steaming coffee were awaiting them. The children were provided with milk, and special thought was given to the babies. For these there was bottled milk. Eighty-one of the passengers were provided with means to pay their own way, and they remained in the cars or went to restaurants.

En route from Oakland the refugees were organized into committees and leaders selected to direct them on their journey East. Sixty of them go East over the Rio Grande. The others had a special Union Pacific train leaving here this afternoon.

The second insane person to be taken from one of the refugee trains is H. H. Hearsfield. He was accompanied by his wife. They then went on their way to Denver.

A second train load of 400 persons arrived to-night and were fed by the relief committee. Two more train loads of refugees are expected to-morrow.

THE DAMAGE AT STANFORD.

Church, Library, Gymnasium, and Museum All Beyond Repair.

PALO ALTO, Cal., April 23.—Little destruction was in evidence on the campus of Stanford University to-day. Students still lack funds. No one is allowed on the campus without a pass. Workmen are clearing away the débris of the memorial church. Most of the campus dwellings have been repaired. President Jordan said to-night:

"The university authorities will begin to repair the quadrangle, laboratories, and dormitories. The Memorial Church will be sheltered to prevent further injury. Work in all classes will begin on Aug. 23.

"It is unlikely that any attempt will be made to restore the Memorial Church, the Memorial Arch, the new library, the gymnasium or the museum of the university. There is little doubt that the dormitories will be crowded next year as usual.

"The gymnasium and the library were destroyed, nothing but skeletons of twisted steel remaining. The loss will be $500,000 on each. The Memorial Church is merely a frame, the mosaic work being torn down. The top of the 80-foot-high memorial arch is on the ground, a heap of ruins. The original quadrangle is but little damaged. The rare specimens from Egypt are lost in the museum, which was only partly destroyed.

"The fraternity lodge and Chi Psi Hall are a total loss. The engineering buildings are partly demolished. Encina Hall, where 200 boys stayed, was shaken, and a large stone chimney crashed through the four floors, burying Student Hanna of Bradford, Penn. He was the only student killed. About twelve others were slightly hurt. Roble Hall, the women's dormitory, escaped without a scratch."

The damage at Palo Alto City amounts to $200,000. San Mateo suffered more than Palo Alto.

The Redwood City jail was torn down and all the prisoners escaped.

There was severe damage at Menlo Park. Burlingame suffered a loss of fully $100,000. Fireman Otto Gordes was killed in the power house at Palo Alto. All the towns mentioned are without light or power.

RUHLMANN SLEPT THROUGH.

Waked Three Hours After Shock—Opera Company at El Paso.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, April 23.—The special train containing the bulk of Herr Conried's opera company passed through El Paso at midnight last night. Where ten cars were required to transport their costumes and other baggage to the Pacific Coast, a single car sufficied to carry all the baggage which was saved, and without crowding.

As far as Los Angeles the company was carried "C. O. D." by the railroad. Except for what little money a few of the singers saved they were penniless, and were able to get no funds until they reached Los Angeles, where banks honored their drafts on New York.

"The loss to the company was $250,000 in scenery and personal effects," said Max Hirsch, the Treasurer. "Advance sales of tickets amounted to $150,000, which must be returned if the tickets are presented for refund. Salary loss for the fruitless trip, and cost of special transportation will probably bring the total to $500,000."

"I was one of the most fortunate," said Van Roy, the singer, "because I saved what clothes I had at the hotel in San Francisco."

Fred Ruhlmann and Director Castelbert shared a room in the hotel. Ruhlmann slep soundly through the earthquake, not awakening until 8 A. M.

"I am a notably good sleeper," said Ruhlmann. "Once, on board the steamship City of Rome, I did not wake until nearly all the passengers had been taken into lifeboats, and I was able to walk calmly to my place. I saw horrors enough as it was. I saw a man pinned under burning timbers. He implored people to shoot him. One man stepped up and cut the veins in his wrists, and the dying man blessed him."

"Describe the horror of fire—how can I?" asked Miss Marie Rappold. "Words never were made that could tell its awfulness. I can more easily tell you how I slept in a park two night and acquired a cold which bids fair to ruin my voice. I finally gained passage to the ferry in a coal wagon."

Robert Blas saved his trunk by dragging it down three flights of stairs. Miss Jane Freund narrowly escaped injury by falling walls in the room which she occupied at the Netherlands. Her trunk was buried beneath the débris, and she lost everything.

STUDENTS AS NURSES.

University of California a Big Red Cross Institution.

BERKELEY, Cal., April 23.—This morning, when there were prospects of inclement weather, arrangements were made to throw open more of the University buildings and private houses in Berkeley.

The camp that was established on the baseball field is being removed to California Field, the University's athletic field, where board floors are being provided for tents.

Hearst Hall, one of the largest buildings of the University campus, is being used as a hospital, and scores of college girls have donned Red Cross uniforms and are doing fine work as nurses. Many men students are also doing Red Cross work. Harmon gymnasium is being used as a great indoor recreation place, and the physiological laboratory has been converted into a dormitory.

FREE BUILDING MATERIAL.

Bills Introduced to Take the Duty Off Supplies for 'Frisco.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Representative Madden of Illinois offered a resolution to-day taking the tariff from structural steel for the rebuilding of San Francisco.

Representative Gaines introduced a bill admitting free of duty all goods, wares, or merchandise which may be imported into the United States as gratuitous contributions for the relief of earthquake sufferers in California. The bill further waives duty on building materials imported for San Francisco.

At the suggestion of Secretary Shaw, Mr. Knowland of California introduced a bill providing that imported provisions and other supplies used by or through the military or civil authorities for the relief of the sufferers from the recent earthquake and fire in San Francisco shall be exempt from the payment of duties.

LOS BANOS'S LOSS.

Earthquake Damage of $150,000 in This California Town.

LOS BANOS, Cal., April 23.—The earthquake destroyed the principal business part of this town. The bank building, which contains the bank, a store, and many offices, was badly damaged. Hotel Los Banos, a three-story brick structure, was badly broken up. The school buildings and churches sustained heavy damage.

A conservative estimate places the total damage here at $150,000.

LONDON, April 24.—The Wellington, New Zealand, correspondent of The Times telegraphs that both of the Eastern Company's cables between New Zealand and Australia suddenly broke on Monday, the supposed result of submarine disturbances.

TRANSFER $4,500,000 MORE TO THE COAST

That Makes $15,000,000 That Has Been Sent by Local Banks.

TO AID CALIFORNIA BANKS

Large Sums Are Also Being Sent by Express—Transfers Will Be Made Indefinitely.

Transfers through the Sub-Treasury yesterday to San Francisco and other cities and the direct shipments by banks to Pacific Coast towns amounted to about $4,500,000. To San Francisco direct, through the Sub-Treasury, there was transferred $1,700,000, and $200,000 was transferred through that institution to Chicago, and $100,000 to New Orleans. In addition the Sub-Treasury received $500,000 for transfer to Denver. This last amount was accepted conditionally, owing to the fact that special arrangements had to be made for the transfer to that place.

The transfers made to Chicago, New Orleans, and Denver were said to be indirectly for the assistance of the banks in California, the money being sent from New York to place funds previously shipped from the interior cities to the Pacific Coast.

Large sums were also sent west by express, the amount forwarded in this way being estimated at about $2,000,000. This brings the total money forwarded yesterday to the Pacific Coast, either directly or indirectly, up to about $4,500,000. Since Wednesday last, when San Francisco's disaster began, the New York banks have forwarded by express and through the Sub-Treasury about $15,000,000. Bankers expressed the opinion that in all probability further large sums would have to be sent to strengthen the California banks, so they can reopen for business. After these needs have been met transfers will be made indefinitely, so as to forward to the Pacific Coast the relief funds which have been collected here and in other Eastern cities.

The Sub-Treasury received yesterday about $4,000,000 of American gold coin, which arrived from Europe on Saturday's steamer.

This amount was paid to the Government, reducing by so much the special deposits of Government funds made with the National banks ten days ago against gold imports.

Dispatches from London, received in the financial district yesterday, announced the withdrawals of considerable sums of gold for export to New York. So far as was known here, however, these were not fresh engagements, but merely withdrawals against engagements announced last week. Foreign exchange rates were firm yesterday, demand sterling advancing in the afternoon to 4.8440. The advance in exchange was due, at least in part, to the absence of the large quantity of stock bills which served to depress exchange last week.

The stock market yesterday continued very active, and prices broke sharply under renewed heavy liquidation. Declines of from 1 to 4 points occurred in many of the active stocks, those in no wise directly connected with the loss at San Francisco suffering as much as others. Part of the liquidation which resulted in this decline was believed to represent sales by the fire insurance companies.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Secretary Shaw has given directions that $15,000,000 of public money be distributed among the National banks of San Francisco and immediate vicinity, which will include Oaklanl, as soon as the banks furnish satisfactory security.

NO LIMIT ON BANK LOANS,

Secretary Shaw Says—He May Go to San Francisco Himself.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 23.—Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury, arrived in Chicago to-day and repeated the statement made in New York on Saturday that there will be no limit on the amount of money which may be borrowed from the National Government in the reconstruction of San Francisco.

"I found that the $10,000,000 placed at the disposal of Pacific Coast banks was merely a drop in the bucket to what will be needed," said Secretary Shaw in his room in the Auditorium Hotel to-night. "As time passed the conditions seemed to be worse, and I finally decided to put no limit on the amount of money the Government will loan for the rebuilding of the city.

"Of course, it is not in the Government's power to be benevolent in this regard, but it will cost nothing for exchange. The money may be borrowed in New York, and will be paid out of the Mint at San Francisco.

"I do not intend to go to San Francisco at once, having a representative there, but I may make the trip later. It has been arranged that the San Francisco Sub-Treasury will be in the United States Mint there, and within a short time the Government's loans will be handled from there.

"Arrangements have to be made almost immediately for rebuilding the Government buildings in San Francisco. I am going to present the matter to Congress within a short time, so that appropriations may be made immediately for the purpose. We hope to rebuild completely, so that the departments will be as well housed as they were before the earthquake and fire. It is a matter of great satisfaction to us all to see the country respond so quickly with millions of dollars for the sufferers in the West. It was a terrible thing, but everything possible is being done in the way of aid."

It was learned to-day that the Chicago Sub-Treasury will be instrumental in transferring $1,000,000 gold to San Francisco via Denver. The Secretary of the Treasury has authorized the acceptance of securities to the amount of $1,000,000 in the local Treasury, thus enabling this sum in gold to be sent from Denver to San Francisco.

The Continental Bank here has already transferred about $2,000,000 in gold to Los Angeles to be delivered at San Francisco. San Francisco banks had several millions on deposit in Chicago. The amount already sent was transported unsolicited. In fact, Chicago bankers, like those of Los Angeles, have not yet been able to communicate with the city.

REFUGEES NOW ARRIVING HERE

Star Opera Singers Tell About the Disaster.

JACOBY WALKED MILES

Had a Perilous Ride with Two Drunken Drivers.

"CARMEN" SLIPPERS ON

Fremstad Saved a Bouquet When She Left Her Hotel—Stories of Arriving Survivors.

The first women survivors of the San Francisco disaster to arrive in New York were Miss Olive Fremstad and Miss Josephine Jacoby of the Conried Metropolitan Opera Company, and Miss Fremstad's maid. They arrived at the Grand Central Station at 10:15 yesterday morning.

Miss Fremstad told of her experiences after she had gone to the Metropolitan Opera House.

"All of the opera company, with the exception of Mme. Fremstad and Mme. Eames," said Miss Jacoby, "were staying at the Palace Hotel. When I awoke at 5:18 on Wednesday morning I thought I was dreaming. The bed was jumping all over the room; the pictures were swaying on the walls; the toilet articles were clattering on the floor, and plaster was showering from the roof. Thinking I was suffering from nightmare, I rushed to the window for a breath of fresh air. Then I knew something was wrong, for the buildings were swaying, and when they stopped they were all out of plumb. The Call Building in particular was sticking out at quite an angle over Market Street.

"I didn't wait, but ran downstairs clad in robe de nuit. On the street there was panic. Fire engines were clattering and clanging everywhere; the sidewalks were covered with débris, and here and there men and women were staggering to their feet, many of them sinking back on their knees, apparently stunned. Everywhere the eye turned there were flames breaking from buildings. Then there was another shock and I covered my eyes.

"It is a fact that we strangers to the city were terrified by the earthquakes, while the San Francisco people seemed to pay not the slightest attention to them. On the other hand they were terribly alarmed about the fire, which did not frighten us much. When the second shock passed the manager of the hotel said he thought it would be safe for us to go back and pack our trunks.

Wore Her "Carmen" Slippers.

"I had only got my feet into the slippers I had worn the night before as Mercedes in 'Carmen,' and was beginning to throw a few things into my trunk, when the telephone bells rang and we were all told to get out of the hotel quickly. I snatched up a traveling costume, which had been covered with plaster, and ran downstairs. When I had found a place to dress in I was told that the employes of the hotel had removed as much baggage as possible to the Hotel St. Francis. You know what happened to it and the St. Francis.

"I found Signor Caruso, Herr Dippel, Mme. Sembrich, and some others in Union Square. I can tell you we were all pretty scared. We sat on the grass there and—yes, I will confess that we were all holding on to the ground with our fingers—and watched the flames eating their way through the city and the great buildings collapsing with a roar as the dynamite exploded beneath them. It was a terrible sight.

"Then the sun came up. It was a deep cardinal in color, and as the day progressed it turned to a sickly hue that will always be associated in my mind with earthquakes and people running for their lives. As the situation grew worse and one felt that one must run or go mad our party broke up. Some said they were going to Golden Gate Park, others hired a carriage and drove to the sand hills. I have learned since that some of them woke up in a carriage on the hills next morning, and that Mr. Hertz found himself in the Zoo. The last I saw of Signor Caruso he was driving away in an express wagon, talking incomprehensible instructions in Italian to the teamster. Even in that terrible hour I could not help being a little amused at the tenor's earnestness and the teamster's amazement.

Little Supe Helped Her.

"One of the supes of the opera company—quite a little boy—came to me and, pulling my sleeve, said:

"'Miss Jacoby, you come with me. I know a place.'

"He took me block after block to the house of some friends of his. The house seemed at that time out of the zone of fire. But the way seemed miles long and full of terror inconceivable. There were dead people lying in the gutters and blazing buildings everywhere. Thousands were running, and everybody was shouting, so that we could not distinguish what was meant when the soldiers yelled to us to go back. As we didn't pay any attention we were nearly killed by getting too close to a building which crumbled like a castle of cards with a crash and a cloud of white smoke.

"The house we came to was a kind of club, I think. There I met Miss Weed and her maid. We did not think of going inside, but sat hour after hour on the stoop. Night came on, and the fire seemed to be growing. We knew it was night only by the time, but otherwise it was no different from the day. The sun had long been blotted out, and a drab pall lay close down over San Francisco. It looked like a smoky roof when the flames lit it up.

"It must have been late in the evening when the fire began to come near us. The other people in the house said they were going to another house. Miss Weed, her maid, and I decided to make an attempt to get to Oakland. We started and walked miles and miles trying to find a way to the ferry without going through the burning district. But we couldn't get away from it. The memory of it is just a confused picture of black and red and drab: streets interminable, all ablaze; dead and wounded in the streets; grimed and blood-stained men, women, and poor little children running aimlessly about, and everywhere Chinamen, all pallid with fright.

Drunken Teamsters Took Them.

"We tried to get some conveyance, but those who had their sense of self-preservation about them refused. We practically owe our lives to a couple of teamsters who were too drunk to care what happened to themselves. But what a time we had with them.

"They invited us into their wagon and promised to drive us to the ferry. We got in. There were no seats, so we crouched in the bottom. The teamsters, who were hardly able to guide the horses, seemed to take a savage joy in seeing the worst of things. They repeatedly stopped to admire a bigger blaze than usual or the dynamiting of a building, and seemed surprised that we lacked appreciation.

"Finally they drove down a steep hill at terrific speed, saying something about 'shooting the chutes,' and both of them fell asleep on one another's shoulders at the bottom of the hill. We got out and found that the ferry was only nine blocks away. We got there and found thousands waiting to get out of the city. We were swept aboard the boat, quite off our feet, and nearly crushed to death. There were twice the legal number of passengers aboard that ferryboat, but laws were all in abeyance for the time.

"I don't know how that boat ever arrived at Oakland without sinking or capsizing. But we got there, and, to the surprise of everybody, that ghastly hued sun came out of the east again. The night had passed like an hour, and yet again it was like a year. At 11:30 on Thursday morning we pulled out in the Overland Limited. There were all sorts of misgivings as to what had become of Miss Fremstad. Judge of our amazement when, as the train stopped at Ogden, Utah, 1,000 miles this side of San Francisco, Miss Fremstad and her maid should step aboard the train."

Miss Fremstad's Experiences.

Miss Fremstad went on her arrival here to the Hotel Algonquin. There she told of her adventures.

"I stayed at the St. Dunstan Hotel, at Van Ness and Sutter Avenues," she said, "and, like everybody else, I suppose, I was wakened at 5:18 on Wednesday morning. When I raised the window shade there was no light, part of the fallen façade of the building being piled up on the ledge. I dressed myself as quickly as I could, although everything in the room seemed to have changed places.

"Then I summoned a porter and told him to get my trunks out of the hotel at once. As I was instructing him the building began to shake again. I ran into Union Square Park, where I found Herr Dippel, Signor Caruso, and the others from the Palace Hotel. I sat on the grass with my trunks all around me, and didn't move until the fright of the earthquake had left me. Then I went back to the hotel and started to pick up a few things that had been left. What I primarily went for was my jewel case, which I got. Then I noticed a bouquet of roses which had been presented to me at the performance of 'Carmen' the night before. An impulse made me turn back and take them. They seemed so strange, so exotic, at that moment—the only thing that was of nature in that distorted city.

"When I went back to the park I lost sight of the others of the company. My maid and I sat down, utterly helpless. How the hours passed and what I did I don't know."

"Didn't you help some of the other people who were hurt?" asked the reporter. "Others say you did."

"I don't remember anything," was the modest disclaimer. "It was all a jumble of horrible things. I only remember a young man telling me to eat these—giving me some sandwiches—and saying that Manager Goerlitz would send a carriage for me.

"When the carriage came my maid and I got in. When I sat down in the comfortable cushions I suddenly caught a whiff of the roses and the contrast of things brought me out of the dazed state into which I had fallen. I gave the roses to a man and told him to give them to some of the sick people or to a hospital. Then we drove away.

On to the Ferry.

"Oh, that drive to the ferry! There were mothers, pale and anxious, carrying babies, while other little ones gripped their mothers' skirts, knowing things would come all right if they held on to mother. There were other women half naked rushing out of burning houses, screaming with pain or terror. Men ran about, some helping the women and some just running. Everywhere there were Chinese carrying bundles and jabbering excitedly. They were all badly frightened, except one Chinaman whom I noticed standing on a corner with his hands in his wide sleeve looking at the awful scene with a half-stoic, half-sardonic smile on his face.

"But my adventures were not ended when I reached Oakland. The moment I put my foot on land after leaving the ferry, the earth began to quake again. I got back the old feeling of terror which, they tell me, comes to a person who experiences earthquakes for the first time. There was a little boy passing me. I think he was a colored boy. I caught him by the ear and said:

"'Oh, you help me.'

"'I can't,' he replied.

"'Oh, you must—you must!' I said.

"Then he broke my hold on his ear and ran. I saw a train, and, without knowing where it came from or where it was going, I called Marie, my maid, and we jumped in. By and by—it must have been an hour—the train moved out. The conductor came through the car. Then I remembered formalities.

"'I haven't any tickets and don't know where I'm going, anyway,' I said to the conductor.

"He just smiled and said:

"'I don't think you are the only one who hasn't a ticket to-day. That's all right.'

United in Ogden.

"I found it was a slow train, which went as far as Ogden. There we got out in the morning and were just wondering whatever we should do when the stationmaster told us the Overland Limited was about due. When it came in the very first faces I saw in a car window were Miss Weed and Miss Jacoby. Oh, it was a relief to see a friendly face and the sun shining and no noises and no smoke but what came from a train going east."

Miss Fremstad looked none the worse for her experiences when she arrived at the Grand Central yesterday, nor did Miss Jacoby, who, however, still wore the "Carmen" slippers, the spangles of which occasionally flashed as she walked.

Miss Weed and her maid were too tired to travel further than Chicago, where they rested over Sunday. They, with Signor Caruso, Mme. Sembrich, and the other stars, with the exception of Mme. Eames, will arrive in this city this morning. Mme. Eames has elected to stay in California to visit some friends. She was temporarily residing at the house of Dr. Teyis, in San Francisco, when the other singers left that city.

A Sporting Man's Story.

One of the New York refugees, who got home from San Francisco yesterday, was Jeremiah Lynch, a sporting man. He arrived at the Grand Central Station yesterday afternoon with his effects tied in a bundle covered with a bathrobe and went to his home in Harlem.

"I was living," he said, "in the Adams House, a hotel at 23 Eddy Street, within a few doors of Market Street, a stone's throw from The Call building, and right in the heart of San Francisco's Tenderloin, which was laid flat.

"I woke up under the rocking, and as it continued I knew what had happened. I had been in an earthquake once before in San Francisco. It had been a small one, but severe enough to tell me that the motion of last Wednesday was another.

"I started to get out of bed, and as I stood up I was knocked over by the rolling and fell back again. I got up again, and this time stayed on my feet. I ran out of the room into the hall. There were 100 guests in the hotel—men and women—and they were all running up and down the halls, too. The men were yelling to each other, and the women were crying and screaming.

"'Get out to the street!' somebody yelled. Instantly everybody made a break for the stairways. Just then the manager of the hotel appeared.

"'Get back to your rooms and get your clothes; you're all right,' he cried.

"We started to run over him, but we were held back, and as the earth had stopped rocking we regained our presence of mind in a measure and stopped. The shock, I was told, lasted about forty-three seconds. It seemed like forty-three years to us.

"At any rate, we got back to our rooms and began to pack our belongings. The women continued to cry and scream, and the men rushed about from room to room, trying to do everything and really doing nothing. I had a flask of whisky in my trunk and started to raise it to my lips, when a man passed my door. He saw what I was doing and rushed in.

"'Give it to me,' he growled, and he grabbed the bottle from my hand. He emptied its contents down his throat, threw the flask upon the floor, and ran out again.

"I packed a trunk, put on my clothes, dragged my belongings after me, and got down upon the street. Men, women, and children were running about, screaming, yelling, imploring, begging, and crying. Everybody had lost his reason, it seemed to me. Suddenly somebody yelled 'Fire!'

"In an instant the cry was carried from mouth to mouth until there was renewed terror. Then we heard the fire engines rattling down the street. The firemen attached their hose and pushed the crowd back to get to action, but they were helpless. The engines couldn't pump. And even if they had been able to pump, there was no water available. Then the firemen stood still and looked at each other.

"Just south of me was the lodging house district which suffered so terribly. As I stood watching the firemen I could hear the groans and the moans of victims of the destruction of the frame structures in which they had been passing the night. Suddenly—no one knows where they came from—a dozen automobiles appeared. They came for ambulance service, and they were as if from Heaven, for they certainly did a lot of good. There were automobiles everywhere, and as the maimed and injured were dragged from beneath the ruins of buildings which had fallen they were put in automobiles and carried to havens near by, where they were safe for the time being at least.

"I had regained considerable presence of mind by this time, and began a tour of the district. As I walked I could see fifty fires burning, which gradually merged into one and spread across the entire south district, where the lodging houses were. Gradually it communicated to the Market Street section.

And the Soldiers Came.

"As I walked about I heard above the crackle of the flames the shrill cries of the women and yells of the men a steady tramp of feet, and, looking up Market Street, I saw two regiments of soldiers appearing. They came on, a stately looking body of men, armed with rifle and cartridges, and in a moment they were stationed about to help in the work of rescue and do anything else they could.

"Within two hours 300 citizens wearing the badges of special policemen were also busy at work, and they, too, did a lot of good.

"I decided that the fire was spreading so rapidly and that the danger of destruction was so great that I had better look after my belongings. I went back to the hotel and got my trunk. I dragged it out upon the street. Hundreds of men were doing the same. I saw one man carrying a big valise in his left hand and two babies on his right arm. His wife was hanging on his neck, and he was trying to pull all up the street. He'd walk ten steps and then stop. His wife had fainted and finally he had to stop entirely and minister to her. I saw a dozen women faint dead away in the streets as I walked along, dragging my trunk behind me. Men would rush to them and do everything they could, but there was no water to be had, and the only thing we could do was to put them in an automobile or patrol wagon and send them away. In two hours every available horse and wagon had been pressed into the service and was doing ambulance duty.

Dragged a Piano Out.

"I continued to drag my effects from block to block and saw some amusing as well as pathetic incidents. From an apparently poorly furnished house I saw two men dragging a piano. Why they should think of a piano at that time was beyond the reason of hundreds who were passing. They got the piano out of the house and wheeled it up to a public park where the crowd pushed it over, walked on it, and smashed it to ruins in fifteen minutes.

"I saw another man trying to drag three trunks up Jones Street. He was making a noble effort, for no doubt the trunks contained things of great value. He tired quickly, however, and first left one of them and then another. After he had walked ten blocks he was too exhausted to move further and left the third trunk. Then he stretched himself out upon it and lay in a faint.

"I think it was in Geary Street that I also saw a remarkable sight. The city authorities had been digging for a sewer there. It is a residence section. As I walked on I saw people running out of houses dragging trunks, boxes, casks, and bundles, rush to the excavation which was ten feet deep, and throw everything in. Then they got shovels and brooms and threw the earth in after them. They buried all their effects, and as far as I know they are there still, ten feet down.

"At Gerry Street, near Van Ness Avenue, I saw four women faint, and I dropped my trunk long enough to help place them in ambulance wagons. They were taken to Jefferson Park, where I spent the night. Thousands of people were lying on the ground exhausted. The park is about as big as Union Square in New York and every available inch of it was occupied.

"The next morning I made inquiries about a train out of town. I found I could get one at 11:30 at Oakland and must get over by ferry. I started out at daylight to make it. Imagine yourself at Times Square and then walking up to 125th Street and the East River, then down the river to South Ferry. That's the sort of trip I had to make to get to the ferry. The city was being burned and houses were in such great danger of toppling over that we couldn't afford to try any but a round-about route. I got the train all right, at last."

Just Write It Down "Hell."

Among the refugees who got into New York by way of the Pennsylvania Railroad were an Englishman and his family. As he left the train and faced the ferry entrances he gasped excitedly to a porter:

"I say, where's the Cunard Line?"

When a reporter asked the Englishman to tell his experiences he replied with abruptness and simplicity of description, "Hell!"

As he bustled off to hunt the first outward-bound English steamer, declining to give his name or any other information about himself or his experiences, he called back, "What's the use, old chap? Just write it down as hell."

One of the passengers on the same Overland Limited that brought the opera singers was E. W. Sutphen, President of the English Daimler Company, an automobile firm. He was much impressed with the calmness that he observed among residents of San Francisco, where he was on business at the time of the earthquake. His company's car is entered for the next Vanderbilt Cup race. After his arrival in New York yesterday he said:

"I was stopping at the Palace Hotel, but went for Tuesday night to the house of friends in Van Ness Avenue. The shock lasted about a minute, and I crawled to the door and steadied myself between the posts. Then I looked out. I saw the great dome of the City Hall split open and fall on either side, leaving the framework of steel standing up gaunt and naked against a cloudless sky. When the noise of the earthquake ceased, the rushing of water from the several mains could be plainly heard.

Everybody Rather Calm.

"There was no one in the street at the moment, and no one was stirring in the house. But I reckoned it was time to get dressed, anyway, and I packed my grip. Then I started to walk about a mile and a half down to the Palace Hotel. I could see smoke coming from four places now—down by the ferry, near the Palace Hotel, and in two other directions. Lots of people were in the street, but they were all fully dressed, and were sitting, quietly waiting, at the corners and on the steps of the houses, for the next thing that would happen. They appeared dazed, but not worried.

"The oldest inhabitant was busy, and I heard one of them declare:

"'Why, this is nothing. You should have seen the 'quake of '68!'

"'Glad I wasn't here in '68,' I thought, and went on to find some relatives of mine who were staying at the Baldwin House, in Ellis Street. I found them all right, and went on to the Palace Hotel. All about the streets were telegraph and telephone poles smashed off short, but I didn't see any live wires. I guess the shock had put the dynamos out of gear.

"I reached the Palace at about 7:30. The clerks were a good deal perturbed, and no one had taken the trouble to get hold of his morning paper. There were great piles of them, all numbered for the rooms, but not yet delivered. I took mine and went and packed my grip. Then I started out to find a conveyance, and walked up the hill again. There was a good deal of débris in the street, and I had to climb over it. I found a liveryman I knew in great perplexity. His carriages were on the second and third floors and his horses in the basement. But his elevator was broken, and he did not know how he could get them out. I advised him to fix up a skid with planks, and went back to Van Ness Avenue with my things. When I got back, he had his carriages all ranged along the curb, and I froze on to one. I was not overcharged.

"The fires were now going strong, and people said the ferry house was burned, and certainly the fire was a good deal brighter, and the plate glass was cracking in all the windows. I managed, however, to take my relatives down by way of Montgomery and Vallejo Streets and placed them on board the steamship State of California, on which they had come from Santa Barbara the day before. It was now about noon, and the manager of the company told me he had only just been able to get in from Oakland on the ferry.

"On the way down the heat was so fierce I had to close the windows of the carriage, and the coachman wrapped a coat around his face. I picked up en route a man who was going down to the water front also. I don't know to this day who he was.

Palace Hotel's "Closing."

"Then I went back to the Palace Hotel and got there about 1:30. There was not a soul to be seen, but I shouted, and at last a clerk appeared.

"'Closing up business,' I asked.

"'You bet; we are going to be burned,' he replied.

"I went to the back and saw a block a mass of fire across the street, and the big Wells-Fargo Building was blazing up. As we looked, the glass of the door cracked with the heat, and as we got out we saw the cavalry come charging up, shouting:

"'We are going to dynamite. Run for your lives. Run!'

"We ran. Then I went back to Van Ness Avenue and loaded all my belongings on a cab. People were just sitting around in lots, with their belongings all around them, taking things very quietly. It seemed that in the beautiful weather, once they had got over the excitement of the quake, they were so glad to be alive they never thought any worse thing could happen to them. They had confidence in the fire being stayed at Van Ness Avenue, and they took the rest in almost a holiday spirit.

"I said I was going down to the ferry, and they said, 'You must be nutty. The ferry's burned long ago.'

"'Not a bit of it,' I answered, 'I have just come from there.'

"But they wouldn't believe me, and that's why so few got away the first day. Going down for the last time I had to go still further around the fire."

Mrs. E. Gell, her daughter, Miss Gell, and Miss E. G. Browne, residents of Oakland, arrived in New York yesterday and are stopping at the Holland House. They left Oakland after visiting San Francisco, last Thursday morning.

"San Francisco," said Miss Gell last night, "was a scene of desolation and destruction when we left it. It was all horrifying. I hope I shall never be called upon to witness anything like it again.

"Wednesday night and Thursday morning the rush to Oakland began, and thousands upon thousands of petople came across the bay to get back into the hills. When they got over they didn't stop, but kept right on in an apparently endless run."

Salesman Badly Shaken.

Solomon Cohen of 2,445 Walton Avenue, the Bronx, a traveling jewelry salesman, arrived here from San Francisco yesterday morning. His nervous condition from the strain of his experience in the earthquake was noticeable, and he talked with effort about the scenes he had witnessed.

"I occupied a room on the seventh floor of the Palace Hotel," he said. "I had about $10,000 worth of samples in my rooms and was dressing in anticipation of an early customer when the shock came. Instantly there was pandemonium. Guests of the hotel ran out into the streets without taking the precaution of putting on their street clothes. Men and women ran like wild, and everybody was talking or screaming. When I got upon the street the confusion was intense.

"I mustered presence of mind enough, however, to get back to my room and get my samples together in the hope of trying to save what I could. I had hardly got back when I saw flames shooting from nearby ruins. It was an awful sight, and above it all could be heard the groans and the screams of the injured and dying. It was the most horrifying spectacle a person could imagine. Conjure up the worst scenes in the human imagination and you couldn't exaggerate it.

"When I got to Oakland I had no money, but a man who said he was George Kessler, a New York wine agent, cashed my checks for me and made it possible for me to pay my carfare to this city."

The first New York train in from Oakland after the earthquake—that is, the first connecting train—reached the Jersey City terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. There was no San Francisco mail on it. The Post Office in San Francisco was surrounded with flames when the train left Oakland Wednesday night. No mail matter was ferried across the bay, as the refugees were using all the boats, and the postal employes were engaged in rescue work. The previous daily mail train from San Francisco, which left Oakland at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, three hours before the earthquake, arrived yesterday on time, and with its usual load of mail, the last mail to leave the city before the catastrophe.

EARTHQUAKE OUTSIDE 'FRISCO.

Great Cracks in the Hills and Bridges Badly Twisted.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, April 23.—Judge Thomas W. Blackburn of Omaha, who was a passenger on a Southern Pacific train from Los Angeles to San Francisco on the morning of the earthquake, arrived here to-day and told of scenes outside San Francisco.

"At Pajaro," he said, "the railway people informed the passengers that ten freight cars were in the ditch a few miles out and five hours' delay would be experienced. Many went over to Watsonville, a city of 5,000 or more, among them myself. The brick buildings showed damage and the bridge across the Pajaro River had been shaken out of plumb. The approaches were sunk and otherwise disturbed. Great cracks in the surface of the ground made the bridge impassable.

"Our train was detained thirty hours, and then, by transferring afoot over a high railroad bridge on Wednesday afternoon, the belated Los Angeles passengers got first to Gilroy and then to San José, and a few of us were able to get standing room in trains running to Oakland. I boarded the Overland and came on home.

"Every town through which we passed showed signs of the earthquake. Buildings were wrecked and everybody was out in the open. Not a town escaped some damage. All railroad bridges, everywhere, gave evidence of the earthquake in twisted rails, sunken piers, and shifting hillsides.

"Hills 200 feet in elevation showed cracks from foot to summit, and great areas of the surface moved down to cover railway and wagon roads.

"At times every brick building was wrecked, notably at Gilroy. Plate glass and large window panes were generally destroyed, and brick chimneys were toppled over in every part of the country from Salinas to Sacramento.

"San José was sadly demoralized. People had slept in the open air Wednesday night. Business was practically suspended. The State militia was camped in the park, and the handsome buildings, public and private, whether of stone or brick, without exception were badly damaged. The people were not yet recovered from their fright, and were for the most part outside their homes and places of business, afraid to resume occupations of households.

"On the trains leading toward Oakland hundreds of anxious people hastened to see what could be learned of friends, and on those coming away from the city thousands crowded every inch of space, fleeing from ruin, want, fire, and indescribable horrors. Seventy-five miles from San Francisco the red sky showed the fire on Nob Hill, and close to the horizon the furnace of flames was distinctly visible.

"The greater calamity at the metropolis overshadows the incidents of the smaller towns, though the loss of life and property at San José alone exceeds that at Charleston, S. C."

Otto Kaufman of Berlin, Germany, who reached here this morning, says:

"Attaching myself to a party of three, we started for the ferry. I saw a negro driving a hack, and offered him $100 to take us. He refused. I had a pistol, and I jumped to the box, put the gun against the negro's head, told the others to climb in, and sat by the driver with my pistol against him during the long drive to the ferry. We had to go in a roundabout way on account of the fire everywhere and the great cracks in the earth, some of them a foot or more wide.

"As we passed along the street we saw scores of sailors and others who were hilariously drunk, carrying bottles of liquor with them, and others boxes of cigars. They would shout to one another that they were going to have a good time before the soldiers came."

MORE SINGERS IN CHICAGO.

Only Mme. Homer Ill—She Was Seriously Shocked.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 23.—Fifteen of the principals of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company who were in the San Francisco disaster reached Chicago to-day, on their way to New York. The main party arrived on the Overland train of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad at 12:50 P. M. On board this train were Sembrich, Homer, Edith Walker, Bella Alten, Paula Ralph, Plançon, Caruso, Dippel, Rossi, Bars, Campanari, Goritz, and Conductor Alfred Hertz.

Every member of the troupe was in good health except Mme. Louise Homer, who suffered a serious shock as the result of her exposures in San Francisco.

"I saved myself—what matters it about my clothes?" said Caruso. "Yes, I lost everything but what I have on."

Conductor Hertz said:

"I don't know just how I got out of the Palace Hotel. I slept that night in an abandoned street car in the Golden Gate Park. I do remember how quietly the people all about me behaved.

"I lost all my clothes except my trousers and coat. Caruso lent me a shirt and others helped me out in my wardrobe. As I was thrown from my bed the chandelier fell, nearly striking me. Every one, I think, forgot himself, and the city was transformed into a city of heroes. The scenes of self-sacrifice were wonderful."

CHILD GIVES ALL SHE HAS.

Takes Her Savings from a Toy Bank for the Relief Fund.

A touching story of a self-sacrifice made by a little girl out of sympathy for the suffering children of San Francisco was told yesterday by a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Redeemer in Brooklyn. The child's name is Marion, and she lives in Dean Street. She attends the Sunday school of the church. Saturday was Marion's birthday, and, besides other gifts, her father and her aunt each gave a dollar to her to place in her toy bank. In addition to this money the child had sixty-five pennies in the bank.

On Sunday Marion heard at the church that a collection for the relief fund was to be taken at the evening service. Marion had her father tell her about the disaster, and was greatly affected when told of the plight of the homeless children in San Francisco. That evening she insisted upon accompanying her aunt to church. When the San Francisco collection was taken up Marion astonished her aunt by dropping $2.65 in the basket.

"That's all I have," she whispered to the collector, apologetically.

When Marion reached home she made a timid and hesitating confession to her father.

"Did I do right, papa?" she asked anxiously.

The father just reached out and, folding the child in his arms, kissed her in silence.

Now we have the story of "The Condemned Meat Industry in Chicago," by Upton Sinclair, author of "The Jungle," in which the ruthless and unscrupulous methods of the Beef Trust are laid bare. Read it.

At least $2,000,000 was contributed yesterday throughout the country to the funds raised for San Francisco, bringing the total, as nearly as can be estimated, up to more than $12,000,000. This includes the $2,500,000 appropriated by Congress.

New York still leads. The contributions received yesterday by the various relief agencies at work in this city were too many to be counted, and by to-morrow evening, when the tired relief workers have been able to catch up with the work, it is not unlikely that the metropolis will be found to have contributed nearly one-quarter of the grand total.

From St. Louis came a dispatch last night announcing the largest individual contribution of the day. This contribution, amounting to $100,000, was made by Adolphus Busch, the brewer, who with his family was caught in the earthquake. Mr. Busch wrote out his check as soon as he reached his home.

Of the large cities Chicago is approaching the million-dollar mark. The Bay State last night reported contributions of almost $500,000. Philadelphia's total last night reached $350,000, Pittsburg's $250,000. Arizona reports $60,000, but is going to raise $1,000,000. Rhode Island has given $55,000. Connecticut reports a total of $50,000. Baltimore's total last night was $105,000. Many States and cities that are doing noble relief work have not been heard from at all.

Contributions approaching $300,000 were made in this city yesterday to the organizations working for the relief of the earthquake sufferers in San Francisco. Here is a table showing the amounts so far collected by the principal local relief agencies:

Chamber of Commerce	671,038
Direct individual contributions	465,000
Red Cross	206,000
Mayor's Relief Fund	194,000
Stock Exchange	140,000
Merchants' Association	120,000
Churches, (estimated)	100,000
Cotton Exchange	19,430
New York Nat. Exchange Bank	17,000
Tobacco Board of Trade	10,500
Produce Exchange	9,500
Salvation Army	8,000
Silk Association of America	8,150
Consolidated Exchange	6,500
Silk Association of America	5,000
Curb brokers	1,000
Miscellaneous, (estimated)	275,000
Total	$2,056,118

The amounts recorded yesterday did not compare in size with some of the sums that were received in the first three days following the catastrophe, but such a mass of letters containing checks and cash contributions had piled up over Sunday that the clerks and other workers of the various relief organizations were swamped by the flood of contributions.

Tammany Gives $10,000.

One of the largest contributions made yesterday came from Tammany Hall. The Executive Committee of that organization in response to a call issued by Charles F. Murphy got together for a special meeting yesterday afternoon. Practically all the members of the committee attended. Thomas F. McAvoy presided.

Philip F. Donohue, the Treasurer, was directed to send the organization's check for $10,000 to the Red Cross fund at once, and the Tammany Treasury will be reimbursed later by the payment of $300 by each of the Assembly district organizations. Resolutions to that effect were passed. Meetings were held last night at all the district clubs for the purpose of raising these amounts. In every instance the sum was vastly over-subscribed.

One of the largest individual contributions yesterday was to the Mayor's relief fund—$2,500, donated by John Wanamaker. Edwin Gould and W. D. Sloane gave $5,000 each, and similar amounts were added to the fund by Arbuckle Brothers, the Southern Express Company, and The Christian Herald. Milwaukee sent $10,000. George H. Sargent & Co. and an anonymous contributor gave $10,000 each to the Chamber of Commerce fund.

The Mayor's fund was increased by some $24,000 yesterday. The largest amount received yesterday came from Chinatown. Just after noon four Chinamen, one of them in Oriental garb, came trudging up the steps of the City Hall in the heavy rain that was falling. They were John Lee, Lee P. Lock, Henry K. Woo, and Ching Pang of the Chinatown Relief Committee.

Chinamen Help.

They were ushered into the Mayor's office at once. They kowtowed profoundly, and then, with broad smiles and oblique glances, walked up to the Mayor's desk and placed a bulky envelope on it. It contained $2,700 in cash.

"I thank you, gentlemen, for this splendid generosity," said the Mayor, shaking hands with the four Chinamen.

John Lee said it was all right, and that the fund was not to be applied exclusively for Chinamen, but for all the sufferers.

Soon after the office of Assistant Secretary Willis was opened a man entered and placed three $100 bills on his desk.

"This is for the relief fund," he said, and then hurried away.

One of the contributions to the Mayor's relief fund was made by Controller Metz, who gave $1,000. The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association sent Policeman McLaughlin to the Mayor's office with a check for $1,000.

At the Chamber of Commerce Secretary Wilson received contributions amounting to more than $74,000 yesterday. After the meeting of the committee yesterday afternoon Morris K. Jesup, its Chairman, announced that $100,000 would be forwarded to San Francisco through the Sub-Treasury at once. The distribution of this fund will be through ex-Mayor James D. Phelan of San Francisco.

"R. S. C." Gives $10,000.

A representative of one of the big packing houses telephoned Secretary Wilson that his firm had a herd of live cattle for San Francisco. Late yesterday afternoon a young man entered the office of Mr. Wilson and handed him ten one-thousand-dollar gold certificates for the relief fund.

"What name, please?" asked Mr. Wilson.

"Oh, say that 'R. S. C.' gave it," said the young man; and he then sauntered out again.

Every mail brought a deluge of contributions to the Merchants' Association Relief Committee. There were so many letters containing checks that the clerks threw up their hands in despair, and when they left off work last night a basketful of letters had not yet been opened. The contributions counted increased the fund by some $25,000.

The Red Cross.

The local Red Cross relief fund passed the $200,000 mark yesterday. The American Bankers' Association, through Bird S. Coler, contributed $5,000 for the Red Cross relief fund.

This money was appropriated by the Bankers' Association last year to cover the expenses incurred by the San Francisco bankers at the association's annual convention, held a year ago at San Francisco. The money was not accepted at the time by the California bankers, and has since remained in the treasury of the Bankers' Association. The President of the society, after consultation with the other officers, decided that the best use to which the money could be put was the relief of those who have suffered in San Francisco.

The Red Cross organization is preparing to open receiving stations for bedding, clothing, linen, and all sorts of supplies. The first of these stations will be opened at 11 East Thirty-fifth Street to-day.

The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick held a special meeting yesterday and voted $1,000. The Ancient Order of Hibernians is gathering funds.

The California Fruit Distributers, at the foot of Chambers Street, auctioned a carload of oranges for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers yesterday. The oranges were sold for $2,000.

The restaurants of the S. M. Robins Company at 57 Broadway and in the Consolidated Stock Exchange Building at Exchange Place and New Street will be run for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers on Wednesday. The two restaurants serve between 3,000 and 5,000 persons a day.

The Mayor's committee last night sent a circular to all the big department stores, calling upon them to receive and forward contributions to Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer of the Mayor's Relief Committee.

Sadazuchi Uchida, Japanese Consul General in this city, turned over to the Red Cross Committee yesterday $2,200 which had been contributed to the San Francisco relief fund through him. The contributors were all Japanese business men. Last night it was announced that D. J. Takamina, President of the Nippon Club, and K. J. Iaminishi, agent of the Yokohama Specie Bank, had been added to the Mayor's committee.

Here follows a list of the larger contributions acknowledged yesterday by the various relief organizations:

SCOTT'S EMULSION is more than a fat food. There is no animal fat that compares with it in nourishing and building up the wasted, emaciated body. That is why children and anæmic girls thrive and grow fat upon it. That is why persons with consumptive tendencies gain flesh and strength enough to check the progress of the disease.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

THIS STATE TO GIVE $250,000.

Governor Sends in a Special Message and Legislature Acts Promptly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 23.—Gov. Higgins sent the following message to the Senate and Assembly to-night:

> With the calamity that has so recently fallen upon the City of San Francisco and the State of California fresh in our minds, the question is not whether we shall contribute to the relief of the afflicted population of our sister State, but rather how speedily and how liberally we may come to its assistance. Later information serves only to confirm the earlier reports of widespread and appalling disaster, bringing ruin to many hundreds and suffering to many thousands.
>
> The Empire State has never shown itself backward in such emergencies. As the need is great, so should its contribution be generous.
> I therefore recommend the immediate appropriation of $250,000 for the relief of the people of California who, as a result of the recent earthquake, are afflicted or distressed in body or estate. I suggest that the said amount be placed at the disposal of the Governor without delay, to be expended by him through the agency of the American National Redd Cross or otherwise.

Immediately following the reading of the message Senator Raines introduced a bill making the necessary appropriation. It was substituted in the Assembly for a similar bill. Under the law the matter had to go to the Finance Committee, and the bill was put on third reading.

It will pass and doubtless be signed to-morrow by Gov. Higgins. Senator Brackett and Assemblyman Wemple to-night introduced a bill authorizing the city of Schenectady to divert to the relief of San Francisco an appropriation hitherto made for the celebration of the Fourth of July.

BROOKLYN BESTIRS HERSELF.

Doctors Help San Francisco Brethren—Some Church Collections.

The relief work in Brooklyn is broadening out daily, and contributions of money and supplies are pouring in. Yesterday Borough President Coler offered to the local division of the Red Cross a section of the main floor of the Borough Hall for use as a headquarters, and the Red Cross will open an office there this morning.

Besides the benefit performance at the five Hyde & Behman theatres on Tuesday and at the Orpheum Theatre on Thursday night, special performances in aid of the relief work will be held at the Majestic and Bijou Theatres on Sunday night. Many other relief entertainments are to be held this week by societies and organizations throughout the borough. The many German singing societies, the Councils of the Royal Arcanum, and the lodges of other orders are working to swell the fund.

The Jewish congregations and societies in Brownsville and Williamsburg are exceedingly active in the movement to raise funds. At Ulmer Park next Sunday the Gaelic Athletic Field Association will hold athletic games to help.

Secretary Creighton of the Brooklyn League sent out yesterday 3,000 circulars calling a mass meeting in Historical Hall on Thursday night to raise money for San Francisco. It is expected that $5,000 will be raised at this meeting. Yesterday afternoon funds amounting to nearly $17,000 had been contributed by Brooklynites through The Brooklyn Eagle. Although the rain interfered with the attendance at the circus benefit performances a large sum was realized.

These collections, made on Sunday, were reported yesterday by Roman Catholic churches in Brooklyn: Holy Cross, $1,307; St. Vincent de Paul, $800; Transfiguration, $500; St. Mary, Queen of Angels, $450; St. Michael's, $1,000; St. Agnes, $800; Visitation, $350; St. Stephen's, $350; St. Peter's, $325; St. Mary's Star of the Sea, $400; St. Cecilia's, $500; St. Malachy's, $500; St. Paul's, $500; St. Thomas Aquinas, Flatlands, $40.

The Medical Club of Brooklyn, of which Dr. J. S. Waterman is President, met at the Hamilton Club last evening, appointed a committee to raise funds for the relief of members of the profession in San Francisco, and voted $100 from its funds. An additional $400 was contributed by individual members. The funds will be sent through the Kings County Medical Society.

THE RAILROADS' SHARE.

Their Relief Service Estimated to be Worth $3,450,000.

CHICAGO, April 23.—In helping to relieve the suffering in California the railroads of the United States are performing free of cost a service estimated to be worth at least $3,450,000. As an illustration, it is estimated that the relief will cost the railroads which are in E. H. Harriman's system at least $75,000 a day for the next thirty days. This would make a total of $2,250,000. This includes the cost to the roads which deliver traffic to the Union Pacific at Omaha.

The estimate for the Santa Fé, which has its own lines from Chicago to San Francisco, is at least $25,000 a day. This includes the cost to the lines which turn over traffic to the Santa Fé at Chicago.

The contribution of the Gould system, together with the lines which deliver traffic to it, is estimated to be $15,000 a day. Thus it is said that the railroads are performing free of cost a service which has a commercial value of at least $115,000 a day, and this service will continue for at least thirty days. The relief trains are being run on passenger train schedules, thus adding to the expense. To transport a train of provisions from Chicago to San Francisco on this sort of schedule would cost a shipper between $9,000 and $12,000.

THE THEATRES' AID.

$2,002 Comes from the Lyceum Benefit—To-day's Performances.

The theatrical benefits for San Francisco relief scheduled for to-day are: "Twiddle-Twaddle" and "The Squaw Man's Girl of the Golden West" at the Weber Music Hall, this afternoon; vaudeville at Hurtig & Seamon's Music Hall, this afternoon, and "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," at the Madison Square Theatre, this evening.

The benefit performance of "The Lion and the Mouse" at the Lyceum Theatre last evening yielded $2,002.

The Actors' Society voted last night to devote the proceeds of its benefit to be given at the Hudson Theatre on Friday, May 4, to the theatrical sufferers in San Francisco. The benefit was originally intended for the society's building fund.

The souvenir programme for the performance will contain a caricature of Signor Caruso drawn by himself, which happens to have been mailed to the society just before the singer reached San Francisco.

THE WEBER CHORUS HAS A DEPARTMENT STORE

All Receipts Go Toward San Francisco's Relief.

DON'T MIND THE PRICES

They Raised $1,100 There Yesterday—Stars Sell Bonnets and Hams, and All the Girls Sing.

The "Joe Weber Department Store" in the Gilsey House took in $1,100 yesterday for the San Francisco relief fund.

Broadway has laughed at the idea, and when Broadway laughs it puts its hand in its pocket. In this case it has contributed to the relief fund, at the same time getting something in return, if it is only a smile from the pretty girls from the Weber Music Hall across the street.

Mr. Weber went into the department-store business by renting a big room on the ground floor of the Gilsey House. Then he toured rival department stores, and, reminding the managers of the blessedness of charity, bought about $1,000 worth of goods for $300. The goods included everything from needles to a "sky-scraper." When the latter was sold on a chance yesterday it proved to be Maurice Levi's Easter top hat.

Music publishers, candy manufacturers, and bric-à-brac firms contributed many things to Weber's department store, so that when Bonnie Maginn, Erminie Earle, Flora Zabelle, and all the others from across the street took their places behind the new counters yesterday morning, it looked just like real. Literally speaking, the Broadway folk "came in out of the wet," and cheerfully allowed themselves to be sold—things.

Inside the doorway was a barrel to receive donations. Its markings might have referred to beer or XX dollar bills. Beside it stood Joe Weber in a floorwalker's outfit. He was manager, counter jumper, floorwalker, cash boy, and store detective. He was everywhere, jumping from one counter to another at every cry of "Cash! Boy!"

The customers in this novel department store purchased recklessly. One of the prettiest girls in the chorus (she really didn't want her name in the papers) sold a fearful Spring bonnet creation to a hesitating young man. It cost him $50, but there were enough plums, grapevines, and tangerine oranges on it to give him the price of a trip to Italy next Winter. Candy, cold cream, tooth brushes, and manicure sets were sold at famine prices, while "antique" pottery and "rare" paintings went at staggering figures. The "mere song" bargains were in evidence only when the chorus girls struck work for a minute and brought in a fresh Broadway crowd to hear them.

Maurice Levi hammered the piano all day, while the girls sang the latest Broadway "hits," supplied free of charge by the publishers. To-day Frank Lynn, the English baritone, will entertain, and to-morrow Vesta Victoria will sing. Marie Dressler, who was absent yesterday, will probably sell the bonnets to-day. On Thursday and Friday H. S. Duncan of the Gilsey House will turn the famous bar over to Weber and George M. Cohan. These two will be bartenders, and the receipts will go to the fund.

Many voluntary contributions were received yesterday. Mrs. Charles Farrell sent a check for $100, asking in return that Marie Dressler choose for her something "petite and sweet at 25 cents." F. C. Mattiedge sent 100 hams. Late last night an elderly man left a pearl pin to be raffled.

The department store is open from early morning to 4 P. M., when the chorus girls get ready for the Weber performance. But at 7:30 a night force, headed by Mrs. Weber, takes up the work for charity.

Art and the Colortype Process.

Before the development of the Colortype process by this company there was no adequate method of reproducing paintings in their correct colors except at prices which were prohibitive to publishers of large editions.

As Prince Kropatkin said, "Art is the rich man's preserve and the artist his gamekeeper."

The Colortype process, which reproduces paintings in color with all the qualities of the original retained, is doing for Art what the invention of movable types did for literature—it puts the printing press at the service of the artist, extends the influence of paintings beyond the limitations of museum and gallery into the lives of the millions, making Art no longer the luxury of the rich, but, as books have become, the privilege of all.

We make a specialty of reproducing works of art; make a hundred de luxe fac-similes for a collector, or a million copies for a publisher or advertiser.

Distinctive Suits for Men

NINE NEW SUMMER MODELS

At Thirty Dollars

When a man does a thing as well as he knows how, the product is yet a confession. It proves how near he can come to perfection.

That is what we would prove with our suits at thirty dollars. They get about as near to perfection as expressive tailoring, distinctive designing and exclusive fabrics can bring them. On all three counts the suits justify the cost—and, perhaps, more.

Indicative of the mighty diversity of our stock of suits for men is this: at thirty dollars we present nine new and altogether different models, from the extremely conservative to the most radical, each of which is offered in a series of different patterns.

$1,500,000 MORE VOTED BY CONGRESS

Long Message from Funston Shows He Has Things in Hand.

WASHINGTON IS SATISFIED

War Department Just Picking Up Stray Ends Now for the Relief of San Francisco.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Congress appropriated an additional $1,500,000 to-day to be expended by the Secretary of War in aid of San Francisco.

As soon as the Senate convened, Mr. Allison, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, called up the resolution passed by the House on Saturday appropriating $1,000,000. That resolution was passed before the message of the President asking for $1,500,000 was read. The message was read in the Senate to-day. Then Mr. Allison offered an amendment to the House resolution making the sum what the President asked for. The amendment was adopted, and the resolution passed. It went to the House at once, and the amendment was concurred in promptly. This makes $2,500,000 appropriated by Congress.

The loss of Government stores by the burning of warehouses in San Francisco will require an emergency appropriation of several million dollars more. Gen. Humphrey, the Quartermaster General, has shipped to San Francisco tentage and bedding worth more than $1,000,000, and he expects never to see any of it again. If it were to be issued to troops and used by them, under responsible officers, some of it might be suitable for use after its present service is ended. But going into the hands of civilians, unused to the care of such property, and living in very strange conditions, Gen. Humphrey thinks it will be practically useless when its present users are through with it.

The strain on the War Department had eased off so much to-day that, in comparison with the busy days of last week, it seemed as if there were nothing going on. Beyond attending to some minor details and picking up a few stray ends, there was almost nothing to do. The supplies ordered forward at the first report of the disaster had begun to arrive, and telegrams from Gen. Funston showed the situation was greatly improved, and that the improvement was steadily continuing.

Not Bothering Funston.

Very few suggestions have been sent to Gen. Funston from Washington because it has been the desire of the department not to hamper him in any way and to let him know that it had complete confidence in him. But it is recognized at the same time that with all the matters claiming his attention and consideration that he has had to deal with since the morning of the earthquake, it would not be remarkable for some advisable steps to occur to officers here which did not suggest themselves to Gen. Funston. In such cases telegrams have been sent to him either making the suggestion, or asking what he was doing about it.

The receipt this morning of a long telegram from Gen. Funston, dated yesterday evening, showed that he had acted promptly in districting the parts of the city under his command, so as to handle the variations of his problem with greater ease. He also reported that he had issued a proclamation asking the co-operation of the citizens of San Francisco in his work and warning them of the importance of obeying the orders which were issued for their own good.

Funston Reports.

Gen. Funston's message said:

"I request that six Quartermasters junior to Devol be ordered to San Francisco, Cal., as soon as practicable to assist in distribution of supplies, four Quartermasters to be assigned to assist the Red Cross and other relief parties, four commissaries junior to Krauthoff, to assist in issuing supplies. Have ordered to San Francisco to-day all cavalry that can be spared from Department of the Columbia, and one battalion of the Tenth Infantry. These additional troops needed on account of requests to protect stores in Oakland and depots. Ten companies of the Fourteenth Infantry arrived to-day, leaving now reserve unassigned as follows: Five companies of infantry, one troop of cavalry.

"In the district controlled by my command everything is quiet, and complaints largely individual. The Red Cross doing good sanitary work.

"I have prohibited the requisition of teams, autos, and all means of transportation. A large number of complaints came in this morning on account of seizing teams. To-day I direct district commanders to give special attention prohibiting this action, ordering summary punishment if persisted in. Situation better to-day than yesterday, and the reports of my inspectors are encouraging. General order issued this morning sub-dividing section of the city under my control in districts. Will be published in the local papers re-established in Oakland, and it is believed its effect will have very beneficial results. A map of the city will also be published in the papers showing location of districts and each district headquarters.

"All of the district headquarters are now connected by wire with division headquarters, and constant communication kept up. System patrolling and guarding of property is now established in my district. At a conference with the district commanders this evening they indicate that they can handle their districts with little additions to the personnel now under their control.

"The territory controlled by the troops under my command is as follows: All of Golden Gate Park, all of the territory north and east of Golden Gate Park along H Street to Stanyan, along Stanyan to Oak, along Oak to Fillmore, along Fillmore to Bush, along Bush to Powell, down Powell to Market, along Market to First, along First to include the Pacific Mail Dock. It includes probably more than half the population of San Francisco; and all the buildings and commercial houses containing vaults with stores of great value. The Post Office outside of this district is also under charge of the Federal troops. The following is an extract of the general order issued this morning:

His General Order.

"District Commanders will instruct troops under their commands to prohibit the seizure of all vehicles of transportation within city districts, unless they have a written order signed by the Mayor or Division Commander and dated April 22, 1906, or later. Lights are authorized between sunset and 10 P. M. In case lights are burning after this hour, sentinels will investigate quietly and inform occupants that orders require lights to be extinguished at 10 P. M. In houses no fires will be permitted in stove grates, furnaces or other fireplaces having exit through chimney flues, unless the occupants of the house hold a certificate issued by authorized inspectors showing the chimneys in proper condition. The importance of the provision is emphasized by the fact that no effective means are at hand for stopping fires. Oil stoves may be used.

"'All persons except suspicious characters will be permitted to pass sentinels without interruption provided they are orderly and do not destroy, molest, or appropriate property not their own. The division commander desires to impress upon the troops the importance of temperate action in dealing with the unfortunate people who are suffering from the awful catastrophe that has befallen them. He desires also the assistance of the people, for whom every effort possible is being made, whose forbearance already bespeaks their courage under circumstances impossible fully to comprehend without experiencing them. In light of the unfortunate conditions, we must ask this co-operation and assistance.

Supplies Coming In.

"'Food supplies, tentage, and blankets are beginning to come in very rapidly, and in a very few days it is believed that sufficient supplies of all kinds will be regularly distributed daily for the absolute safety of all. It is particularly requested that no person permit himself to receive more of any kind of supplies than are absolutely necessary. Our greatest danger in the future may be expected from unavoidable unsanitary conditions, and every person is cautioned that to violate in the slightest degree the instructions of the sanitary officers would be a crime that could have no available punishment.' FUNSTON."

Army officers here recognize that the gravest phase of the situation is yet to arise, through the unsanitary conditions under which so many thousands whose homes were destroyed will have to live for a considerable time. Every effort that can be made to ameliorate this condition is being put forth. Lieut. Col. Torney, the Surgeon, in charge of this work under Gen. Funston, is one of the best men in the army, and he will have all the assistance he requires. Several medical officers have been sent to San Francisco with supplies since the disaster, and others will be sent if necessary. The Medical Department is preparing to ship disinfectants and antiseptics in large quantities in addition to the supplies already forwarded.

Gen. Funston said that he has ordered a battalion of the Tenth Infantry from its quarters in Washington down to San Francisco and all the cavalry in the Department of California that could be spared from its regular work. It is not thought here that any additional troops will be necessary, but if they are needed they will be sent at once.

Vessels Unharmed.

This report was received at the Navy Department to-day from the Naval Inspector of the Government work on naval ships at the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, dated Saturday:

"Visited Union Iron Works to-day; plant slightly injured; Government vessels uninjured. Date resume work indefinite. Doing duty under orders of Admiral Goodrich. MORGAN."

Mr. Montagne, the Italian Chargé, received a dispatch to-day from Attilio Faubri, the acting Italian Consul General at San Francisco, announcing that he is uninjured.

MUST AID THE CHINESE.

President Directs That Relief Work Be Done Impartially.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The Red Cross has been informed that about 1,300 doctors are available in San Francisco and Oakland, sufficient for all needs. The Surgeon General of the army has arranged to provide all needed medicines for three months for 200,000 people. He says that no more will be required at present.

There is need, however, in the afflicted city for clothing and shelter and warmth, and the Red Cross is looking to these ends.

It is the desire of President Roosevelt that the work of the Red Cross in alleviating the distress in San Francisco shall be done wholly without regard to the person, and just as much for the Chinese as for any others. In a letter to Secretary Taft to-day he says:

"According to the newspaper reports the suffering and destitution are peculiarly great among the Chinese. I need hardly say that the Red Cross work must be done wholly without regard to persons, and just as much for Chinese as for any others. Please wire Dr. Devine at once to see that this is done. Will it not be well also to wire Gen. Funston to the same effect? I know nothing of the matter beyond what appears in the daily papers.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Acting Secretary Oliver sent a telegram to-day to Gen. Funston asking him to extend all possible aid to the Chinese.

President Roosevelt sent this letter to Miss Mabel T. Boardman of the Red Cross Central Committee yesterday:

"White House, Washington, D. C.,
"April 22, 1906.

"My Dear Miss Boardman—You have seen the notice to the public which I have issued asking that Dr. Devine be sent all contributions. In the interest of the Red Cross Association I very earnestly suggest that through Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge, or through Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, you send out an expert auditor to San Francisco to check the expenditures and to keep the account of not only the money but of the supplies, so that we may be able to give a full statement not only as to the money but as to the supplies. I do not intend that any red tape shall interfere with at once succoring the San Francisco people in their dire need, but it is necessary that at as early a date as possible we shall have things in such shape as to enable us to make a clear statement of what we have done, as in a certain sense the almoners are trustees of the public in this matter. Will you not take this up at once and let me know about it?

"Sincerely yours,
"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Miss Boardman replied that Secretary Taft had requested Judge Morrow to appoint a treasurer and auditor or keeper of accounts.

STREAM OF GOLD POURS TO THE GOLDEN GATE

What Cities Other Than New York Are Doing for San Francisco.

CHICAGO'S GIFT IS $583,313

Massachusetts Towns, Villages, and Countryside Swell Bay State Total to Over $424,000.

The rapid growth of the San Francisco relief fund in cities and towns outside of New York would indicate that before the end of the week their total will reach $5,000,000.

Many States and large cities that have not been heard from have been quietly going about the work of collecting money and supplies, and are now modestly announcing sums that are by no means modest in the other sense. Secretary Taft, in addressing the Yale students at New Haven last night, said money was coming in so fast that it would be difficult to spend it all.

Connecticut, for instance, reported last night that it hoped to contribute more than $100,000, and added that it had already collected $50,000. Hartford, New Britain, and New Haven are, naturally, the largest subscribers, nearly the whole amount raised to date having come from these towns.

Albany, too, from which very little has been heard, reported last night that its fund to date stood at $10,584.01. To this sum must be added the church collections of Sunday, which have not yet been totaled.

Arizona is one of the regions that has been working quietly. It was learned yesterday that Phoenix had forwarded a carload of dairy produce, canned meats, and bedding. This was contributed by the street railway company of that city. It was added in the dispatch that the Arizona fund stood at $80,000, and that in a few days it would probably be $100,000.

Chicago's Chinese population contributed $5,000 yesterday, making that city's total $583,313.

Baltimore contributions to the relief funds reached $105,000 yesterday. One of the donations was $100 from the Chinese Empire Reform Association to the Mayor's fund, this being in addition to what the Chinese residents have sent direct to their countrymen in California. Two more carloads of miscellaneous supplies were started West last night by fast freight.

From St. Louis a contribution of $100,000 was telegraphed last night to the Red Cross by Adolphus Busch. Mr. Busch and his family were caught in the San Francisco disaster and suffered severely before making their way to Oakland. On their arrival yesterday Mr. Busch immediately arranged his contribution to the relief fund.

The Buffalo Board of Aldermen voted to appropriate $25,000 for the sufferers yesterday. An additional $25,000 has been raised by the churches and through individual subscriptions.

A mass meeting, formed of women's organizations, was held at the Studebaker Theatre in Chicago yesterday and plans were formulated for the receiving of money and clothing to be forwarded to San Francisco. More than 5,000 women were present, and all pledged themselves to take up the charitable work at once and remain in the field until San Francisco is itself again. Then they will take steps to find employment for the women wage-earners who are out of work. It is thought that this mass meeting will result in the regular formation of a woman's National exchange.

Pittsburg's fund was raised yesterday to $240,000, the day's subscriptions being $22,000. From indications it is expected that the total amount raised by Western Pennsylvania will be $1,000,000. The Salvation Army sent out seventy-five collectors yesterday to make a house-to-house canvass of Pittsburg.

MASSACHUSETTS'S BIG TOTAL.

The Massachusetts fund was over $424,000 at 2 o'clock yesterday. About $100,000 was donated yesterday. The Rhode Island fund was reported at noon as being $53,149. In Boston the North and South Union Stations were made headquarters for the reception of supplies. Arrangements were also made at these places for the shipment to San Francisco of such contributions. The Taunton Company gave 100 stoves, which were immediately sent West. The Massachusetts fund is expected to reach $1,000,000 before the end of the week.

One of the most interesting additions to the fund made in Boston yesterday was $2,181, the price at which a carload of California oranges sold. The oranges were put up by the California Fruit Company, and one of the boxes brought $182.

Mayor Fitzgerald sent a letter to the Mayor of every large city yesterday, notifying them that all organizations planning to hold conventions in San Francisco this year are extended the hospitality of Boston.

At a meeting of the Boston Relief Committee yesterday the Society of Architects was requested to designate a committee to select architects and civil engineers to take up part of the work of reconstructing San Francisco. To-day the students of Harvard will hold a mass meeting and adopt measures in aid of the fund.

The Relief Committee of Philadelphia again forwarded a donation of $30,000 to San Francisco yesterday. This makes Philadelphia's contribution to date $350,000. An appeal has been issued to the University of Pennsylvania Alumni asking aid for the earthquake sufferers. The suggestion was made to the Alumni that 100 subscriptions of $100 each be volunteered. Amounts of any size will be received, of course. A mass meeting was held in the Bourse yesterday, when arrangements were made to have the membership of all business organizations canvassed for more funds.

The biggest price ever paid for a California cherry was recorded in Philadelphia yesterday, when the first out of the first box of the season sold for $105. The second went for $100 and the rest of the box at figures varying between $99 and 50 cents. A single box of the fruit was sold for $2,440. The money was added to the Philadelphia fund for San Francisco.

Richmond, Va., sent $5,000 yesterday to the Red Cross in California. The Council, which met last night, also made an appropriation of $5,000. The total of church collections has not been made public yet, but indications point to a large sum, $1,500 having been collected at one meeting in Portsmouth. The Catholic Churches in Virginia will take up a special collection on Sunday.

MASONIC BODIES AID.

Masonic bodies throughout the country have sent to the Grand Master at Oakland, Cal., a total of $17,570, which will be used for the relief of distressed Masons. The Grand Lodge of Georgia Knights of Pythias forwarded $500 from Savannah, Ga., to San Francisco last night. Other orders in all the States are also arising to the emergency. Through an appeal sent out by the Oddfellows of Baltimore to all the Oddfellows in America it is expected a fund of $300,000 will quickly be raised.

At Cincinnati, Ohio, there will be a big benefit performance given to-day in aid of the fund. Seats have been sold at prices ranging from $1 to $100. One of the $100 seats was purchased by Richard Mansfield, who, however, declined to appear on the stage on the ground that his contract would not permit it. Mr. Mansfield, however, is arranging a benefit to rebuild the Bohemian Club of San Francisco.

Besides Albany's generous fund, other up-State towns continue to increase their gifts. Elmira reported yesterday that its donation was nearing $12,000, while Rochester reported about $5,000 cash and money from organizations not yet forwarded. From Rochester also two carloads of provisions were sent West on Sunday night. The Haverstraw (N. Y.) Knights of Pythias, besides voting $500 for the fund, sent out a circular calling for contributions from the 25,000 members of that order in this State.

New Rochelle has decided to have "a donation party" to-morrow night, when supplies will be received for transmission to San Francisco.

Jersey reports are a little slow in coming in, but it is understood that the big collection day in Jersey City yesterday resulted in many thousands being raised. Plainfield has a fund of $3,000, while Bayonne is expected to make a big contribution to-day.

CHICAGO'S UNIQUE CANVASS.

Police Called On—School Children Aiding—Every House to be Visited.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 23.—By proclamation of Mayor Dunne, Friday of this week has been set aside as San Francisco day in Chicago. On that day the city will make a supreme effort to swell the total contributions to the stricken city to the utmost.

The entire police force will make a canvass from house to house in every ward, and each householder will be personally solicited to contribue whatever he can.

Every business firm in the city will ask its employes for contributions, irrespective of what they have already given for the sufferers.

The Federation of Labor will canvass the members of every union in Chicago. There are forty-seven Trades Committees working now, but on Friday sixty other trades not yet included will be approached by new committees.

The school children will be asked for their pennies and nickels for the first time in the history of the schools here.

FUND GROWING IN LONDON.

German Comments Bitter on Roosevelt's Refusal of Foreign Aid.

LONDON, April 23.—The San Francisco earthquake relief fund being raised by Americans here is approaching $17,500. Sir Thomas Lipton has cabled to Mayor Schmitz of San Francisco offering to contribute $5,000 to the relief fund.

Owing to the absence of many prominent American women residing in England, the relief committee will not be able to meet until May 1. The movement will probably lead to the reconstruction of one of the San Francisco hospitals. The Duchess of Marlborough, (formerly Consuelo Vanderbilt,) Lady Curson, (formerly Mary Leiter of Chicago,) Mrs. Lewis Harcourt, (formerly Mary Ethel Burns of New York,) Mrs. Ronalds, and Mrs. George Cornwallis-West (daughter of the late Leonard Jerome of New York) have promised their support. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid has headed the subscription list with $2,500. At a public meeting in Dublin to-day $1,500 was subscribed, and further sums were promised. Reference was made to President Roosevelt's declination of foreign aid, but the feeling of the meeting was that Ireland's sympathy should take practical form despite Mr. Roosevelt's announcement.

In Berlin the various projects for expressing German sympathy with the sufferers and giving material aid have been abandoned owing to President Roosevelt's declination of foreign aid. Several newspapers comment rather bitterly on the refusal of German assistance, taking the view that the offer and the acceptance of such help is a credit both to the giver and the receiver, and that a refusal to accept such offers seems ungracious to those freely offering. The Tageblatt, in an article headed "Roosevelt and the New Monroe Doctrine," affirms that the President appears to be declaring ethical independence of the old world and warning foreign peoples to confine themselves to sympathy and not to furnish material amelioration.

At a large meeting of Americans to-day a committee was designated to take subscriptions from Americans in Germany.

GERMAN INSURANCE LOSSES.

One Company Reported Heavily Involved—Shares Drop 700 Marks.

Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

BERLIN, April 23.—A good deal of uncertainty prevails as to the extent of the liability of a number of German insurance companies on account of the San Francisco disaster.

For example, the Preussische Nationalverein Errungens-Gesellschaft at Stettin was first said to be interested to the extent of $9,000,000 in San Francisco, but was afterward found to be engaged only to the amount of $150,000.

On the other hand, the Munich Reinsurance Company, described as the greatest concern of the kind in Europe, stated on Thursday that its interest in San Francisco was so slight that the ordinary balance sheet would not be affected by any possible claims. On Sunday, however, the company announced that its losses would amount to 12,000,000 marks. This would be a serious matter for a company whose share capital is 20,000,000 marks, of which 5,000,000 are paid up. The shares of the Munich Company have fallen about 700 marks during the last three days.

KEEP FORWARDING FOOD, IS HARRIMAN'S ADVICE

COMPLIMENTS GEN. FUNSTON

Lines of His Company Are Rapidly Being Restored—Santa Fe Aids Military Authorities.

E. H. Harriman, President of the Union Pacific system, wired from Oakland to his offices in the Equitable Building late yesterday an urgent appeal for a continuance of the contributions of supplies. His telegram read:

"Having gone over the situation in San Francisco, I am deeply impressed with the necessity of uninterrupted forwarding of foodstuffs with which to feed the 200,000 homeless people.

"The situation is well organized, and the United States Quartermaster's Department is receiving and distributing through its channels and through the various local relief associations all supplies as fast as they arrive, but the fact should be made public in all quarters that it will require continued effort on the part of every one to keep supplies coming.

"The railroads are of course handling all such suppplies without charge, and the people must respond to calls for relief. E. H. HARRIMAN."

Mr. Harriman had spent a good part of Sunday in the ruined city, and as soon as he got back to Oakland he wired his impressions of the ruined city to his family here:

"Have just returned from San Francisco. Impossible to describe the destruction, and all parts of the city affected is total loss.

"About 50,000 have been moved to outlying districts, and those as well as the whole of the remaining inhabitants of San Francisco will have to be fed and cared for for some time. There are no markets or stocks of any kind left, so that even with abundance of money the bare necessities could not be purchased.

"People are living in all sorts of temporary habitations, but in a few days it is expected that they will be supplied with sufficient tents, which are on their way, as well as blankets. The cooking by the whole inhabitants, whether those remaining in their houses or not, has to be done in the streets, as no fires are allowed in any of the houses.

"I am living on the car at the end of the Oakland Mole next to Mr. Calvin, and Mr. Herrin is with Gen. Funston at his headquarters, and the whole staff is at work on something to help in the general care of the people.

"It was fortunate that a Government post was located here, and especially so that it is in charge of Gen. Funston. His foresight and quick action have given the people necessary protection against depredators and inspired a feeling of confidence and cheerfulness.

"The rich and the poor have to be cared for alike, and it is wonderful how courageous and hopeful they all are. It is the kind of spirit upon which can be depended the successful return of upbuilding and prosperity."

The Southern Pacific will take an active part immediately in clearing up the city and the work of reconstruction. According to a dispatch received at the Union Pacific offices yesterday a system of tracks is being laid on the streets of the city, starting from the Third and Townsend Street depot, and from the Belt Line at Lombard Street, and running toward the centre of the city, with diverging branches. Work trains on these tracks will greatly facilitate the removal of the débris and will carry to the ground the heavy supplies needed for the repairs to sewers and water mains and the materials for new buildings.

Outside of the city the road is rapidly getting its service back to normal. It is expected that through service on the coast line will be resumed to-day. Yesterday trains on this division were running to Oakland through the San Joaquin Valley because of a weakness discovered in the Pajaro River bridge. All the lines of the company are now in operation except the narrow-gauge between San José and Santa Cruz and the Monterey branch.

The railroad dispatches report repeated shocks in the Imperial Valley district in San Diego County in the southern part of the State between Wednesday and Sunday morning, but say that all were slight, doing no damage.

At the office of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé word was received from Oakland yesterday that with the exception of one ferry kept in service between Port Richmond and the city, all of the company's fleet of tugs, lighters, and ferry-boats had been turned over to Gen. Funston for the transportation of supplies.

FOOD.

A BUSY WOMAN

Can Do the Work of 3 or 4 If Well Fed.

An energetic young woman living just outside of N. Y. writes:

"I am at present doing all the housework of a dairy farm, caring for 2 children, a vegetable and flower garden, a large number of fowls, besides managing an extensive exchange business through the mails and pursuing my regular avocation as a writer for several newspapers and magazines, (designing fancy work for the latter,) and all the energy and ability to do this I owe to Grape-Nuts food.

"It was not always so, and a year ago, when the shock of my nursing baby's death utterly prostrated me and deranged my stomach and nerves so that I could not assimilate as much as a mouthful of solid food, and was in even worse condition mentally, he would have been a rash prophet who would have predicted that it ever would be so.

"Prior to this great grief I had suffered for years with impaired digestion, insomnia, agonizing cramps in the stomach, pain in the side, constipation, and other bowel derangements; all these were familiar to my daily life. Medicines gave me no relief—nothing did, until a few months ago, at a friend's suggestion, I began to use Grape-Nuts food, and subsequently gave up coffee entirely and adopted Postum Food Coffee at all my meals.

"To-day I am free from all the troubles I have enumerated. My digestion is simply perfect, I assimilate my food without the least distress, enjoy sweet, restful sleep, and have a buoyant feeling of pleasure in my varied duties. In fact, I am a new woman, entirely made over, and I repeat, I owe it all to Grape-Nuts and Postum Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

INSURANCE RATES GO UP IN NEW YORK DISTRICTS

Most of the Big Companies Follow the Home's Example.

STATE DEPARTMENTS TO ACT

Want Facts About Impairment of Capital — Favorable News Received from San Francisco.

Most of the large fire insurance companies began demanding higher insurance rates upon risks in the congested districts of New York City yesterday, following the step taken by the Home Insurance Company last Saturday. No formal action has been taken by the New York Fire Insurance Exchange, but underwriters are planning to increase their premium income on the large May renewal business. Similar action by many companies is likely in Chicago.

While some companies are making demands for flat increases, others are refusing to make the usual deductions for improvements in hazards, such as safety devices and fire protection facilities.

Several State Insurance Departments are preparing to ask the companies for statements showing their liabilities in California, and the Ohio Superintendent of Insurance has already sent requests for affidavits as to San Francisco losses. As rapidly as the companies can get knowledge of their maximum liabilities they are preparing to put themselves in shape for quick payments. Liquidation of investment securities is going on, and foreign companies are trying to ascertain how far they will need to draw upon their European assets. It is expected that at least $30,000,000 will come from London.

Many rumors were in circulation in the insurance district yesterday as to what companies may suffer an impairment of capital stock. That there will be several cases of impairment is deemed probable, but the companies have been paying good dividends, and stockholders, who have been getting considerable returns, are in several cases waiting to make further investment. Not only would such a course prevent any impairment, but it would gain for such a company an invaluable reputation for ability to weather one of the severest storms which ever beat about such an aggregation of capital as is now invested in fire insurance.

All through the fire insurance district small companies which had no outstanding liability in San Francisco are blazoning that fact on large placards in windows for the information of brokers.

Loss estimates of individual companies continue unreliable and only a few underwriters have undertaken to give out loss figures. Some of the small companies are admitting loss estimates, which on any basis of reckoning from premium income to outstanding insurance make the estimates of several large companies appear improbably low.

The news that skeleton steel structures in San Francisco have withstood the ordeal sufficiently to make necessary only partial rebuilding was quoted everywhere by local underwriters as evidence of the ability of buildings of slow-burning construction—so-called "fireproof" buildings—to escape destruction in the centre of a conflagration. Dispatches during the day showed that many buildings supposed to be gone were damaged heavily, but not weakened structurally. All this will cut down the insurance losses considerably.

From 40 to 60 per cent. of the outstanding insurance has generally proved to be the loss in the burned areas of past conflagrations, for few conflagrations burn over the ground so clean as to leave no salvage.

All the large life insurance companies have extended the time for payment of premiums now or soon due to sixty days, with provision for extension to ninety days for reasonable cause.

As for the payment of death claims they will follow the course adopted in Martinique and Galveston. Where there is no proof of death except the disappearance of the insured, the companies, after waiting a reasonable period to see whether any trace of the person can be found, will pay the claim.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 23.—Supt. Francis Hendricks of the State Insurance Department announced to-night that it is the intention of the department to call on all fire insurance corporations authorized to transact business in this State for a sworn statement of their losses in San Francisco, and the other cities and villages in California, such statement to be as of June 1, 1906. A letter addressed to the companies to-day says:

> In the meantime, in order that we may answer inquiries, we would ask that you furnish us as soon as practicable, and certainly not later than May 5, with an estimate of your California business.

ESTIMATE NATION'S LOSS.

Washington Officials Trying to Figure Up Damage to Buildings.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—At a conference to-day between the President and Senator Flint of California the question of the reconstruction of the Federal buildings damaged or destroyed in California by the earthquake and fire was discussed. Officials of the Treasury Department now are engaged in making an estimate of the loss. As soon as official information reaches the President of the amount of money necessary to repair the loss, he told Senator Flint, he will send to Congress a special message requesting it to make appropriations to cover the loss.

Agents of the Treasury Department have been sent not only to San Francisco, but also to San José, Oakland, Sacramento, and other California cities where the Government buildings were damaged by the earthquake. They are instructed to get accurate estimates for the necessary appropriations.

Every Government building in Western California is believed to be either destroyed or damaged. All of them in San Francisco, Oakland, San José, and Sacramento will need repairs, at least, and one or two will have to be replaced entirely.

A telegram to Secretary Shaw from F. A. Leach, Superintendent of the San Francisco Mint, says:

"The Sub-Treasury will be transferred to the Mint to-day. The press and banking interests highly compliment your active interest and prompt aid. None of the transfer funds has been asked for yet, but several will present demands Monday. The burned district covers one and three-quarters miles by three and a half miles. People generally are in comfortable condition. Relief Committees patrolling streets hunting for the distressed. Have heard from every man employed in Mint except four, and have reason to believe they will report soon."

G. C. Bantz, Deputy Assistant Treasurer of the United States, left Washington to-night for San Francisco, where he will assume direction of the transfer of the Sub-Treasury from the present wrecked building to new quarters and assist in getting the institution in condition for business.

Telegrams from internal revenue officers in San Francisco say that all the records, stamps, and papers of their offices are in good condition, and that they will be ready for business to-morrow. A temporary internal revenue office will be opened in Oakland

BOHEMIAN PICTURES SAVED.

Best of Them Rescued and Put in the Park Museum.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—President Fred Hall of the Bohemian Club said today that all the historical and other important pictures in the club's gallery were saved and were now at the Park Museum. The office books and records were also saved.

The museum at Golden Gate Park was not seriously damaged by the earthquake. The main entrance is not injured, but half the north wall suffered. Pictures in the building were not harmed, but some relics were broken. The park band stand is not damaged. The balustrades of the viaducts bridging the main driveway near the museum are wrecked.

The Bohemian Club's pictures were as famous a club collection as any in the West, and possibly in the whole country. They have been prized not so much for their intrinsic merit as for their associations. Many of them were contributed to the club under gentle persuasion, the idea being that a painter whose work was worth while could best pay for his entrance fee by sitting down at the easel and making something to adorn the club's walls. The artists who desired to join the club were always willing to do this.

Some of the artists' work in the club was of the caricature order, of course, but these pieces were as highly prized as any of the more pretentious canvases and drawings.

Some of the best art work in the house consisted of scenery for the indoor "jinks" of the members and fresco work. The indications were last night that little of this could have been saved. Trophies and mementoes of the club's Summer "jinks" in the redwood forest were also thick in the place.

MORE SLIGHT SHOCKS FELT.

Oregon Towns Are Shaken—New Record on Washington Seismograph.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 23.—An earthquake shock that was severe enough to rock buildings was felt at several places in the southwestern part of Oregon shortly after 1 o'clock this morning.

A dispatch from Grant's Pass says that at 1:12 o'clock this morning the tremor was felt, accompanied by a rumbling noise. Nearly every one in town was awakened. Furniture moved in the houses, and several windows were cracked, but no serious damage was done. The shock lasted for fifteen or twenty seconds, and its course apparently was from east to west.

Similar dispatches came from Glendale and Medford, nearby towns.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The seismograph of the Weather Bureau recorded a very feeble earthquake shock beginning at 4:25 this morning and lasting until after 5 o'clock. The stronger part of the disturbance occurred from about 4:29 to 4:32 A. M.

This disturbance, as registered at Washington, was very feeble as compared with the records of the great earthquake that recently occurred at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—The Associated Press received a cable this morning from Honolulu stating that the earthquake of Wednesday was recorded in Honolulu by a seismograph. The disturbance, however, was hardly felt by the people of the Hawaiian Islands.

The Hawaiian Islands will subscribe liberally, it was stated, toward the relief of San Francisco.

WELLS-FARGO FIGHT GOES ON.

Minority Stockholders Not Deterred by the Earthquake Losses.

Whatever the loss of Wells, Fargo & Co. in San Francisco may be, it is not going to deter the dissatisfied stockholders in their campaign for larger dividends. A movement was started a month ago to compel a change of policy, and demands were made on the Directors for an increase in the dividend rate from 8 to 16 per cent.

Walter C. Stokes and Co., who are conducting the campaign, issued this statement yesterday:

> There is absolutely no truth in the report that Walter C. Stokes & Co. have abandoned their efforts to force the Wells Fargo management to make a more liberal distribution of their earnings to the stockholders. As they now represent over 40% of the stockholders, they feel certain of accomplishing their purposes at the annual meeting in August. The small loss suffered by the company in the San Francisco fire can have no effect, and in no way changes the basis of their contention.

Wells, Fargo & Co., besides their losses in express matter, may suffer through the destruction of the Bank of Wells, Fargo & Co., one of the large financial institutions of the city. The bank has individual deposits amounting to $7,808,030 and undivided profits and surplus of $15,416,540.

Although the officers of the company in New York have not yet heard how the San Francisco bank has come through, it is not anticipated that there will be any loss of securities or cash through the fire itself. Mr. Stokes gave it as his opinion that the losses would be insignificant. He said that the increased earnings of the company as soon as traffic was re-established under normal conditions would more than compensate for the losses to property.

The Directors of the company have paid no attention so far to the minority demands for an increased dividend, and it is not expected that they will unless it is shown that the protesting stockholders are dangerously near to a majority.

It is the assertion of the stockholders represented by Stokes & Co. that the company earns 50 per cent. on its $8,000,000 outstanding capital.

HASN'T HEARD FROM KHEDIVE.

So Baron Cortezzi Still Owes for Board—Count Sacky Held.

Aribert Sacky, the "cowboy Count," was held for the Grand Jury by Magistrate Wahle in the Tombs Court yesterday and committed to the Tombs in default of $1,500 bail on the complaint of Miss Claire Page, who charged him with the larceny of $500. Miss Page declared that she had advanced money to Sacky to embark in some scheme in Egypt, and that she gave him a valuable piece of tapestry to sell, but that he had pawned it instead. The complainant declared that she had lost several thousand dollars through her acquaintance with Sacky.

"Baron" Cortezzi was arraigned after Sacky's case had been disposed of temporarily. He was charged with defrauding a boarding house keeper. When arraigned a week ago he said the Khedive of Egypt would send money to him to pay the bill, and he was paroled. The Khedive hadn't been heard from yesterday, and Cortezzi was paroled until to-morrow.

LOCAL CALIFORNIANS URGED TO KEEP AT IT

Aid Committee Will Be at the Waldorf All the Time.

3 CARS OF SUPPLIES SENT

J. D. Redding Says That False Economy in Building Mains Wrecked San Francisco.

The California men and women who informally organized here on Saturday for the relief of the San Francisco sufferers met yesterday afternoon in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf-Astoria to report progress. A regular organization to be called the California Relief Association has been formed with a large permanent committee of men and women. This committee will, for the present, be continually in session in the rooms of the California Club at the Waldorf-Astoria. Any three members present will have power to act.

Under the direction of Miss Anglin of the committee a quantity of clothing has been collected at the Majestic Theatre, and to-day three carloads will be sent off. Three other carloads of clothing, it was announced yesterday, have already been sent off by Miss Schmitt, daughter of Morris Schmitt, and Miss Jacobson. The goods were collected through their individual efforts.

Joseph D. Redding presided at the meeting, with other members of the permanent committee on the platform beside him. One was Mrs. Thomas J. Vivian, President of the California Club.

"I have received a check for the association," said Mr. Redding, "large enough to cover all its costs for several months to come. This permanent committee which we have formed is a committee of suggestions. We as California people hope through our knowledge of conditions in San Francisco to make it possible for those who wish to give aid to do so in the quickest manner and to the best advantage. Our work will be needed not only now, but in six, nine, ten, or twelve months. It will be a long time before things will be in a normal condition, and we will form a connecting link between the Mayor of San Francisco and this great metropolis, so that in time of need, or pestilence, or anything which may follow, assistance may be given immediately.

"Several telegrams have been received telling of conditions in the city, one from Frank Johnson, who speaks of fifteen or sixteen large buildings which stood after the shock—hardly a glass broken—and in which, but for the fire, business might have been continued. These were the modern buildings, such as the Crocker Building, the Union Trust Company Building, and even our dear old Palace Hotel. It shows that those big buildings will withstand even an earthquake. The real cause of a great part of this disaster was a false economy years ago. Then people cried, 'Don't let us have any bonded indebtedness.'

"We should have had a sewerage system and a gas-pipe system of iron or lead, or, better still, of steel. But instead of that we had the old Roman arches of brick and cement, which melted away like sugar with water poured over it. We hesitated over a debt of a few millions, and now it has cost $350,000,000. But our telegrams tell us that lumber is already on the ground to begin again the building of the city."

Miss Delmar, the artist, told the meeting of the formation of an association of California artists at Emil Carlsen's studio on Friday night. She was made Secretary. This organization is to hold a sale of pictures, which will include those of the best artists in the city, the money to go to the needy artists in California.

"Our work has been so successful," said Miss Delmar, "that on Sunday morning we had fifty pictures promised us, and to-day I have promises of sixty more. The best men have given of their best. I want to ask the association's aid in having a successful sale, that the pictures may bring as much as at private sale. George De Forrest Brush says, 'The price should not be limited.' If any of the San Francisco artists wish to come to New York, we wish to be able to send them tickets, and many of us will give them the use of our studios during the Summer months."

Miss Delmar asked for any fine works of art, painting, tapestry, or sculpture. Contributions may be sent to her studio.

Col. H. I. Kowalsky moved the appointment of a committee on transportation to get needy ones to or from San Francisco. After some discussion the motion was adopted, the Colonel being made Chairman of the committee.

Mr. Frawley said he was forming a theatrical company, and if he could get the names he would give stranded actors in San Francisco the preference. Dr. Danziger gave him the addresses of some who he said were at present without decent clothes.

Mr. Wise asked to be made a committee of one to collect autograph photographs of the men and women of the stage to be sold at the coming euchre for the benefit of the sufferers. He was told to consider himself unanimously appointed.

A son of Mrs. E. C. Pixley of the Hotel Flanders called at the headquarters of the association yesterday and offered a 2,500-foot lot at Corte Madera, Marin County, Cal., worth $400, to be sold for the cause. It will probably be raffled off.

Mr. Redding announced that the Cain Transfer Company, 519 West Thirty-eighth Street, will receive and send by the Wells-Fargo express all packages for the sufferers free of charge. A check for $25 was received at the meeting.

On the permanent committee are Mrs. Thomas J. Vivian, Miss Blanche Bates, Mrs. Bates, Miss Margaret Anglin, Miss Allen, Mrs. William Collier, W. H. Ketcham, John C. Klein, M. L. Abrams, Louis A. Imhaus, Walter Wesendonck, Francis D. McGimm, W. A. D. Scott, Leland A. Stillman, Frank Carolan, and William E. Burg. The Mayor of San Francisco has been asked to appoint a committee to co-operate with this.

LAW HARD ON FARMERS.

One Fined for Catching Wild Goose That Injured His Grain Field.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTPORT, L. I., April 23.—Since the prohibition of Spring wild fowl shooting on Long Island Canadian geese flying northward have become so numerous and bold as to prove an annoyance to the farmers, whose grain fields they are now foraging. As the law prohibits killing the birds at this season, there is no legal remedy except to drive the birds away.

Recently a farmer at Orient, whose crops were being injured by the geese, caught one of the birds in a muskrat trap. Notwithstanding his assertion that the geese had been destroying his crops, he was fined. The present law is very unpopular with the farmers. Some of them have ignored it and shot many of the geese.

MORE TELEGRAPH FACILITIES.

The Companies Rapidly Getting Ahead in San Francisco.

Assistant General Manager J. C. Barclay of the Western Union Telegraph Company began receiving word early yesterday that San Francisco was getting the same weather as New York.

"In regard to communication to and from the stricken city," Mr. Barclay said, "we are making rapid strides ahead. We have seven offices open and doing business to-day in San Francisco. Three of them are in the ferryhouse at the foot of Market Street; another is at Columbia and Fillmore Streets, another in Valencia Street, another at Haight and Division Streets. The one in the Merchants' Exchange, which was temporarily out of commission, will be operating before evening.

"We have over 100 wires running into San Francisco now. Our underground system is also rapidly being repaired. We have sent a relief train to San Francisco with 150 men aboard. These include operators, linemen, and District Superintendents. They have necessary tools and material. The train arrived at San Francisco to-day, and we have sent word to establish a twenty-four-hour continuous service. That means, you know, that a full corps of men must be on duty all the time. Our offices are, in the main, open all day and all night in most places, but toward the morning hours fewer men are at work than during the day and evening. The new order means a full corps of men all the time.

"We are also establishing the Wheatlock system of sending messages. This is an automatic system of transmission, and is the fastest known.

"We have been able to procure a number of tourist cars for the housing of our men, and they, as far as we can learn, are pretty comfortable.

"The number of anxious injuries is falling off a little. It is still pretty large. Most of the inquiries which we are getting now are over the telephone. It has been a pretty trying period in this regard for us. We have seen copious tears shed here. Some of the inquirers were members of the best families in this city, and some were of the poorest. We showed uniform courtesy to all—doing all we could for all of them.

"Oh, yes, we're sending private messages," replied Mr. Barclay to a question, "but subject to delay. In San Francisco we are posting up bulletins in our offices to have people expecting messages call for them."

At the Postal Telegraph Company's office, Second Vice President E. C. Bradley said late in the afternoon:

"We are up to date with all our messages. We are now in pretty good shape, in fact, in regard to the service. Inquiries still continue, but they are mostly over the telephone."

LETTERS BEAT TELEGRAMS.

"I Am Full of Grit," Writes a Resident of Berkeley.

The first letters from California with news of the earthquake of last Wednesday arrived in this city yesterday. Many of them got here before telegrams that were filed at Oakland and other places at the same time the letters were posted. One of them, which came from Berkeley, across the bay from San Francisco, said:

"You will have heard, long before this, that we were visited by a 'temblor' of unusual violence about 5 o'clock this morning. Mr. Temblor found us at home, but he insisted on leaving us his card by tumbling over the tops of our two chimneys and dumping a lot of stuff from our shelves and mantelpieces; but he inflicted no bodily harm on us.

"In Berkeley hardly a house has a whole chimney, but otherwise the damage is slight. In Oakland the damage is greater, and in San Francisco the loss of property and life is great. In San Francisco much of the land along the water front seems to have subsided, causing the water and gas mains to burst. The fires that followed the downfall of the houses could not be extinguished for lack of water, and at present the fire seems to be having pretty much its own way.

"They are dynamiting many buildings to try to save the rest of the city, but the case looks pretty bad just now.

"By and by more, when we get straightened out and cleaned up a bit. Just now the house is full of soot and dirt and the yard full of brick. And I am full of grit! Yours forever,

"FATHER."

This letter was stamped at Berkeley on April 18 at at 9 P. M., and at Brooklyn yesterday at 1:30 P. M. This indicates that the mails are coming through in about the usual time, despite the fact that the railroads are carrying many trains of supplies West.

TO CONFIRM WICKERSHAM.

Senate Committee Will Report Favorably on His Nomination.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The Senate Committee on the Judiciary to-day voted to report favorably on the nomination of James Wickersham as Judge of the United States Court for the District of Alaska.

Charges have been pending in the committee against Judge Wickersham since the nomination was made three years ago, and confirmation has been held up. As a result he has been serving on recess appointments.

The report authorized to-day was voted by a majority of two. There may be a further contest in executive session of the Senate.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE FOR MAY

A Woman's Explorations in Unknown Labrador

Labrador is one of the few portions of the world which has remained practically unexplored. Leonidas Hubbard lost his life in trying to make his way through this desolate country. Recently Mrs. HUBBARD, the widow of the explorer, accompanied only by a few guides, succeeded in accomplishing what strong men had failed to accomplish. In 61 days she made the journey of over 600 miles on foot and by canoes through the wilderness from one end of Labrador to the other, and for the first time correctly mapped the country which no white man had traversed since 1838. This is the complete account of her explorations, written by herself.

How Men Feel in Battle

A remarkable narrative of the actual sensations of a soldier under fire. It is written by S. H. M. BYERS, a veteran of the Civil War, who enlisted as a private and was repeatedly distinguished for gallantry in action. His story, which is largely autobiographical, is unique. General BYERS is a trained writer as well as a soldier, and his detailed picture of his own experiences is a vivid and brilliant piece of descriptive writing.

Mr. Janvier in Mexico

After an absence of almost twenty years, THOMAS A. JANVIER, recently revisited Mexico for HARPER'S MAGAZINE. This is the first of a number of delightful articles which he has written. A picturesque account of old haunts revisited, old memories revived, written with all the charm for which the author is distinguished.

The Tragedies of Animal Life

Mr. HAROLD S. DEMING is a naturalist who gets all his knowledge at first hand from the animals and birds themselves. He writes only what he himself has seen, and he is a keen observer and a charming writer. His article in the May MAGAZINE describes most vividly intensely interesting incidents in the life of two humming-birds, and later a dramatic tragedy of the forest in which a hawk and some of the forest folk came in conflict.

Unpublished Writings of Lewis Carroll

A delightful hitherto unpublished paper by the late LEWIS CARROLL, author of "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," full of the same charming humor and pleasant philosophy which have made him one of the most beloved of the world's writers.

Personal Adventures on a Whaler

Mr. CLIFFORD W. ASHLEY, the artist who made a trip on a whaler recently for HARPER'S MAGAZINE, writes dramatically of the stirring scenes of the actual capture of whales off the African coast—of the long chases, the narrow escapes, and of the interesting if less exciting work of "trying out" the oil.

8 Complete Short Stories

There are eight notable short stories in HARPER'S MAGAZINE for May, stories of adventure, of love, of child life, of humor, of the city, and of the country. Among the authors are: JUSTUS MILES FORMAN, ALICE BROWN, JOHNSON MORTON, NELSON LLOYD, J. B. CONNOLLY, ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELL, ETC., ETC., ETC.

Margaret Deland's Great Serial
"THE AWAKENING OF HELENA RICHIE"

WORK OF INSANE MOTHER.

Asphyxiates Two of Her Four Children, Dying with Them.

PHILADELPHIA, April 23.—Mrs. Mary Fahm and two of her four children—Tillie, aged 15 years, and Annie, aged 12 years—were asphyxiated during the night by illuminating gas. Kraft Fahm, the husband and father, saved his own life and the lives of their two sons, Alois, aged 16 years, and Harry, aged 13 years.

The tragedy followed a dispute last night between Mr. and Mrs. Fahm, but is said by the police to have been the result of a long-nurtured plan on the part of the woman, who, they say, was demented, to exterminate the family. She is said to have repeatedly threatened to kill herself and her family.

Mrs. Fahm and her daughters slept in one room, and the sons occupied an adjoining room with their father. The father did not retire with the others last night, but slept in the dining room. He was awakened by the odor of escaping gas, and, hastening to the second floor, he found his wife and daughters dead, but succeeded in restoring his two sons to consciousness.

Gas was flowing from the burners in the two rooms, and Fahm says he believes that his wife waited until the children were asleep and that she then turned on the gas.

Another Kearsarge Victim.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—William King, ordinary seaman, who was among the injured on the Kearsarge, died to-day, bringing the list of dead from the fire on that ship up to ten—eight enlisted men and two officers.

Voorhees Declines Judgeship.

TRENTON, N. J., April 23.—It was announced here to-day that ex-Gov. Foster M. Voorhees had declined the offer of Circuit Court Judge that had been proffered by Gov. Stokes. He did not give any reason for his declination.

ALLEE GIVES HIMSELF UP.

Ex-Secretary of Manchester Loan Association Returns to Paterson.

PATERSON, April 23.—George W. Allee, ex-Secretary of the Manchester Building and Loan Association of this city, who disappeared on Thursday last, after an alleged shortage was discovered in his accounts, and for whom a general alarm had been sent out by the police, surrendered himself this morning in the Court of Special Sessions, before Justice Scott, and was released on $5,000 bail to appear when wanted. Allee was accompanied to court by his counsel, ex-State Senator Wood McKee.

Allee refused to make any statement for publication, on advice of counsel. According to the statement of Joseph M. Conklin, the bank examiner who is going over the books of the Manchester Association, Allee's shortage so far amounts to over $13,000.

SPRING MEDICINES AT HEGEMAN & CO.'S TIMES BUILDING TIMES SQUARE
42d St. and Broadway.

Alteratives and Tonics Are Selling Now.

This is the season of the year when the average man is tired in the morning and sluggish before night. He is not sick or lazy, but his body has not thrown off the waste that accumulated during the Winter, and in consequence he is not "at himself."

Years ago our mothers used to make up the family electuary every Spring—a mixture of Sulphur and Cream of Tartar in molasses. How we abhorred the sight of the big pitcher with its mass of sticky "blood medicine." But we took the dose regularly because Mother said it was good for us. It was, too, and we felt brighter, lighter and better in a few weeks.

Our ideas of medicines have changed since then. We have learned that there are combinations of vegetable extracts that are easy to take and much more efficient than the horrible mass of molasses.

DR. ARTHUR'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is one of the very best of the Spring Medicines. It is a compound of the vegetable alteratives and tonics, nicely proportioned. The taste is pleasant. Any one can take it. There is no mercury in it.

But Dr. Arthur's Sarsaparilla is more than a Spring tonic. It is a blood purifier of the highest order, easily borne by the stomach, prompt and positive in effect. A medicine that will make you feel like working. We sell a big bottle of Dr. Arthur's Sarsaparilla for 58 cents. Two bottles for one dollar.

GREAT INDIAN BLOOD PURIFIER

An excellent remedy for Impure and Impoverished Blood, Skin Eruptions, Pimples, Scrofula, Ulcers, and the many troubles arising from excessive dosing with mercury.

Great Indian Blood Purifier is prepared from the bark, leaves and roots of plants that are highly esteemed for their medicinal qualities. It is pure, pleasant, good medicine—strong only in the sense that it gives quick results in every case in which a blood purifier is required.

Price, $1.25 per bottle.

NEWS OF NEW YORKERS COMES IN BETTER SHAPE

Reassuring Messages Reach Here with Greater Frequency.

FATE OF MANY STILL IN DOUBT

Many Narrow Escapes Reported—Paulist Fathers Safe—An Actor and Actress Killed.

With a modification of the chaotic conditions in San Francisco and neighboring cities, and the advantage of better communication with the East than have existed for nearly a week, New Yorkers were able yesterday to hear of the safety of many more friends whose fate had been a matter of speculation. Anxious inquiries are still being made for hundreds of others whose fate is still in doubt.

The Rev. Dr. Robert Mackenzie, pastor of the Rutgers Riverside Presbyterian Church, who had sent a dozen telegrams to San Francisco in an effort to learn what had become of his son, James, received word yesterday that he was alive and well.

Word was also received here yesterday that Mrs. Karolina Klauser and Miss Cornelia Klauser of this city escaped from San Francisco on Thursday night. They went to Oakland, and later proceeded to Portland, Ore.

Friends of Frederick R. Dorr, of the firm of Dick Brothers, bankers, of this city and San Francisco, were relieved yesterday to learn of his fortunate escape from the Pacific Coast calamity. Mr. Dorr, who is a brother of Mrs. Cyrus Swan Sedgwick of 110 West Fifty-seventh Street, had just left San Francisco for Los Angeles before the earthquake. He went to Los Angeles, where he joined his wife and little daughter. Mr. Dorr was formerly a Bostonian, and is well known in this city and Denver, where he lived at one time.

A telegram was received at Newark, N. J., yesterday, announcing that Thomas L. P. Nocke, an actor, of 87 Sussex Avenue, Newark, had been killed in San Francisco. Miss Sadie West, who was Nocke's partner, was also killed. The man and woman were known upon the stage as "The Marneys." They began an engagement in San Francisco the day before the earthquake. Nocke, who was known as Louis Parvo, leaves a widow and three children in Newark.

Nocke met with a series of misfortunes on his Western trip, which began a year ago yesterday. He narrowly escaped death in a train when a tunnel collapsed. The company's costumes went astray and the performers were obliged to postpone their appearance in San Francisco for a week.

Condé Nast of Collier's Weekly has been unable to learn anything concerning his mother, Mrs. William Nast, who was stopping at the Grand Hotel, in San Francisco, when the earthquake occurred.

A Chicago dispatch says that among the passengers leaving Port Richmond, Cal., on the Santa Fé Road on Sunday night were J. T. Kenroy of Sixteenth Street and Third Avenue, New York, and H. E. Long of Bloomfield, N. J.

The Paulist Fathers, Fifty-ninth Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, received the following telegram yesterday. It was dated Viscalia, Cal., 10 A. M., San Francisco time, and read:

"All safe, but church and house burned."

The telegram was signed by the Rev. Michael J. Carey, and the church referred to is the Paulist Church of St. Mary, which before the earthquake stood at California and Dupont Streets. Beside Father Carey there were at the church or the parish house at the time of the earthquake the Rev. Walter Hopper and the Rev. Michael Otis. The Rev. Father Henry, Father Stark, Father Wyman, and Father John Mark Hanley were away from San Francisco, conducting a mission, when the earthquake came.

All these priests went to San Francisco from the Paulist Fathers' house in this city, and have many friends here.

James Woods, at one time manager of the Hotel Wolcott, in this city, and more recently manager of the Hotel St. Francis, in San Francisco, for whose safety considerable apprehension has been felt, among hotel men here, is safe, according to word received in this city late yesterday. He is with Mrs. Woods in Oakland, where he went after the destruction of his hotel.

FRENCH CONSUL MISSING.

Floors of His Office in San Francisco All Fell Through.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23.—It is feared that the French Consul, M. Le Conte Perretti de La Rocca, is lost. The French Vive Consul, Pierre La Caze, has made every effort to find his chief, and has been unsuccessful. Yesterday he visited the French Consul's quarters at 310 Post Street and discovered that the floors had fallen in a heap to the basement. Advertisements for the Consul have been made.

None of the French records have been found. The French Consul was living in San Francisco.

DIED AFTER RELIEF PLEA.

Ex-Californian Stricken with Apoplexy While Asking for Funds.

Stricken with apoplexy as he was making an earnest plea for contributions for the San Francisco relief fund, John Dorer, 59 years old, Superintendent of the Sunday school of the Second Presbyterian Church, Newark, died at his home, 12 Springdale Avenue, East Orange, on Sunday. He was attacked with the fatal illness while talking to the children.

Supt. Dorer was formerly a resident of San Francisco, and anxiety concerning several relatives who were still there served to worry him. He was foremost in explaining to the people of his church just what was needed, and the excitement was too much for him.

Mr. Dorer was born in France in 1847, and came to this country in 1865. He had lived in East Orange much of the time since. After engaging in business in the East he went to California, returning to East Orange in 1871. He was a partner in the jewelry firm of Schwartzkoff & Dorer of Newark. His widow and five children survive him.

Catholic Laymen Have Raised $15,000.

The relief committee of representative Catholic laymen, formed at the suggestion of Archbishop Farley, met last night in the See house. It was reported that $15,000 had already been turned over to John D. Crimmins as Treasurer of the committee, although the printed call for funds had been ready only a day. For next Sunday a special collection in all the churches in the diocese has been ordered by Archbishop Farley for the benefit of this fund.

Educators' Meeting Off.

HARRISBURG, Penn., April 23.—The San Francisco disaster makes it impossible for the National Educational Association, of which State Superintendent of Public Instruction Schaeffer is President, to hold its annual meeting in that city [illegible] that the meeting [illegible]

EXPERT REBUILDERS NEEDED.

New York May Send Some—Baltimore Has Some Experienced Men.

Mayor McClellan received this dispatch yesterday from Mayor Schmitz of San Francisco:

"How many architects and architectural draughtsmen can you furnish us, and how quickly can they leave for San Francisco?"

The Mayor said that if those who could go would at once give their names to Charities Commissioner Hebberd, who is Secretary of the Mayor's Relief Committee, the information would be forwarded at once.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 23.—Baltimore will give San Francisco the benefit of its experience in the rehabilitation of a burned city. City officials who were in charge of the rebuilding of Baltimore are likely to be sent to San Francisco to give expert advice. Mayor Timanus to-day wired Mayor Schmitz offering their services. The problem, they say, will be tremendous. The burned area is about thirty times larger than Baltimore's, and until the streets are comparatively clear building lines cannot be surveyed, nor can building material be taken into the district.

SUICIDE DUE TO DISASTER.

John Van Saun of the Dillingham Publishing Company Kills Himself.

John Van Saun, Vice President of the G. W. Dillingham Publishing Company in West Twenty-third Street, committed suicide yesterday morning by shooting himself at his apartments in the Hotel Newton, 2,528 Broadway. He died instantly. Mrs. Van Saun attributes her husband's act to a temporary derangement induced by his lack of success in getting any information concerning the fate of his mother and other relatives, whose home is in San Francisco. This belief is shared by Mrs. Van Saun's mother.

Mr. Van Saun read the San Francisco news carefully after breakfast yesterday, and expressed the opinion that his relatives might be safe in the concentration camps established by Gen. Funston. He then got ready to go to his office. After kissing his wife at the door he seemed to remember that he had left something in his room which he wanted to take with him.

He barely had time to reach his room when his wife and mother-in-law heard a pistol shot. Mrs. Van Saun ran into the bedroom and found her husband lying across the bed unconscious with a pistol wound in his temple.

John H. Cook, President of the Dillingham Company, said that Mr. Van Saun had been acting strangely at times for several months. He had been connected with the company for twenty-five years, having started as an office boy.

100 DISASTER BOOKS.

Each Will Contain "the Only True Account" of San Francisco's Wreck.

CHICAGO, April 23.—One hundred distinct and separate books telling the complete story of the San Francisco earthquake and fire, each one of them "the only authentic account," are in preparation in the various cities of the country, and they will be offered to the public before the embers are cool, "handsomely bound, beautifully illustrated, and a great moneymaker."

Twenty-one of these books were advertised in the Chicago newspapers yesterday. It is believed their number represents less than one-fourth of the output projected. Eighteen volumes are in preparation by Chicago firms, and not all the returns are in. New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburg, and Cincinnati are among the other cities heard from.

One hundred thousand agents have been called for to deal out the books.

50 Carloads of Oysters Gone Astray.

The J. & J. W. Ellsworth Company, oyster dealers of this city, are waiting with much anxiety to hear something about 50 carloads of oysters which were shipped to San Francisco just before the earthquake. The value of the oysters is $50,000. Some of the persons who ordered the oysters lost all they possessed in the disaster.

OLD GUARD CELEBRATE THEIR 80TH BIRTHDAY

Rain Stops Parade, but Banquet Joy Makes Up for It.

GEN. CUTTING IS INSTALLED

Gorgeous Uniforms and New Sabres Shine Resplendent—Jokes from a Megaphone.

It was the Old Guard's eightieth anniversary yesterday, and the popular military organization celebrated the birthday in its characteristic way. The rain spoiled the parade, an untoward incident, since from the side of every Guard there dangled a brand new sabre, and not many people had a chance to see them.

The banquet at the Hotel Astor in the evening, however, was made all the more glorious.

The fulldress uniforms of the Old Guard are concededly the finest hereabouts. They were set off to advantage in the banquet hall, which was decorated with flags and bunting selected to harmonize with their coats of white and gold. A feature of the banquet was the entrance of Mark Twain at the close of the celebration. The banqueters had cheered President Roosevelt and cheered Grant, but they cheered the veteran humorist still more.

Before this lively part of the day's festivities had been reached the Old Guard had begun the day, as it usually does, with religious exercises. These took place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at Rutgers Presbyterian Church, Broadway and Seventy-third Street.

The programme at the church was made impressive by the rendition of several airs by the Old Guard Band, which gave as an overture Rossini's "Inflammatus," from "Stabat Mater," and later Schubert's "Evening Hymn." The Rev. Robert Mackenzie, the Chaplain of the Guard, preached the sermon.

Dr. Mackenzie alluded to the San Francisco disaster by saying that Victor Hugo had said that all the brave deeds had been done, and all the great things had been said. "Yet," he went on to say, "has not this twentieth century been ushered in amid the gleam of clashing arms in some of the greatest wars in all history?

"Have not plains been devastated by lava? Has not the solid earth been shaken to its foundation by earthquakes? Have not great cities been destroyed and their surviving people sent fleeing, naked, through their burning ruins? And this very day we see something never witnessed before.

"A cry of need comes to us from that faraway coast 3,000 miles away, and it sounds just as pathetic in our ears as though it came from just without our doors. No, the day of great opportunities has not passed."

The Guard took the Subway to their armory from the church and there the new commandant, Gen. John T. Cutting, was installed.

Gen. Cutting presided at the banquet in the evening. The guests of honor were Lieut. Commander Johnson, United States Navy; James R. O'Beirne, Capt. Gibson, United States Army; Col. F. W. Bowne of Bristol, R. I.; the Rev. Dr. Robert Mackenzie, James R. Bysam of the Old Guard of Philadelphia; Major James Otis Woodward, commandant of the Albany Burgesses Corps; the Rev. Paul Birdsall, and Mark Twain.

During the speechmaking a concealed anonymous poet shouted bits at the guests through a megaphone which he aimed at all of the diners. Mark Twain's flowing locks came in for a long tirade of poetry, which amused the humorist immensely.

Throughout the banquet there were frequent sympathetic allusions in the speeches to the sufferers from the San Francisco disaster.

The Rev. Paul Birdsall, Chaplain of an Albany regiment, said in part: "I am a son of California and I am an Empire State man by adoption. Judge, then, of the feelings of a man who must think of his whole home city being wiped out. Proud though I am of my home State, my pride in the State of my adoption has been moved to the greatest depths within the last few days. I have been stirred almost to tears to see how the State of my adoption was rallying to the relief of the sufferers on the coast."

Mark Twain thanked the Old Guard for the fine reception they had given him, and then he told a story. He got a bouquet of roses for telling it.

There were many other speeches. Joseph Grismer, the theatrical manager and playwright, praised the women of San Francisco, saying that the dispatches thus far received had exemplified the fact that they behaved in a braver manner than did the men.

HUNTOON APPEARS IN DUKE DIVORCE CASE

Counsel Objects to Testimony Given by Detectives.

ONE OF LATTER KEPT DIARY

In It He Recorded Alleged Visits Made to Mrs. Duke and Trips They Took.

Evidence in the divorce suit of James B. Duke, the tobacco manufacturer, against his wife, Lillian N. Duke, was taken before Vice Chancellor Pitney in Newark yesterday. After hearing the case all day he adjourned it till Thursday.

James B. Duke was present during the proceedings and was represented by Richard V. Lindabury, W. W. Fuller, Alvah A. Clark, and Junius Parker. Frank T. Huntoon, who was mentioned as co-respondent in the case, was also present, and was represented by Allen H. Strong as counsel.

Huntoon occupied a seat in the rear of the room, which was filled with auditors, and at one point was identified by a witness as having been seen leaving the home of Mrs. Duke. Mr. Duke was present also, and was represented by Chauncey G. Parker and Samuel Katisch.

Vice Chancellor Pitney warned all photographers that they would be punished if they attempted to take pictures of the courtroom and its occupants. He announced the receipt of depositions taken by Herbert W. Knight as Special Master in New York City and in Durham, N. C. The depositions related to personal advertisements alleged to have been printed in Paris by Huntoon when Mr. and Mrs. Duke were abroad, and also to telegrams alleged to have been sent by Mrs. Duke to Huntoon.

Frederick C. Mumford, the first witness and a private detective of 34 West Thirty-eighth Street, Manhattan, told of frequent visits of Huntoon to Mrs. Duke's house, at 11 West Sixty-eighth Street. The testimony covered a series of vigils between July 12 and Sept. 2 last, and mentioned a number of automobile rides the couple had taken. Mumford told how Huntoon and Mrs. Duke had driven toward Claremont, to Williamsburg, to Coney Island, via Ocean Parkway, and other trips and visits.

Alan Strong, counsel for Huntoon, objected to the testimony on the ground that it was incompetent, but the Chancellor admitted it without prejudice to the defendant. The witness stated on cross-examination that he had followed Mrs. Duke on trolley cars, in cabs, and on a bicycle.

Caleb Dula, Vice President of the American Tobacco Company, testified that on the night of Aug. 20 he had been summoned to Mrs. Duke's house by a detective employed to watch it, and while standing near by had seen a man emerge, who, he said, was Huntoon.

Victor G. Milch, another private detective, told of Huntoon's visits to Mrs. Duke's house in the month of August last. A motion to strike out his testimony was overruled. Charles L. Mumford, a third private detective, said he had seen a young man and Mrs. Duke in the vicinity of the Cunard pier immediately after Duke had sailed for Europe in July last, and that Mrs. Duke had joined Huntoon later in the day in the Manhattan Hotel.

They then went riding in an automobile to Prospect Park, Brooklyn. The detective followed in a cab, but the horse gave out en route and he lost track of them. He said Huntoon had called at the Duke house twelve days in July and 19 days in August. He had kept a diary, he said.

LAUDS MUCK-RAKE SPEECH.

Gov. Stokes of New Jersey Says the People Will Do Their Duty.

More than 350 persons attended the civic dinner in the Woman's Clubhouse at Orange, N. J., last night. State Senator Everett Colby was the first speaker. After a few brief remarks he introduced Gov. Edward S. Stokes.

The Governor said he was beginning to understand the strength and vitality of the reform movement, and congratulated those present for assembling to praise two retiring municipal officials, William B. Lloyd and William B. Harris.

The country was, he declared, demoralized by the continuous advertising of wrong doing and vice.

"Our President in his muck-rake speech," declared Gov. Stokes, "has fittingly rebuked the tendency of the hour, which, if unchecked, will make most of us moral vultures. You can always trust the people of this country to rise at the opportune moments and do their duty."

Other speakers were John Moody, President of the New Democracy of New Jersey; Mr. Frederick Nathan, President of the Consumers' League of New York; George L. Record, Corporation Counsel of Jersey City; Mrs. Philip Carpenter, President of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs; Sheriff Frank H. Sommer of Essex County, and Mayor Mark M. Fagan of Jersey City.

Chicago Ministers on the Disaster.

CHICAGO, April 23.—Few if any of Chicago's clergymen in their sermons yesterday ascribed the San Francisco disaster to an avenging Deity. In almost every instance the earthquake was attributed to purely natural causes. God's influence, they said, was shown in the subsequent manifestation of unselfish brotherhood which prompted all to help San Francisco.

Gen. and Mrs. Bragg Safe.

FOND DU LAC, April 23.—Gen. and Mrs. Edward S. Bragg are safe and well. A telegram was received from them today, saying that they left San Francisco three days before the disaster, and were visiting their daughter, Mrs. M. D. Sherman, at Vallejo.

FOREIGNERS' FEARS IN CHINA UNFOUNDED

Situation No More Insecure Than at Any Time in Fifty Years.

LOCAL TROUBLES MAY OCCUR

No Comparison Between Present Condition and That Preceding the Boxer Trouble.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

PEKING, April 23.—After an absence of nine months, I have returned to Peking, my return being hastened by the astonishing representation of the situation in China published in American and European newspapers.

Landing at Hongkong on March 15, I visited Canton and the treaty ports on the west river—Swatow, Amoy, Fou-Chau, and Shanghai, before resuming my post here. I have had opportunity to meet large numbers of persons, both Chinese and foreign, closely in touch with the situation. The net result of my inquiry is that I can discover no reason for the exaggerated fears with which the world has been regarding China.

In this vast empire, local disturbances may occur at any time, but there is no reason for apprehension that the position of foreigners in China is more insecure than at any time in the last fifty years.

In each of the four disturbances occurring in the last year, the causes were purely local. The general condition of the country is not unsatisfactory.

European papers condemn the cry of "China for the Chinese," but surely, betokening as it does the awakening of consciousness to nationality, the movement is one requiring friendly guidance and encouragement, not unmeasured condemnation.

There is no point of comparison between the present situation in China and that preceding the Boxer outbreak, for the Chinese Government cannot conceivably now have any sympathy with an anti-foreign movement.

China has everything to gain by keeping peace with foreigners. The slightest disturbance causes her profound embarrassment and alarm. The whole army of missionaries and travelers is on the watch for the smallest symptom of premonitory danger. Before the Boxer trouble the tendency was to disregard evidence and minimize insecurity. Now the tendency is to exaggerate suspicion. Travelers are moving all over the empire with a sense of security that disproves the stories of unrest.

From the interior agents of the American and the British Bible Societies, and missionaries at inland stations, all send favorable reports. The attitude of the Government shows no sympathy with any anti-foreign movement.

It would be idle to deny that some features of the present situation are most unsatisfactory. Foremost is the unbridled nature of the new-born native press, journals which are mostly published at the treaty ports, and are guided largely by students with a smattering of education from Japan, assisted by irresponsible Japanese. Several of the worst inflammatory papers are registered under Japanese protection."

Another unsatisfactory feature is due to the weakness of the central Government in its failure to forbid inflammatory meetings in the central and southern provinces. Another is the failure of the Government to punish the local notables implicated in promoting such meetings. Another is the frequent interference of the Catholic missionaries in native lawsuits, leading soonor or later to breaches of the peace and attacks upon the innocent.

Surely the psychological moment has come when the Vatican should place itself in direct relations with the Chinese Government.

Some of these unsatisfactory conditions are counterpoised by the spread of Western knowledge, accompanying which is an extraordinary desire throughout the empire for a knowledge of English. The demand for Western literature has increased enormously. Literature of the modern, healthy, instructive sort is being brought to China by the ton.

Altogether, great changes are in operation. The movement is often misdirected, but the general tendency, a striving toward greater national efficiency, is one all civilized nations should regard with some measure of sympathy and encouragement.

FATE OF FATHER GAPON.

Reported Hanged by Revolutionaries and Captured by Holy Synod.

LONDON, April 23.—An extraordinary story is published by The Manchester Guardian to-day from a correspondent in Russia, asserting that Father Gapon was hanged secretly April 10 by four revolutionists who overheard him admit that he was spying on his former revolutionary colleagues in behalf of the Russian police.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 23.—Friends of Father Gapon say they have information that the ex-priest has fallen, not into the hands of the revolutionists, but into those of the Holy Synod, which condemned him for forsaking the priestly orders to indefinite imprisonment in one of the many gloomy monasteries used by the Church as prisons.

The most famous of these is the monastery of Soloviets, on an island in White Lake, in the Far North, where the Metropolitan Philip was imprisoned and killed in the sixteenth century. There have been many other cases of men being immured and disappearing forever. Father Gapon's common-law wife, it is said, petitioned the Synod to name his prison and for mitigation of the sentence.

It was announced from St. Petersburg on April 18 that Father Gapon had mysteriously disappeared about a week previously and that his wife was greatly alarmed, fearing foul play on the part of his enemies, as the police insisted that he had not been arrested and that they knew nothing of his whereabouts.

The dispatch added that it was considered possible that Gapon had been kidnapped by his enemies, as was the case, during the latter part of March, with Urusoff, one of the delegates to the Workmen's Council, who, being suspected of being in alliance with the Government, was captured by the Social Democrats and conveyed to Helsingfors, Finland, where he was subjected to torture.

ROJESTVENSKY ASKS TRIAL.

Admiral Was Excepted by Commission from Court-Martial Risk.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 23.—The special commission which has been investigating the naval battle of Tsu-Shima Straits, in which the Russian fleet was destroyed by the forces under Admiral Togo, has reported in favor of court-martialing all of the officers who were on board the torpedo boat destroyer Bedovi, to which Vice Admiral Rojestvensky was transferred after the disabling of his flagship, for surrendering the vessel. Admiral Rojestvensky alone is excepted under the finding of the commission because he was wounded and unconscious when his flag was lowered.

Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, who recently applied for retirement on the ground of shattered health, nevertheless has requested that he be tried with the others, though his punishment, as in the case of Vice Admiral Nebogatoff, may be dismissal in disgrace from the navy.

MISS G. R. WILDE A COUNTESS.

Mrs. Henry Siegel's Daughter Married to Count de Frasso.

LONDON, April 23.—Count Carlo Dentice de Frasso of Rome and Georgine R. Wilde, daughter of Mrs. Henry Siegel of New York, were married at the Oratory, Brompton, this morning. The church, which was prettily decorated with flowers, was crowded with invited guests, including many members of the Diplomatic Corps and prominent Italians and Americans resident in London, among whom were Ambassador Reid and Mrs. Reid and Signor Tittoni, the Italian Ambassador.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Dorothy Wilde and Julia Siegel, and Louise Tarbell of New York; Manane Beauchamp, Muriel Best, and Gladys Sherry. The best man was Count Erwin von Schonborn-Buchelm. The witnesses for the bride were Prince Luigi Dentice de Frasso, brother of the bridegroom; Mr. Reid, and Henry Siegel, and for the bridegroom Prince Boncompagni and Count von Schonborn-Bucheim and Signor Tittoni. Father Bernard Vaughan performed the marriage ceremony and Father John Lynch celebrated the mass which followed.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Siegel gave a wedding breakfast at Claridge's to 100 guests.

Ambassador Cares for Bicyclist Run Over After Collision.

LONDON, April 23.—Ambasador Reid this morning, accompanied by Mrs. Reid, started on a motoring tour from Wrest Park, Ampthill, Bedfordshire. The boy was picked up and conveyed to an adjacent surgery, and subsequently was taken to the Luton Hospital.

Mr. Reid, who was much distressed at the accident, left instructions that every care be taken of the boy and provided him with a new suit of clothes and a new bicycle.

LA FOLLETTE TO SENATE: HEED PUBLIC JUDGMENT

Appeals to It to Deal Fairly with Whole Rate Question.

AS TO MUCK-RAKE ESTIMATE

If the People Lack Confidence in Congress, It Is Result of Years of Disappointment, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Senator La Follette, after speaking three hours and a half, finished his speech on the Rate bill to-day. The closing passages were in the nature of an appeal to the Senate to deal fairly with the whole problem.

"Why pursue a short-sighted, temporizing course," said La Follette, "in dealing with a problem so vital to the public interest? Its solution must come. Why not at least make a right start here, now? If this bill is amended to provide for the valuation of railroad property of the country, it will save not only time, but needless strife. The public demands only what is fair. It is entitled to a reasonable rate. It is the duty of Congress to provide the means of securing the reasonable rate.

"It is not prejudice nor clamor which is pressing this subject upon the attention of this body. It is a calm, well-considered public judgment. It is born of conviction—not passion—and it were wise for us to give it heed. The public has come to understand that the railway corporation is a natural monopoly which has been created by act of Government, and that under existing conditions the public is completely at the mercy of this natural monopoly."

Toward the end of his speech Mr. La Follette referred to the muck-rake estimate of the Senate.

"During this debate," he said, "there has been much talk about the country having 'hysteria.' Magazine writers and press correspondents have been denounced and there would seem to be an agreement that they are to be pursued and discredited, lest they lodge in the popular mind a wrongful estimate of the public service.

"It does not lie in the power of any or all of the magazines of the country or of the press—great as it is—to destroy without justification, the confidence of the people in the American Congress. Neither can any man, whatever his position or power, alter the settled conviction of the intelligent citizenship of this country when it is grounded on fact and experience.

"It rests solely with the United States Senate to fix and maintain its own reputation for fidelity to public trust. It will be judged by the record. It cannot repose in security upon its exalted position and the glorious heitage of its traditions. It is worse than folly to feel or to profess to feel indifferent with respect to public judgment.

"If public confidence is wanting in Congress, it is not of hasty growth, it is not the product of 'jaundiced journalism.' It is the result of years of disappointment and defeat. It is the outgrowth of a quarter of a century of keen, discriminating study of public questions, public records, and the lives of public men."

CARTER PLAN A FAILURE.

Overman and Long Trying for Rate Bill Combination.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The movement begun last week through the lieutenancy of Senator Carter, to bring about a compromise satisfactory to the President by which the Simmons or Mallory court review amendments and the Long amendment should be put on the Rate bill was a flat failure. A new deal is on this week. Senator Overman for the Democrats and Senator Long for the Republicans are trying to effect a combination embracing the amendments that bear their names.

Senator Overman was more successful with his end of the task to-day, and found that he could count on twenty-six Democratic Senators to vote for his amendment. More than half of them expressed the desire to stand by the result of the conference last week, and when Senator Bailey offers his amendment against temporary injunctions, to support that proposition. After that the Democrats will vote almost solidly for the Overman amendment. It was reported to-night that Senator Long had found enough votes on his side of the Chamber to get the required majority. Senator Bailey has not given up the hope of passing his amendment, and will press it to a vote.

The Long amendment provides the sort of a court review that the President has desired from the first, but the Overman amendment will make the combined result little less than what it would be if the Bailey amendment were employed.

The Overman amendment is as follows:

"No writ of injunction or interlocutory order shall be granted by any district or circuit court without first giving five days' notice to the adverse party, or his attorney, of the time and place of moving for the same, nor until petition and answer are filed and hearing thereon is had."

COAL AND OIL HEARING AGAIN.

Investigation Resumed by Commerce Commission in Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day resumed here the hearings recently inaugurated under the Tillman-Gillespie resolution requiring the commission to inquire into and report if railroads have any interest in coal and oil transported over their lines as common carriers. Testimony already has been taken in Philadelphia and Baltimore.

To-day the witness called was T. D. Hobart, coal and coke freight agent of the Norfolk & Western Railroad. He was questioned at some length as to rates on coal into Norfolk, Richmond, and other points over his road; also as to rates on the Chesapeake & Ohio. Asked if there had been any understanding between the two roads that one would charge a higher rate into Norfolk and the other into Richmond, the witness said there had been some conversation between officials, and did not deny that an arrangement had been made to that effect.

Mr. Hobart said he did not own any stock in coal companies, and knew of no officer of the company that owns any.

The hearing was adjourned until to-morrow.

FOOD.

HARD TO DROP
But Many Drop It.

A young Calif. wife talks about coffee:

"It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum Food Coffee a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck, and of course that means all kinds of ails.

"At first I thought bicycle riding caused it, and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble, for I was very fond of it. At that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he would not drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago, till last week, when I began again here at your table. I don't see how any one can like coffee any way after drinking Postum!'

"I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drank no other coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tossed and talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so he returned to Postum Food Coffee, convinced that the old kind was an enemy instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more with insomnia.

"I myself have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit the old coffee that caused our aches and ails and take up Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There's a reason.

ENTERPRISE COMPANY'S CASE.

Commission Would Protect Water Carriers for Public's Benefit.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The report and opinion of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in a proceeding entitled "In the matter of alleged unlawful discrimination against the Enterprise Transportation Company by railroad lines leading from New York City," was to-day announced, in an opinion by Commissioner Prouty.

The opinion sets forth that it appears that railroad lines leading west from New York City make joint through rates with the New England Navigation Company and the rail lines centring in New York and running westerly thereof refuse, for stated business reasons, to make the same or any joint rating arrangement with the Enterprise Transportation Company, a steamship line plying between Fall River and other New England points and New York City.

The commission says this Fall River line may, by reducing rates on local traffic, force out of business the Enterprise Transportation Company while obtaining a lucrative and supporting business from through traffic, and upon disappearance of such competition, restore the former charges.

This investigation was made with the understanding that the commission was without power to grant any relief, it is recited, and no opinion as to whether the through routing arrangement should be extended to the Enterprise Company is expressed, but the commission is of the opinion that if the public is to have the legitimate benefit of water competition, it is evident that authority should be provided to establish through routes between rail and water carriers, or at least to prevent unjust discrimination by rail carriers between connecting water lines.

INVESTIGATING STANDARD OIL.

Independent Producers Aiding Government's Agent in Ohio.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 23.—An investigation by the National Government into the relations between the railroads of the United States and the Standard Oil Company—an inquiry that, it is said, will be thorough and exhaustive, and one that is expected to have far-reaching effects—was begun here to-day by ex-Attorney General of Ohio Frank S. Monnett, in behalf of the Inter-State Commerce Commission.

Behind closed doors, Mr. Monnett for several hours gathered a mass of data, testimony, and other information bearing upon alleged rate discrimination on the part of the railroads against the independent oil shippers of Ohio and Pennsylvania. He was aided in his work by C. D. Chamberlain, Secretary of the National Petroleum Association, which is an organization composed of practically all the independent oil producers of the country.

HIGGINS NOT TO DROP REAPPORTIONMENT PLAN

The Governor Will Call Extra Session if Need Be.

HENDRICKS SUCCESSOR SOON

To be Sent to the Senate with Other Nominations—Higgins Silent on Matthew Fleming's Chances.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 23.—"Will the question of reapportionment go over until next year?" Gov. Higgins was asked to-day.

"Not so long as I have the constitutional right to call an extra session," was the reply. "However, I do not believe any one desires to shirk his responsibility in the matter."

"Will there be a contest over the reapportionment?" he was asked.

"I don't know the thoughts of the individual members of the Legislature," Gov. Higgins said. "But it is the constitutional duty of the Legislature to decide this matter, and not that of political committees."

Gov. Higgins said he looked for the adjournment of the session on May 4. Before that time, he said, he would probably send to the Senate nominations for Superintendent of Insurance, Commissioner of Excise, Superintendent of Buildings, and members of the Racing Commission.

"Then you have some one in mind as a successor to Supt. Hendricks?" he was asked.

"I have," the Governor answered.

"There is still considerable talk in reference to Matthew Fleming for that office," it was suggested.

"I cannot talk about that."

The Special Committee on Reapportionment will hold a meeting Wednesday, and it is believed a bill will be offered on the following day. It is said that the reapportionment, so far as New York City is concerned, will be a compromise between the two plans submitted by the "political committees" of New York.

In the up-State counties there will probably be several changes. These will affect the districts of Senators Brackett, Raines, Allds, Goodsell, Cordts, Tully, Warnick, Cassidy, and Wilcox.

One of the districts in the central part of the State will be divided up among the other districts, and a new district will be created in a more populous district.

FLEMING NOT THE MAN.

Refused, for Personal Reasons, to Try for Hendricks's Job.

In connection with Albany dispatches stating that Gov. Higgins had selected a Superintendent of Insurance to succeed Francis Hendricks, it was learned here last night that Matthew C. Fleming was not the man chosen.

Mr. Fleming was assistant counsel to the Armstrong Investigating Committee, and was the choice of Charles E. Hughes and members of the committee for the place. It is understood that for personal reasons he did not allow his name to be considered.

HEDGED ON WORD "COLORED"

Congress Got Around the Term When Asked to Substitute "Negro."

WASHINGTON, April 23.—While the House to-day had under consideration the bill to raise the salaries of school teachers in the District of Columbia and providing for a board of education of nine members, three of whom "shall be of the colored race," Mr. Sims (Tenn.) said it was time to get away from miscalling the negro race. The word "colored" included the yellow, brown, and red people as well as the negro. Secretary Taft, "one of the ablest and greatest men of his time," in his recent address at Tuskegee Institute had used the words "negro and negro race" twenty-five times and "colored race" but four times. This fact, Mr. Sims thought, was luminous of a correct understanding of the nomenclature of the race.

A proposition was offered in the course of the debate for the District of Columbia to vest in the President the power to appoint the board of education.

Mr. Champ Clark (Mo.) objected most strenuously to the proposition.

"I am opposed to loading on to the President of the United States the duty of appointing the school board of the District of Columbia," he said. "He has multitudinous and multifarious duties enough to discharge now. He is, as said by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. Madden,] a remarkable man—endowed with wondrous energies, but in running Congress, lecturing the 'man with the muck-rake,' making suggestions as to the family relations, appointing 300,000 Government employes, settling international disputes and discharging the other duties devolved upon him by the Constitution he is assuming his full share of the 'white man's burden.'

"His successor may be only an ordinary man unequal to the heavy load now upon the President's shoulders, to say nothing of increasing that load. We are legislating with reference to all Presidents and not with reference to the extraordinary man now in the White House."

The vote on the Sims amendment striking out the word "colored" and inserting "negro" wherever it occurred in the bill was defeated. The bill was amended so that the Board of Education shall consist of nine persons without regard to color.

After a vigorous speech by Representative Goulden of New York the House also voted to retain the present system of secret sessions of the Board of Education. As Mr. Goulden comes from a city in which the sessions of the Board of Education are open and are reported in the newspapers his argument against the system had much effect on his hearers.

TIBETAN TREATY SIGNED.

Britain Recognizes China Protectorate—Trade Open for India.

SHANGHAI, April 23.—The Anglo-Tibetan treaty has been signed at Peking. It provides for the recognition by Great Britain of the protectorate of China over Tibet. Great Britain will not interfere internally in Tibet unless other powers do so.

China, on the other hand, will open some of the Tibetan markets to Indian trade, will erect telegraph lines, give Great Britain preference regarding railway concessions, and will pay $1,250,000 of the expenses of the British expedition under Col. Sir Fancis Younghusband which went to Lhasa in 1903-4.

NEW MORTGAGE TAX BILL INTRODUCED AT ALBANY

Amendments Inserted to Meet Gov. Higgins's Views.

AMBIGUITY IS ELIMINATED

Essential Features of the Measure as Originally Introduced in No Wise Changed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 23.—A new mortgage tax repeal bill, drawn to meet the views of the Governor as expressed in his veto of the former bill, was introduced in the Senate to-night by Mr. Page.

It was said by Senator Page that the changes had been carefully drawn by ex-Judge Cohen of New York, and he feels confident that the bill will now pass. The Governor said to-day that he was ready to sign any satisfactory bill.

Here are the changes: The first amendment is an amendment to the title, changing it from "an act to amend the tax law in relation to taxation of debts secured by mortgages" to "an act to amend the tax law in relation to the taxation of mortgages on real property," thus meeting the objection in the Governor's message that the language was ambiguous in stating the nature of the tax and making it clear that the tax is a recording tax.

The second amendment provides this definition of "mortgage of real property." The words mortgage of real property as used in this article include every mortgage by which a lien is created over or imposed on real property, or which affects the title to real property, notwithstanding that it may also be a lien on personal or other property, or that personal or other property may form part of the security for the debt or debts secured by such mortgage."

The Governor's message declared that there should be a clear definition of the term "mortgage of real property," in order that there might be no question as to whether it was intended that the tax should apply to a mortgage secured in part by real property and in part by personal property.

A new section, Number 22, is added to the bill to make certain that no taxes for 1905 shall escape.

The tax imposed by this section is to be paid to the recording officer of the county in which the mortgage is first recorded, and shall be paid when at any time any part of the amount of principal indebtedness is advanced after the first day of July, 1906.

The last section of the bill is amended to meet another objection of the Governor by putting in this further saving clause as follows: "And all other taxes, if any, which were imposed by Chapter 729 of the Laws of 1905 on any mortgage recorded prior to the first day of July, 1906, in respect to any mortgage ending on or before the first day of July, 1906."

There are minor verbal changes in the bill, which are made for greater clearness and to emphasize the fact that the act is intended to establish a recording tax on mortgages. The essential features of the bill as originally introduced are in no wise changed.

The bill was also introduced in the Assembly by Mr. Dowling, but it will have to be acted on there as a Senate measure, as Mr. Wade of Chautauqua objected to its consideration, and thereby killed it so far an action upon it as an Assembly measure is concerned.

IF JEFFERSON WERE ALIVE,

He'd Use Muck-Rake, Says Editor at Democratic Banquet.

Women were among the guests at the annual Jefferson banquet of the Harlem Democratic Club for the first time last night. The Harlem Casino was taxed to its capacity to accommodate the 500 present. The innovation was voted to be a great success.

Ex-Postmaster Dayton was toastmaster, and introduced as the first speaker Thomas Mott Osborne. He discussed municipal ownership, and said:

"In spite of all we hear of the movement in favor of municipal ownership there cannot be a real issue in State politics raised over the principle. To make it a plank in a State platform is to misunderstand completely its true significance. In this matter every city should have home rule, and decide its own policy for itself."

Richard E. Connell, editor of The Poughkeepsie News-Press, spoke to the toast of "Jefferson." He said in part:

"If Jefferson were to come to earth again, it is he that would be the man with the muck-rake. He would never rest until he had exposed all the scandals of the insurance companies and had upset the selfish schemes of the great corporations."

James W. Osborne expressed his great pleasure at the presence of women at a political dinner. He was sure that if they were in politics always, instead of at an occasional feast, it would be better for our schools, our streets, and our jails.

Referring to Thomas Jefferson, he said that if he were alive at the present time and knew of the way in which banks and insurance companies had been paying tribute to the Republican Party in the form of campaign contributions Jefferson would have been the first to vote for him as District Attorney.

FUNERAL DRIVERS FOR WAR.

They Threaten Strike Unless Demands Are Granted.

Edwin Gould, Chairman of the Greater New York Council of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, organized two months ago as a local of the Brotherhood, said last night that a strike of the funeral drivers involving 1,200 men is impending, unless demands for a uniform wage scale and recognition of the union are granted.

He said that the employers have organized, and while several conferences have been held with them, they have shown no inclination to make any concessions. He also said that a joint conference would be held between representative employers and the union next week, and a strike of the funeral drivers would take place unless the employers make some concessions.

The general sentiment among the drivers, he says, is in favor of a strike.

A COINCIDENCE IN DEATHS.

Two Piano Makers Employed by One Firm Found Dead in One Day.

Adolph Hasselquist, 26 years old, who was employed by the Steinway Piano Company at Astoria, L. I., died yesterday at his home, 345 East Ninety-second Street, a suicide, according to the police of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station. He was found dead on the floor there yesterday morning.

Ambulance Surgeon Crumb of the Presbyterian Hospital detected the odor and marks of carbolic acid about his lips and decided that the man had taken a dose of that poison. The family, however, denied this and said that death was due to heart disease, from which they said he had suffered.

By a singular coincidence Frank Kellar, 55 years old, a cabinetmaker, who was also employed in the plant of the Steinway Piano Company at Astoria, dropped dead at about the same time that Hasselquist's body was discovered. Ambulance Surgeon Bunker, who came from Bellevue, said his death was probably due to heart disease.

EXPLOSION BURNS THREE.

Can of Alcohol Flashes Up and One Man May Die.

The explosion of a can of alcohol in the offices of D. L. Sternrich & Co., manufacturers of cigar lighters on the eighth floor of the Graham Building at 127 Duane Street yesterday afternoon resulted in the serious injury of three persons, one of them, John Kuhn, being so badly hurt that it was said at the Hudson Street Hospital last night his chances of recovery were very slim.

The others who were less seriously injured are Miss Hattie Hasekamp of 454 Elton Street, Brooklyn, a stenographer, and Benjamin Levy of 1,348 Lexington Avenue, who has deskroom in the Sternrich offices.

HONORS FRENCH SQUADRON.

President Gives Dinner and Reception to the Officers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The series of entertainments in honor of the officers of the French squadron now in Annapolis to participate in the Paul Jones ceremonies opened to-day with a call at the White House at 2:30 o'clock, when the visitors were received with great formality by the President, and ended with a state dinner at 8 o'clock and a small but brilliant reception at 10.

The officers came from Annapolis by special train, all in full uniform, accompanied by Rear Admiral Bradford and Rear Admiral Davis, and were met by Lieut. Commander de Faramond of the French Embassy and several United States officers, who acted as escorts during the afternoon, when the visitors were received by the Secretary of the Navy at his department, following the call at the White House.

The dinner served in the state dining room was a stag party of twenty-four covers. The table was profusely decorated in pink roses and hyacinths. The company included the President, the Vice President, the French Ambassador, Rear Admiral Campion, Capt. Lefèvre, Capt. Guépratte, Capt. Huguet, Commander Batellet, Flag Lieutenant Juramy, Fleet Surgeon Michel, Fleet Paymaster de Brètevillois, M. des Portes de la Fosse, Commander Vicomte de Faramond, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Navy, the Admiral of the Navy, Lieut. Gen. Corbin, Congressman Nicholas Longworth, Rear Admirals Sands, Davis, and Bradford, Brig. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, Gen. Horace Porter, Lieut. Commander Albert L. Key, and Major C. L. McCawley.

The visitors will return to Annapolis to-morrow morning.

EDWARD THAW MARRIED.

Bride Was Miss Jane Olmsted, the New Girl Pianist.

DETROIT, April 23.—Miss Jane Olmsted of New York, a well-known pianist, was quietly married here to-day at the residence of her aunt, to Edward Thaw of Pittsburg, brother of the Countess of Yarmouth.

Mr. Thaw's mother and several other members of his family were present at the wedding, which was quietly celebrated, owing to the illness of Miss Olmsted's mother.

"FORCE OF LIFERS" FREED.

Case Against Patent Medicine Firm Dismissed by U. S. Commissioner.

United States Commissioner Ridgway yesterday handed down a decision in the "Force of Life" case, in which he ordered the discharge of all four defendants, Virgil Neale, Laura M. Wilson, Dr. William H. Hadley, and A. H. Williams. The complainants in the case were Lawyers Champe Andrews and W. H. Cooper of the County Medical Society.

The accused were charged with having used the United States mails fraudulently in maintaining what is known as a "fake" medical institution at 768 Madison Avenue and 2,258 Broadway. The Force of Life Company, it was shown, had hundreds of thousands of patients throughout the country, all of whom, with a few exceptions, were treated by mail. Ex-Senator Clarence Lexow was the principal attorney for the defense.

Commissioner Ridgway holds that there was nothing fraudulent in the methods of treatment used by the Force of Life Company, and that because of a lack of evidence the accused were wrongfully accused. Gen. James R. O'Beirne was President of the accused corporation, and it was shown that a number of other men well known in the city held stock in the company. Commissioner Ridgway, after reviewing the evidence at great length, cites over a score of decisions in support of his position.

Commissioner Ridgway, after reviewing the evidence, takes up the "mail order medical business," showing that it brings the patient more directly within the control of the prescribing physician than would usually be the case, and especially so in instances where the patient has not specialists at his command, and all at an expense the ordinary person can meet. That this form of treatment was a benign influence in the community there could be no doubt, the Commissioner thought.

Ever since the days of Aesculapius there had been an earnest endeavor for perfection in medical research, which had never become an exact science. Some people pinned their faith to Christian Science, but the major portion believed that bodily ills required treatment, and expected assistance through one of the several "paths" now before the public. Commissioner Ridgway cited cases within his own knowledge where local physicians had given up patients, and where treatment from so-called "patent medicines" had effected permanent cures.

In short, the Commissioner held that there was nothing to prevent each person from accepting and employing such method of medical treatment as most appealed to him or her, that there was nothing to show that the "Force of Life" Company had employed fraudulent or deceptive means in the conduct of its business, and that upon the contrary the testimony of such of the company's patients as was offered in evidence showed the patients were pleased with the treatment receivd.

CHILD SCARED AWAY BURGLAR

"Is That You, Papa?" She Asked, and Intruder Ran Away.

A burglar yesterday morning entered the home of Capt. James Leyland, at Rutherford, N. J. He broke in by unlocking the front door with a skeleton key. He went up stairs to the room occupied by Capt. Leyland's little daughter, who awoke, and, seeing a man in the room, asked, "Is that you, papa?" The man made no reply, but the child's voice awoke a servant, who also saw the man. The burglar ran down the stairs and out of the front door. The maid and little girl are unable to give any description of the man.

SOLDIERS IN GARDEN OPEN MILITARY SHOW

Brilliant Pageant Begins Annual Event of Military League.

DEAF AND DUMB CORPS DRILL

Wonderful Efficiency of New York Institute Boys Cheered—Controller Metz Reviews Troops.

With drum beat and bugle blare, the soldiers and sailors heralded the opening of the military show at Madison Square Garden last night. The big amphitheatre appeared in gorgeous dress of red, white, and blue, in honor of the tenth annual tournament of the Military Athletic League. From end to end the pageant of the Army and Navy awoke outbursts of applause which left unquestioned the patriotic sentiment of the spectators. The boys of the New York Institute for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, who in their manoeuvres carried off the honors of the opening night, brought the spectators to their feet as their band sent the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" ringing through the building. At its close the cheering continued for a long time, while the boys stood like statues in the ranks.

Controller Herman A. Metz acted as reviewing officer of the night, escorted by Col. William F. Morris, Ninth Regiment, and his staff. The honor was new to the Controller, and he was visibly nervous as he inspected the troops, but when they wheeled into column of fours and marched past in review he appeared more at east and saluted the officers and the colors with military precision, all of the spectators rising with him as the flag went by. He was especially interested in the drill and manoeuvres of the deaf and dumb cadet corps. They were easily the feature of the night, as with machinelike precision they marched in parade formation and went through the manual of arms with their rifles to the fingered commands of their officers. Drillmaster W. H. Van Tassell put the boys through the most intricate manoeuvres, and they never once faltered, setting the veterans who followed them in the arena a splendid model for soldierly accuracy.

The absence of the "Kilties" from Canada was amply made up by the interesting drills of the detachments detailed by the Secretary of War.

The riding of Troop G, Fifteenth United States Cavalry, commanded by Lieut. Samuel Van Leer, from Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont, was far superior to that of any of the troop riding that has been shown in former years. Their thrilling jumping over hurdles standing three and four men in a pyramid upon the backs of four galloping troop horses was as daring a bit of horsemanship as has ever been witnessed in the ring.

Capt. Stanley M. Ford, Company A, Fifth United States Infantry, put his men, dressed in the new army uniform of "gray-drab" with wide-brimmed sombrero hats, through calisthenic exercises with their rifles and also volley firing and skirmishing drills. During the flying platoon drill of the Third Battery, N. G., N. Y., under the command of Lieut. Chauncey Matlock, there was a narrow escape from accident as one of the horses fell as the cannon were being wheeled about the arena at a gallop. The horse was pulled to his feet, however, in time to avoid a collision and the drill proceeded to the end.

The athletic events for the Military Athletic League championships and the various handicaps produced interesting sport about the dirt track in the arena before the regular features of the drills and manoeuvres began. The summary:

Semi-Final, 100 Yards Handicap.—First Heat—Won by D. Frank, Twenty-second Regiment; J. Boden, Twelfth Regiment, second. Second Heat—Won by F. J. Hallings, Thirteenth Regiment; W. R. Bursch, Twenty-third Regiment, second. Third Heat—Won by C. E. Peabody, Twenty-second Regiment; W. T. Groves, Thirteenth Regiment, second. Fourth Heat—Won by H. J. Edwards, Twenty-second Regiment; J. K. Bursch, Twenty-third Regiment, second. Fifth Heat—Won by A. McCutcheon, Twenty-second Regiment; H. A. Sedley, Jr., Twenty-third Regiment, second.

GAMBLING HOUSE RAIDED.

Mr. Finn of Brooklyn Lost $1,200 and Complained.

On complaint of a man who gave the name of James Finn of 287 President Street, Brooklyn, Captain Hodgins of the Tenderloin Station last night led a raiding party of plainclothes men upon the "Martinique Club," in West Thirty-fourth Street where the "club rooms" occupied the second floor.

The raiders locked up the alleged proprietor of the place on the charge of maintaining a gambling house. He said he was Michael McGue and lived at the American Hotel, Eighth Avenue and Forty-second Street.

The raiders went through the house at 148 West Thirtyfourth Street, and then battered in with sledge hammers two iron doors in the rear of the place next door. When they got up into the club rooms they saw only a few frightened men. The detectives found others in the cellar, and some in a store on the first floor.

Finn had complained that on March 12 he had lost about $1,200 on faro. Capt. Hodgins saw no faro layout. He ordered that a big barricaded wardrobe or safe be broken open. In it was found a faro layout. There were plenty of cards, also chips and other gambling paraphernalia.

Capt. Hodgins lined up the seventeen men found in different parts of the house, gave them a lecture, took names and addresses, and let them go. Only McGue was arrested.

Finn, who, the directory says, is a manager of a business establishment, made his complaint to the District Attorney's Affice. Capt. Hodgins had been watching the place for some time, but he had not been able to get sufficient evidence for a raid. The "Martinique Club" was duly chartered in 1904.

Only a few weeks ago Capt. Hodgins raided another alleged gambling house a few doors away. A new roulette wheel and a wagon load of other new paraphernalia were confiscated.

PAUL KELLEY GANG'S WORK?

Saloonkeeper Has Three Arrested—Says They Threatened His Life.

Samuel Aronson, who has a saloon at the southwest corner of 117th Street and Madison Avenue, was badly scared last night, and caused the arrest of three men, who, he says, are members of the Paul Kelley gang. They were locked up on the charge of attempted felonious assault.

The men are Thomas Barrett, a bricklayer of 212 East Seventy-fifth Street; Carlo Nots, a contractor of 412 East One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, and Salvatore Ergilia of 318 East One Hundred and Thirteenth Street.

According to Aronson, ten men, including those who were arrested, went into his place last night and demanded $2,000 on pain of death. Some one notified the police. Sergt. Ward sent four men to Aronson's saloon, where they made the arrests.

CASTRO JUST RESTING; NO UPHEAVAL COMING

His Minister of State Arrives and Denies Alarmist Rumors.

THEY COULDN'T SPARE HIM

Dr. Torres Cardenas and Party Bring 22 Trunks and Strong-Boxes That Are Well Guarded.

Among the passengers on the Red D Line steamship Caracas, which arrived from Venezuela yesterday, are Dr. J. Torres Cardenas, Secretary of State of the Venezuelan Government, and Gen. Manuel Corao, one of Venezuela's richest capitalists. They were accompanied by members of their families and a number of servants.

At Quarantine they were met by Carlos Benito Figueredo, Consul General of Venezuela in this city, and a number of others, including Attachés of the Venezuelan Legation at Washington. The party is at the Hotel Astor.

Dr. Torres Cardenas emphatically denied that President Castro had permanently resigned the Presidency of Venezuela. He stated that Castro had merely retired, for a long rest, to Los Teques, about twenty miles from Caracas, leaving Gen. Juan Vincente Gomez, the Vice President, in charge of the Government at Caracas. He stated that a Venezuelan gunboat was due to arrive here soon, but denied that it would bring refugees from Venezuela. He ridiculed the report that Gen. Gomez had threatened to confiscate property, thus causing the flight of wealthy Venezuelans.

Far from being anything extraordinary, the assumption of the Presidency by Gen. Gomez, said Dr. Torres Cardenas, is a thing that has happened twice previously during the administration of Castro, namely, in 1901 and last year. He added that politicians and the wealthy men of Venezuela recognize the necessity of having Castro at the head of affairs.

"Neither I nor Gen. Corao would be here," said Dr. Torres Cardenas, "if there was anything serious in the condition of affairs in Venezuela." He added that he knew nothing of Castro's further plans or of how long he would remain absent from the capital.

The Venezuelans brought twenty-two trunks and strong boxes, which were constantly guarded by attendants. It was said, however, that they contained only baggage belonging to the party, and not State documents or treasure.

CONGRESS AND CONTRACTS.

Private Agreements Contingent Upon Governmental Action Are Worthless.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—In the case of Hazleton vs. Miller the Supreme Court of the United States decided to-day that a contract which is made contingent upon the action of Congress in a given case cannot be enforced.

In this instance Miller agreed in 1902 to sell to Hazleton a certain tract of land in the City of Washington for $9,000, the option running until the expiration of the Congress then in session. The land was part of a tract afterward purchased as a site for a Government Hall of Records, the price paid Miller being $14,395.

Hazleton brought suit for specific performance of contract on the ground that he was entitled to the advance over the price fixed in his option because of services rendered by him in securing favorable consideration by Congress of the site.

The court decided against him on the ground that the contention was contrary to public policy. The opinion was by Justice Holmes, who called attention to a previous case in which it had been held by the court that a contract for a contingent fee in the sale of supplies to the Government could not be enforced.

WHERE a man buys his clothes depends on what kind of clothes he appreciates.

If he is indifferent to distinctive appearance, to refinement and to materials of quality, he will probably not buy here. For him we are not the cheapest.

Yet the man who knows enduring fabrics, enduring tailoring, correct form and the style of the hour considers this the cheapest place to buy.

DIGGING ON THE ISTHMUS.

Chairman Shonts comes back from the Isthmus with the news that Chief Engineer Stevens, who is now carrying on the Panama Canal work with some 23,000 laborers on the pay-roll, was able in the month of March "without making any special effort" to move 240,000 cubic yards of material. It is believed, says Mr. Shonts, that by July or August 40 new steam shovels will be installed, and the Chief Engineer will be "in a position to move approximately 1,000,000 cubic yards a month."

According to Mr. Wallace, the late Chief Engineer, the construction of the canal on a 90-foot level with locks would require the excavation of 100,000,000 cubic yards of earth and rock. One-half of this amount would have to be removed from the summit cut. With this estimate Chief Engineer Stevens has been in substantial agreement. At the rate of 1,000,000 cubic feet a month, with Mr. Stevens's allowance of eight working months to the year, the canal excavation would be completed in twelve and one-half years. At this rate the opening day would fall at least a full Presidential term beyond Mr. Roosevelt's retirement, even if he should be re-elected. The Hon. John Bigelow, in a letter printed in the columns of our neighbor The Sun, says that at the present rate of progress the excavation of a canal at sea level will require forty years. The President and the Secretary of War have apparently decided that it is unwise to attempt a sea-level canal. Last week Secretary Taft told the Senate Committee that the most pressing matter just now was the decision as to the type. He urged upon Congress prompt action, since until it has been definitely decided whether we are to build a canal with locks or a canal at sea level the work cannot be carried forward to advantage. A year ago official assurances were given that there was no hurry about the decision as to the type, since for a long time to come it would be possible to carry on works of excavation and construction applicable to either type of canal.

For nearly four years President Roosevelt has had absolute authority and full power on the Isthmus. It was on June 28, 1902, that the so-called Spooner act authorizing the President to conclude the negotiations with the Frenchmen, and, having concluded them, to construct the canal, was enacted. At the expiration of a period nearly equivalent to a full term of the Presidency reports from the Isthmus are still chiefly made up of statements about sanitation, the construction of the laborers' dwellings, the progress of water-supply work, and the extension of railroad tracks into the cut as a preparation for digging. Incidentally we do hear of digging—240,000 cubic yards in March, for instance.

CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

The majority party in Congress is fussing with the question of how to deal with the scandalous evils of political contributions. It is an ugly job, and the leaders will deserve great credit if they make any approach to efficient handling of it.

We do not mean even to hint that the Republican politicians are in the least worse than Democratic politicians in this matter. No one who knows the political history of this State and this city will think of claiming any higher virtue for one party than for another with regard to the sources or the use of the sinews of party warfare. But it happens that the party in power in the National Government has now and has long had access to means of getting money denied to its rival, and has worked them for all they are worth. For one thing, the party in power fights always and everywhere for the policy of favoritism in taxation, and can expect and extort aid from the beneficiaries of the tariff. That has been the case now for twoscore years, and manufacturers have come to count in the regular expenses of their business the contributions required to shield them from competition and to maintain their measure of privilege. In the next place, it has happened that almost continuously the Republican Party, since the close of the war, has stood for the maintenance of the public credit against more or less direct attacks on it by their rivals. While this was not the case from 1884 to 1892, it was the case before and after that period, and vast business interests have been immediately imperiled by the unfortunate excursions of the Democrats into the regions of unsound finance. Not without some justification, the men in whose hands these interests are placed have contributed to the Republican campaign funds, and naturally have preferred to do so out of corporate treasuries rather than out of their own pockets.

All this makes it hard for the Republicans really to be convinced that the public safety demands the suppression of corporate contributions to party funds, and entire publicity as to all contributions. But they will have to come to it, if not at this session, then in no distant future. The course of the movement in this direction will no doubt be much the same as that which led to the practically complete suppression of enforced party assessments on office holders and employés. Twenty years ago, the politicians of both parties regarded it as preposterous to demand that these classes should be protected by law against such assessments. From the heads of departments to the charwomen and the porters, all were used to paying whatever the managers decided they must, and if they refused or neglected, dismissal or disfavor promptly punished them. To-day this practice is reduced to negligible proportions simply because public sentiment, aroused and educated by agitation of known facts, was too strong to be resisted. A like agitation, heartily engaged in by able and influential men of both parties, is arousing and educating public sentiment in the same way on the matter of party funds. Ultimately it will have the same effect.

FIRE LOSSES IN NEW YORK.

It seems that the fire losses in the Boroughs of Manhattan, Richmond, and the Bronx for last year constitute a "record," showing an increase in number and in total and average destructiveness over those of the preceding year. Doubtless $5,271,955 is a heavy tax to pay for carelessness in building or in managing our dwellings and places of business. But the loss is not so complete as the figures would indicate. As a rule, it may be said that every building burned down is replaced by a better one for which the fire has cleared the ground, and that the chances of destructive fires are much smaller among the buildings of recent than of antiquated construction. Of course, except in the cases of arson, for which last year there were fifty-seven arrests, fire does not necessarily burn those buildings which the owners or occupants would desire to see removed, but a considerable proportion of the burned buildings must have been of that character.

It would be instructive, if we had the means of comparison, to compare the value of the buildings destroyed last year by fire with the value of those deliberately demolished in the same time in the course of public and private improvements. Last year of course was very noteworthy in such demolitions. Conflagrations which should have cleared the sites of the new terminals of the Pennsylvania and of the New York Central would rank very high among the great fires of the city. Yet such conflagrations would have been a clear saving to the projectors of those terminals. If we add to these notable instances the smaller instances of demolition for the sake of reconstruction that are going on all over Manhattan, and more or less in the other boroughs, we should have an imposing array of "destruction of property" which would not properly be destruction at all. Such of the fires we have had as have answered this purpose, as many of them must have done, are not, if unattended with loss of life, to be accounted as calamities. And, in the nature of things, many of them must have been of that character, and are so to be charged to profit rather than to loss.

MR. COLER ON CIVICS.

Mr. Coler dropped into civic ethics, or ethical civics, up at Mount Vernon on Sunday, in a friendly way, but with rather unfortunate results. "For you and me," he remarked, "it would not be right to sell paper and ink as stock and try to give it value by squeezing an exorbitant car fare tax out of the miserably served public."

That a nickel is "an exorbitant carfare tax" for such a ride as one may take for it in New York is a proposition which Mr. Coler is perhaps entitled to maintain, however difficult he might find it to find any other community in which he could do more traveling for the money. But, assuming that exorbitant carfare taxes are squeezed out of the public, and that the public are miserably served, what does that prove? Obviously that the corporations which control transit have made too good a bargain with the "public." They have been better served and have pursued their own interests with more energy and success than have been shown by the appointed guardians of the city's interests. In other words, private interest, according to what is almost an axiom of human nature in its present state of development, is a more efficient incentive than public spirit. We might have no fault to find with this account of the matter, if it were more temperately stated. But when the man who thus exposes the laxity of the guardianship of public interest as opposed to the keenness of the pursuit of private interest makes his exposure a plea for municipal ownership and operation, we are simply lost in wonder at the operations of his intellect, and in a yearning to "feel his bumps."

"THE THEATRE OF LABOR."

The merry meetings of the Central Federated Union every Sunday are fairly sure to produce amusing "copy." Never more so than last Sunday, when the regeneration of the drama, from a point of view as different as possible from that of the projectors of the "National Theatre," was under discussion.

It is the aim, it appears, of an ambitious manager to establish what he calls a "Theatre of Labor" for the production of "labor plays." It was explained by his advocates, including the representatives of the Pressmen and of the Ornamental Iron Workers, that the current drama was composed of "capitalistic plays," and that there ought to be a theatre with the "union label," where organized labor might take its diversion with a good conscience. It is to be feared that there is some truth in this description of the current drama. There, for instance, is that hireling of the capitalist, Shakespeare, with the "unfair" play in which he holds up to actual ridicule that early champion of organized labor Mr. John Cade, and makes fun of his prophecies of the good time coming when the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops, and it shall be felony to drink small beer. His noxious works, we may be sure, would be excluded from the Theatre of Labor. It appears that there is a play even now running at one of the capitalistic theatres which blasphemes to the extent of making the sacred walking delegate himself appear "ridiculous and tyrannical."

Apparently there should be redress for such outrages as these. But there is an Actors' Protective Union represented in the Union, and its delegate vehemently opposed the proposal to admit the "Theatre of Labor," intimating that its projector was himself "unfair." It must be owned that the actors showed their share of the wisdom of this world. Because not all of them could expect employment in the Labor Theatre, and when one theatre was recognized as the Union theatre, the next step would be to denounce all other theatres as unfair. So all unions "affiliated" with the labor theatre were ordered to withdraw from the labor theatre or else from the C. F. U. The outlook is indeed gloomy for the regenerator of the drama by means of a union theatre. But he ought to have foreseen that the melancholy result was bound to ensue upon his efforts.

A NEW CAMPAIGN CRY.

There are pending fifty-eight amendments to the Railway Rate bill, which passed the House all but unanimously, and there are 177 bills amending the revenue laws on the House calendar, of which the House seems unable to pass any, especially not any of the great majority of the 177 which reduce the tariff in one way or another. Can there be any doubt what use is being made of the Railway bill? However honestly it was put forward by the President its effect is to obscure measures of greater and more pressing importance. The House passes a bill which the Senate might as well have initiated, and which it was perfectly well known could not pass the Senate until it was time to adjourn. And the House, which alone can initiate revenue bills, does nothing, after having placed the Senate in a sort of legislative stocks which prevent the Senate from doing anything but talk. It would be amusing if it were not annoying. Such schemes to avoid doing anything can only succeed regarding matters of no intrinsic importance. The tariff is not such. The record is being made by inaction as well as it could be otherwise. With the railway matter botched, and the tariff untouched, the campaign issues are being made in a manner productive of a new cry. "Turn the rascals out!" is likely to be succeeded by "Turn out the Republican do-nothings! give us a measure of economic freedom, and an installment of monetary reform." If the Republicans like this their opponents may be relied upon to be equally pleased.

TO ANXIOUS INQUIRERS.

While the anxiety of multitudes as to friends and relatives in San Francisco is in only too many cases justified, there are certain reassuring facts that should be borne in mind. The chief of these is that no news is not by any means bad news. The telegraph service was at first completely suspended, and there was a considerable time when not even the highly organized and carefully planned resources of the newspapers of the country availed to get direct communication with the desolated city. Very promptly and efficiently the telegraph companies set at work, against almost incalculable difficulties, to re-establish their service. But energetically as this was done, there still remain great obstacles to the receipt and dispatch of messages in and from the city.

The messages from San Francisco and the towns across the bay necessarily have heaped up entirely beyond the power of the companies to handle them quickly, while thousands of messages to the city are directed to homes and offices that have been destroyed and to persons who are homeless, to refugees camped in the parks or fled to other points. To meet this situation the companies have put up alphabetical lists of the names to which telegrams are addressed, that they may be called for, and are hunting names in the registers provided by the authorities in the places of refuge. In the same line, The New York Times has arranged with The Oakland Times to open a bureau of information, at which addresses are filed, and these are published in our columns as received.

Despite all these efforts, it will be seen that answers to telegrams sent to San Francisco are very uncertain, and news from the city may be long delayed, even when the persons to whom the telegrams are sent are safe. When, as was announced yesterday, the War Department cannot maintain prompt telegraphic communication on public business with officers known to be alive and active, and having preference over all others for their dispatches, it is clear that delay in private answers is not necessarily of ill omen. Numerous inquiries received at this office on the subject make this explanation pertinent.

LIVING UP TO ITS MOTTO.

Events at San Francisco caused that weary bird, the phoenix, to work overtime, and the natural protests from the society for the protection of those who must read the newspapers arrived in due course. But the protestants were not altogether in the right, for there was better excuse than usual in such flagrant cases. San Francisco's official seal, as Senator Perkins recalled in his fine expression of gratitude for what the States are glad to do for their suffering sister, shows a phoenix rising from the flames, with the legend, "Oro en paz, ferro en guerra."

We are content to let the phoenix rest, but the peculiar fitness of the motto is worth remarking. Germany's "blood and iron" is well enough for war and conquest. For the triumphs of peace and baffling of fate "gold and iron" is a better prescription. The gold of California's mines lives chiefly in legend and memory, but the gold of its vineyards and citrus groves and Oriental commerce will never be exhausted while the sun shines and the earth yields its produce. To convert this gold into iron skeletons of the homes of trade is the immediate task of the hour. The rising phoenix and the motto are strangely apropos. California through Senator Perkins returned its thanks to the Nation. In turn the Nation may well thank California for living up to its motto. In binding up California's wounds we are but healing ourselves and are showing only enlightened selfishness. For the sanity of mind and body which promotes the recuperative process we are under obligations. If San Francisco had succumbed, if her citizens had but hesitated regarding their policy under adversity, there is not a market place nor a factory which would not have felt the scorching of the flames which now may pass without inflicting serious wounds.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Sanitation in San Francisco.

These emphatic assurances that the health of the people in San Francisco is, on the whole, excellent, and that no signs of anything like an epidemic have yet appeared, are needed chiefly by people with old ideas as to the causes of disease, but it was well to send them out, since such people are very numerous and as many causes of anxiety as possible should be removed. As a matter of fact, certain nervous affections apart, nothing has happened in the stricken city that was likely to produce disease as soon as this, and the real danger is yet to come. It will not be due to the presence of the dead, or directly to the disorganization of the sewer service, with its painfully sensible results, but to the high probability that typhoid and similar maladies will sweep through the refugee camps if they are maintained for more than a few days. The conditions in them as to policing are undoubtedly even worse than existed in the military camps established at the time of the Spanish war, for there is less of discipline among these crowds of men, women, and children than there was among the hastily gathered volunteers, and we all remember how the latter were swept into the hospitals by the hundreds. The "exposure" to which the San Franciscans have been subjected is uncomfortable rather than dangerous, and of course there is nothing in the conditions actually to create typhoid. But almost inevitably a few cases of that fever will be taken to the camps, and the state of affairs in them is such as to make the infection, once started, spread rapidly. This is well understood by some of those engaged in managing the situation, but it would be reassuring to hear that some sanitarian of established reputation had been intrusted with the authority needful to meet the pressing peril. The army officers will do their best, but few of them are really competent experts in this matter, and their ideas as to the proper relations between soldiers and doctors are not apt to be advanced up to "the present state of the art," as illustrated by Japan in her war with Russia, for example. The hasty burials indicate a misapprehension as to where the danger lies. There is justification for the haste, but it is moral, or sentimental, rather than sanitary, and more effort than there has been any hint of in the dispatches should be made to isolate and guard every case of typhoid that existed before the earthquake came. But perhaps this work is going on. San Francisco is noted for disliking to talk about its diseases, just as it always has been for admitting the frequency of its "temblors."

A Situation Slightly Misunderstood.

Most amusing naïveté marks the twenty-five Russian authors who have published in St. Petersburg a resolution "condemning" the inhabitants of the United States for their treatment of Maxim Gorky. It seems that we, through the mouths of "American authors represented by Mark Twain," have done nothing less than offend the literary lights of Russia by our criticism of their dear brother, and, still worse, we have offended "Russian womanhood in the person of Mme. Andreieva." How? Oh, very simply—by "interfering with the private affairs" of the two travelers. Therefore, "we Russian authors are amazed at such disregard of the principles of privacy, recognized by every civilized country, and hereby express our deep indignation." So be it! Let the twenty-five Russian authors be sure that their amazement has been noted, and the expression of their deep indignation must have been a great relief to their minds. Meanwhile Gorky and the friend whom he calls his wife are living in the complete and undisturbed enjoyment of the privacy demanded for them. It was accorded to them by almost unanimous consent the moment their need of it was understood, and it will continue to be theirs as long as they remain in the country, which will be as long as they choose. Nobody is persecuting them and everybody to whom their company is pleasant can have all there is of it without causing any riots or appreciably shaking the pillars of society. When our two guests—self-invited, by the way—go back to Europe, they will receive such welcomes and attentions as Europe deems fit to give them. The assumption that there they will be entertained and fêted by the great and good may please the twenty-five Russian authors, but some of us have been in Europe ourselves and others of us have read about it, and we shall all be vastly surprised if the Gorky-Andreieva combination fares any better in England, France, or Germany than it did here when it comes to public countenance of what the amazed and indignant ones call "their private affairs." In Russia it may be different, but we have something more than a suspicion that even in that strange and confusing land, "womanhood" will not be eager to shower Mme. Andreieva with attentions or to accept her joyfully as a lofty representative. The ordinary proprieties of life are everywhere about the same, however customs may differ.

Some Denials Are Badly Needed.

People have become accustomed, alas, to the automobilist who runs down the more or less humble foot passenger and then puts on speed and hurries away without waiting to learn the extent of the injuries inflicted. This is pretty bad, but it is understandable and, if not humane, is distinctly human. Vastly worse as well as startlingly novel was the conduct of automobilist after automobilist over on Long Island Sunday, for it is said that not until vain appeals had been made to ten of them was one found with heart enough to take to the nearest hospital a young woman who was lying by the roadside with a fractured skull, and to all appearances at the point of death. As it happened, she had herself been thrown from an automobile that had collided with a telegraph pole, and the other automobilists might have been expected to have a special sympathy for one suffering from an accident that could befall themselves any day. But seemingly they did not have a special sympathy, or any sympathy at all. Instead they showed, according to report, a strange coldness and brutality, almost unknown among human kind. It is to be hoped that there is something wrong about this tale, that the automobilists who refuse to interrupt their pleasure journeys long enough to succor the dying had some sort of an excuse or explanation of their course. Otherwise people will get a somewhat unpleasant idea as to the mental and moral qualities developed among automobilists as a class.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—John Sharp Williams's new custom of objecting to all legislation by unanimous consent has spread much havoc among the Nation's Solons. This morning, in accordance with the usual custom, a Congressman who wanted to get a bill passed went to the Speaker's room and asked that potentate if he might be recognized for the purpose in case he arose when the House convened and addressed the Czar in a respectful way.

"I haven't anything to do with it," replied the Czar. "You'll have to ask John Sharp."

Representative Graff, a stalwart Republican from the State of Illinois, blossomed out to-day in a soft gray hat. One of his colleagues, meeting him, looked askance at it, and said:

"What are you wearing that Democratic hat for? Thought you were a Republican."

"Have to," said Graff laconically. "District's doubtful."

Maxime's Escape a Mystery.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In this morning's paper you print a description of Mr. Maxime's escape from the Riga theatre, as related by Mr. Maxime himself. I used to know Riga, but according to this story the town must have changed entirely during the last three years. The theatre, however, is still in the same place as then. It stands in the middle of a little park, and the neighborhood consists mostly of public buildings, restaurants, &c.—no residence district at all. How Mr. Maxime escaped through a trap in the stage and on to the roof of an "adjoining" building is a mystery.

The Blind as Schoolteachers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to Dr. Newel Perry's letter on the "Discrimination Against the Blind," which you published recently, I would like to ask if any Government in the world permits blind men to hold positions of trust?

To me it seems clear that, for New York City to permit blind men to compete in the examinations for public school teachers' positions would be to endanger the public good.

Let us freely extend to the blind our sympathy and pity, but let us not try to benefit them at the expense of the public good.

A REAL SYMPATHIZER.

Clothing for San Francisco Sufferers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is there to be any organized way of sending old clothing to the San Francisco sufferers? San Francisco in Summer is often as cold as New York in March. The money raised will be urgently needed for food supplies, and sufficient clothing could be provided if each housekeeper would send part of the Winter clothing she is laying away.

This has been suggested by one of your correspondents, but I would like to know through whom and in what manner it may be sent.

A Somewhat Inaccurate Prediction.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The weather.—Fair to-day; to-morrow fair and warmer; northerly winds.—This morning's Times.

9 A. M.—Raining pitchforks! Great guns! Cold northeast storm. Why don't you try to be original and have your own predictions instead of following the asinine prognostications of the Weather Bureau—which are always wrong and which cause so much expense, loss, sickness, and death? If they can't do better you had better cut them out altogether.

Advice for San Francisco.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Frame should be the form of construction of San Francisco's new city—frame, not wooden, but steel; the walls themselves being made say of wire mesh, inclosing the entire building and incased in plaster. Masonry walls, when used, should take for their model those of the United States Mint Building. W. D.

An Appeal to Mr. Foley.

THE PRESIDENTIAL TEMPER.

An Observer Sees a Vindictive Spirit in Recent Imbroglios.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The President has recently given the country some exhibitions of vindictive temper for which it is difficult to find an explanation and impossible to find an excuse.

During the last Massachusetts campaign Mr. Whitney reported Mr. Roosevelt as having expressed certain views on reciprocity during an interview in Washington. Mr. Whitney's recollection and understanding of Mr. Roosevelt's utterances were fully corroborated by two gentlemen who were present at that interview.

Let it be assumed, however, that these gentlemen were entirely in error. It would have been sufficient in that case had Mr. Roosevelt said in as emphatic a manner as possible: "Gentlemen, your recollection of what I said is absolutely at fault," or, "You completely misunderstood me." But Mr. Roosevelt was not content with the ordinary forms of courteous retort. He charges these gentlemen with willful and malicious misrepresentation. Whatever Mr. Whitney's faults may be, both his friends and his enemies in Massachusetts know that his word, as also that of his two colleagues, is unimpeachable. Mr. Roosevelt may be entirely correct in his disavowal, and, notwithstanding that he made the same impression on all three of his hearers, he should be given the credit of knowing what he meant to say, even if he did not say it. Conceding this, the positive accusation of malicious and willful prevarication remains purely gratuitous and uncalled for.

Not long since Mr. Roosevelt accepted the resignation of Mr. Wallace as Chief Engineer of the Panama Canal. This resignation was undoubtedly disappointing. It was announced at the time that Mr. Wallace abandoned the Panama undertaking for a better salary. We know now more about the reasons which governed Mr. Wallace's action, and the country at large recognizes that they were neither discreditable nor insufficient. But let it be assumed again that Mr. Wallace should have battled with the adverse conditions which Congressional inquiry has since made public, and that he should have remained at his post. It would have been sufficient in that case to accept his resignation with a dignified expression of regret and censure. Mr. Roosevelt is not content with so impersonal a procedure. Through his Secretary of War, in one of the most scathing communications ever inspired by a President of the United States, he attacks Mr. Wallace's personal and professional reputation, and dishonors and degrades him in the eyes of the world—but only temporarily.

Mr. Roosevelt has recently seen fit to recall our Ambassador to Austria. The particular fault of which Mr. Storer has been guilty is not officially announced. Let it be assumed again that it was a serious one and merited recall. It would seem in that case sufficient to have withdrawn Mr. Storer in accordance with diplomatic usage, summarily, if you please, and even with public censure. But Mr. Roosevelt is not content with taking official life after the manner of the ordinary executioner. He strips his Ambassador of his official rank with a brutality for which diplomatic usage has no precedent. Mr. Storer, absent at the time from Vienna, returns an official outcast. As he is no longer Ambassador, although on the spot, he cannot take official leave of the Emperor, of the Foreign Office, or his colleagues, or even present his own letters of recall. What is the reason for a humiliation so unheard of that official Vienna refuses to become a party to it, and which savors more of personal vengeance than of the impersonal justice of the Magistrate? Whatever Mr. Storer's transgressions, his retirement should have been effected in accordance with established usage, without subjecting him to personal indignities inconsistent with international good manners and injurious to national reputation.

These exhibitions of punishment, coupled with temper, recall Mr. Roosevelt's letter dismissing Mr. Bowen from the Diplomatic Service. Whatever Mr. Bowen's faults may be, no one has ever breathed a word against his honor and integrity. But let it be conceded, once more, that after referring to Mr. Hay the compromising documents found at Caracas, his duty was discharged and that any subsequent action on his part was a breach of executive orders. This, in fact, is the most that can be conceded—that he persisted in bringing to the attention of his official chief irregularities and indiscretions on the part of a diplomatic officer which were subsequently so far substantiated as to be deemed worthy of public censure. These irregularities and indiscretions affected that officer's official and personal character.

Mr. Bowen's fault was excess of zeal for the cleanliness and decency of our Diplomatic Service. Mr. Roosevelt, approving the censure administered to Mr. Loomis, immediately appointed him special Ambassador to France, and branded Mr. Bowen as a traitor. It is unnecessary, in this connection, to discuss the merits of the case. Concede Mr. Bowen's retirement deserved. Why attack his character, which had never been in question, in a letter which for wholesale abuse has no parallel in the official files of Washington. If sentence of death was just, to boil him alive in oil was inhuman.

The above examples of "square deals" are by no means exhaustive. But they are painfully sufficient. When the Judge on the bench or the parent in the nursery loses his temper, justice becomes a byword. Were such things to occur in private life, the sufferers would not show so patient and dignified a silence. They are not wrongs attributable to the man, but to the Chief Magistrate. It is a pity that that great office should cover any man with its immunity. OBSERVER.

Perhaps Underground Chinatown Here

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If Chinatown in San Francisco was largely a hole in the ground, where nobody knows what went on, is it not possible that the same is true here? I remember hearing a well-known man in describing New York say something showing a knowledge of sub-basement and underneath-the-sidewalk opium dens—he died a victim of the opium habit—which would seem to point that way. Isn't it up to the authorities to look into this? L. C.

Where Is the New Party?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In August, 1905, you published an article, "Did Jerome and Parker Plan for a New Party," since which time nothing has been done to upset the power of Tammany Hall and prove that the Tiger does not represent the true Democracy of New York City. Why is it that just before elections there is invariably talk of the formation of a new party, but after election things are allowed to remain as they were? W. H. L.

FINDS GOOD IN DISASTER.

Mr. Wilshire Points to the Demand for Goods and Workmen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your article about the damage done by the earthquake in San Francisco, and wherein you argue that it can be of no benefit to anybody, it seems to me that you do not look at the main proposition which interests a business man to-day—namely, the necessity of a market. If by any method whatsoever, either by war or destruction by earthquakes, or fire, there is a greater demand for goods, then the sellers of those goods are in a position to make a profit where before they were not, and also there are certain workingmen who get jobs where before they were out of a job, or if they were in a job, then the extra demand for their services will enable them to demand higher wages.

The competitive wage system by limiting the laborers to a mere minimum of subsistence necessarily restricts consumption, and we are being continually threatened with overproduction. When a catastrophe occurs like a war or a fire, to that extent it is of benefit to the existing system inasmuch as it affords a remedy for overproduction. Just as a man who is threatened with apoplexy may be benefited by a blood letting.

It is perfectly true there is a loss, and a great loss, to the world, but inasmuch as the main problem to-day is to get a job to produce something for which there is a demand, then whatever causes this demand benefits trade.

Certainly you must admit that nothing benefits our farmers so much as a crop shortage in Europe, and when our farmers prosper the country prospers.

The San Francisco earthquake will do more to continue prosperity than any event that has happened since the Russo-Japanese war. GAYLORD WILSHIRE.

REDUCING GREAT FORTUNES.

Still More Comment on the President's "Advanced Socialism."

From The Toronto Globe.

That there is much in a name is seen by the confidence with which some American politicians come forward to settle or kill President Roosevelt's scheme of dissipating great fortunes by calling it "advanced Socialism." The scheme of dissipating or partly confiscating great fortunes is certainly Socialistic, but cannot be regarded as so advanced or extreme in that direction as a protective tariff or a law against the making of artificial butter. Aggression against the property and the rights of the poor is no less Socialistic than when practiced against the property and the rights of the rich; but the President's scheme may be discussed on its merits independent of any name that may be used to assail it.

From The Houston Post.

That there will be many to regard the President's suggestion as unconstitutional, confiscatory, outrageous, and impracticable, is certain, but notwithstanding the unfavorable comment which the scheme will evoke, the fact remains that in the evolution of finance, industry, and commerce in this country some way must be found to limit fortunes. Already the country is feeling the bad effects of vast wealth concentrated in the hands of the few. The bulk of the wealth is created by the masses, but it finds its way into the hands of the few who have enjoyed special privileges so long that they have come to regard them as vested rights.

From The Chicago Tribune.

President Roosevelt is quoted as saying: "I just put out the inheritance tax idea to start the people to thinking." It is easy to start the people to talking—a mere trifle will do that—but talking does not always ripen into thinking, and thinking into action. The people are fickle. The subject which excites them to-day tires them to-morrow. At the beginning of the week they were discussing the suggestion that great fortunes are unhealthy and should be broken up. In a few days that topic was nearly driven out of mind by the divorce decision of the Supreme Court.

From The Ottawa Free Press.

Considerate and just people will readily accept the view of Mr. Roosevelt that a colossal fortune, transmitted unbroken to one individual after another, is a menace to the public, but it is doubtful if a graduated inheritance tax would remedy the evil and remove the peril. It is, however, in his proposal to discriminate between fortunes honestly got and those dishonestly obtained that the heroism of Mr. Roosevelt is displayed.

Encouraging Unrest.

From The Army and Navy Journal.

One has only to glance at the record of the commerce between the United States and the Philippines to realize that we shall have to give the islanders something additional in the way of trade concessions if they are to be thoroughly reconciled to American control. Our sales to the Philippines have increased only from $4,734,421 in 1902, to $4,748,252 in 1903, to $5,040,579 in 1904, to $5,739,660 in 1905. On the other hand, the imports of the Philippines from countries other than the United States in 1904 amounted to $24,478,311. In 1905 Porto Rico, with less than a tenth of the population of the Philippines, bought $19,000,000 worth of American products, or almost as much as the Philippines took in four years. But Porto Rico has free trade with the United States and is able and willing to buy in our markets because she is permitted to sell here. It was charged during the army occupation of the Philippines that the military administration was harsh and tended to suppress business development, but civil rule has acted as a veritable blight upon the trade and industry of the islands. By removing them from Spanish control we cut them off from a free market for their products without giving them anything in return. The effect of our present commercial policy toward them is to discourage industry, and if there is hereafter any increase in discontent and unrest among the natives it will be traceable to economic rather than to military conditions. In all its dealings with the Filipinos the army stood for the square deal, which is more than can be said for the civil authorities.

Despotism of Jewels.

From The Paris Eclair.

Coquetry and the fashion of unstable forms cannot explain the despotic attraction that precious stones exercise over our senses. Their fascinating power has never ceased. They subjugate and enslave even the most austere, and man esteems as priceless the charm of their yoke. Art strives to discover original reductions, to create virgin enthusiasms, to enrich with new tremors the subtle gamut of our sensations, but without being able to detach us from these necklaces, bracelets, and jewels.

SAN FRANCISCO—APRIL, 1906.

The trusted earth forgets to sleep unmoved,
Forgets a quavering instant, then is still:
And man who trusts in an All-loving Will
Sinks with the mine, baffled and reproved
For too presumptuous faith. The earth forgets—
Does God forget in heaven? Ah, man! too late
You learn the carnal carelessness of fate
That moves unmoved, nor ponders, nor regrets.

Yet, yet some Godhead from this chaos springs!
The unshattered Soul leaps dauntless to rebuild
Her stricken fabric, with a patience skilled
To overcome confusion. Powerless things
Men seem thus smitten, thus assailed, thus killed * * *
Mark where the Soul towers heavenward on new wings!

PLAY OF PUPPY-LOVE AT DALY'S THEATRE

With Bits of Philosophy Thrown in for Good Measure.

ROSENFELD AS OPTIMIST

Defines the Word for Heroine; Also for Broadway Audience—Some Very Bad Acting.

Alice Wendell	Miss Lizzie Hudson Collier
Jack	Wallace Eddinger
Servant at the Wendells'	Andrew Stephens
Gulliver Jackson	Thomas A. Wise
Fanny	Mrs. George Gayler Clark
Arnold Minturn, M. D.	Martin L. Alsop
Norman Grey	J. H. Gilmour
Phyllis Rorke	Miss Kathryn Browne
Harmon North	Oscar C. Apfel
Mrs. Eunice Harriman	Miss Anna Stannard
Polly Nevins	Miss Wynne Vorhees
Kitty Winchester	Miss Genevieve Thomas
Job Richfield	Gerald Griffen
Hannah	Miss Christine Hill
Hattie Drake	Miss Charlotte Walker
Cushman	John E. Ince
Angela Grey	Miss Consuelo Bailey

The fact that stands out most clearly after seeing Mr. Sydney Rosenfeld's play, "The Optimist," is that that peculiar and variable passion generally known under the head of "puppy love" is neither a very interesting nor a very sympathetic subject for treatment on the stage. Or better, perhaps, that it should provide only the secondary interest, if any, to the main theme.

Of this fact Mr. Rosenfeld may already be cognizant. But in his new play he has failed to prevent the experiences of the callow youth with a lady who jilted him (and with several others who subsequently arrive to heal the wounded heart) from occupying the foreground.

He has made a brief excursion into metaphysics, he has endeavored to suggest a not unfamiliar philosophy of life, and he has evolved several situations obviously designed to impress with dramatic clearness the fact that good thought is an active working force, but all these things he has done rather clumsily, rather unconvincingly, and, it seems likely, rather uninterestingly for playgoers in general.

His hero—or rather the man who is intended to occupy the largest share of attention—has a firm conviction that always it is "all for the best." Opposite to him stands a woman who, through disappointment in love, has become more or less of a pessimist. She is supposedly an intelligent woman, but when, for the first time after many years, she is about to meet the man and hears him referred to as an optimist, she is ignorant of the meaning of the word and asks for a definition. This being promptly supplied, the audience, supposedly enlightened, may sit back and take notice.

The Optimist proves to be the close and confidential friend of her young brother. The youth being jilted in love, turns to the older man for sympathy and advice. The latter invites the boy to accompany him home, and introduces him into a bohemian set, where the sister surprises him in the shocking position of being a participant in a beefsteak party. Here a young actress of much vivacity and considerable popularity has already begun to effect the cure which the older man has set about to accomplish.

The sister insists that the boy shall go home with her, he asserts that he is now old enough to take care of himself, and the optimist's good intentions are entirely misunderstood.

Eventually, in a tedious and roundabout fashion, it becomes apparent that in the heydey of his own and the sister's love affair The Optimist has been mistrusted by her because of the appearance on the scene of a little girl for whom he could not account. He insists that he is only the child's godfather, further stipulating that the woman who agrees to marry him must take his word to that effect, without further explanation. This the sister will not do.

In the meantime, however, the brother, having agreed to break with the actress, his first solace, now finds comfort in the presence of the god-daughter. And when the puppy-love suddenly develops into a real passion, it transpires that The Optimist has all along been shielding a dissolute brother from disgrace. Then the couples pair off in the prescribed and agreeable fashion.

Mr. Rosenfeld's play at best would not qualify as an effort of much sincerity, and the acting for the most part does not redeem its qualities of shallow obviousness. He introduces among other characters the elderly sensualist of farce, played with familiar unction by Thomas A. Wise, and the stereotyped actress of popular belief, with free, easy, and buoyant manner, played with a good deal of vivacity and charm by Charlotte Walker, who, however, continues to massacre the English language. Wallace Eddinger is the young man with the first disappointment in love to overcome, and a very agreeable young man he is, generally speaking, although he is forced to indulge in phases of emotionalism not calculated to create much sympathy. Mr. Gilmour's playing of The Optimist is utterly hollow, false, and unnatural, and, with the exception of Gerald Griffin, who plays a bit satisfactorily, the others are either mediocre or downright bad.

"JEANNE D'ARC" AT PROCTOR'S

Stock Company in a New Adaptation of Familiar Play Material.

The first of several promised Jeanne d'Arc plays led off at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre last night in the hands of the Proctor stock company, with Amelia Bingham in the rôle of the martyred maid. The programme says that Lawrence Marston and R. E. H. Greene have compiled this particular version "from fact, fiction, and history." They have arranged their general lore of the subject, however, along the lines of the "Jeanne d'Arc" of Jules Barbier, which Sarah Bernhardt played in this country some ten or twelve years ago. Many playgoers will remember also Fanny Davenport's performance of the same rôle, for which she used an English version by James Aymar Matthews.

The life of the warrior-maid is nothing if not pictorial. The average dramatist who has a try at it is bound to hand over a lot of his piece to the stage manager. In the present instance, between Playwright Barbier, Compilers Marston and Greene, and Stage Manager Roberts, the result is pretty much what might be expected—a semi-historical, pretentiously scenic series of stage pictures, put together around a maiden who walks with uplifted eyes in a perpetual limelight, with voices of the angelic host continually breaking forth in the wings.

The piece has four acts and nine scenes, extending from the visions in the little cottage yard at Domremy, through the walls of Orleans and the cathedral of Rheims, to the public square at Rouen.

These nine scenes have been put on by the Proctor company with much care and a good deal of spirit and color. Miss Bingham's ecstatic and brilliantly clad Jeanne delighted a good-sized audience, and after the stirring battle scene within the walls of Orleans at the close of the second act she had many hearty recalls. A couple of horses with suitable trappings and much "glinting of armor" gave due atmosphere to the piece. The rest of the company, including Louise Randolph as Agnes Sorel, James Young as Thibaut, the young farmer admirer; George Howell as Charles VII., and Robert Cummings as Thouars, were all greeted with approval.

The piece is to be continued at the Fifth Avenue only through the present week.

"LION AND MOUSE" ABROAD.

Charles Frohman Will Produce It in London on May 21.

"The Lion and the Mouse" will be produced in London next month. The date set is May 21, when Charles Frohman will put on the piece at the Shaftsbury Theatre. Edmund Breese and Richard Bennett, who are now playing the two leading male parts at the Lyceum, will go to London soon to play the same rôles in the English production.

There is even a rumor that Grace Elliston will be seen later in London in the rôle of Shirley Rossmore, which she created at the Lyceum last Fall. The other parts will be filled by English players.

There are many surmises on Broadway as to who will replace Mr. Breese and Mr. Bennett in the Lyceum company. The Western "Lion and the Mouse" company, which narrowly escaped the San Francisco disaster, playing in Fresno, Cal., two nights later, may be expected to return to New York at an early date, when its members will be available for the Lyceum production. In the Western company Arthur Byron and George Parsons have been playing Mr. Breese's and Mr. Bennett's rôles.

Much interest attaches to the British production of this piece that has proved so popular in America. It is a question how English theatregoers will like a play whose plot is so essentially and intimately entwined with the peculiarly American relations of wealth and politics.

"THE PIT" REVIVED.

Wilton Lackaye Begins Engagement at Academy of Music.

Wilton Lackaye began a three weeks' engagement at the Academy of Music last evening in a revival of "The Pit," Channing Pollock's dramatic adaptation from Frank Norris's novel. Many of the original cast were still seen in their old rôles, Jane Oaker appearing in her old part of Laura. The big stage of the Academy gave every opportunity possible for an effective staging of "the pit" scene, which created a sensation when the piece was first produced.

In the rôle of Curtis Jadwin, Mr. Lackaye seemed to win his audience from the first, and in the strong speech in the fourth act aroused the house to enthusiasm. Others who pleased were Walter Pennington as Sheldon Corthell, A. H. Stewart as Samuel Gretry, and Beulah Watson as Page Dearborn.

"The Pit" will be continued for two weeks, after which, for the final week of the engagement, Mr. Lackaye will appear in a revival of "Trilby."

TO GIVE A PLAY IN GAELIC.

Philo-Celtic Society Will Produce Dr. Hyde's "An Posadh."

The dramatic section of the New York Philo-Celtic Society will produce, in Gaelic, on Saturday evening, "An Posadh" at the Lexington Avenue Opera House. It is a one-act drama by Dr. Douglas Hyde, President of the Gaelic League, who is now lecturing in this country in the interests of the Irish literary revival.

The English name of the piece is "The Marriage." It deals with the wanderings of Raferty, the blind minstrel of Connaught, in the days of O'Connell. The drama shows the Irish people in their everyday life. New dances, or at least old ones revived by the Gaelic League, will be introduced.

Dr. Hyde, who is now in Chicago, has sent word to the society that he will be present to witness the production.

Tickets may be had at any time at the rooms of the Philo-Celtic Society, 341 West Forty-seventh Street, or at the Opera House.

WILL REACH THE POLE BY AIRSHIP—WELLMAN

Outlines His Plans on the Eve of Departure.

PRESIDENT'S BON VOYAGE

After the Tests Are Made the Party Expects to Start on the Arctic Flight in August.

Walter Wellman, who is going to try this Summer, to reach the North Pole by means of an air ship, will sail for Europe this morning on the Kaiser Wilhelm II.

"Of course, I expect to reach the Pole," said Mr. Wellman confidently at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, while preparing to leave the hotel for the steamer. "My friends in America will know of my success almost as soon as my ship circles above the long-sought-for spot, for the news will be sent by wireless telegraphy, so you see I will not be utterly isolated from the civilized world."

Maxwell J. Smith, a wireless telegraph expert who has had considerable experience in this country, has been selected to be one of the party of five who will sail on the ship. He will start for Europe within a week, and will assist Mr. Wellman in Paris in making final preparations and gathering the necessary scientific apparatus. Mr. Wellman will be accompanied to-day by Major Henry B. Hersey, who will represent the United States Weather Bureau and also the National Geographical Society. Major Hersey has recently been Weather Bureau Inspector of the West, located at Milwaukee. He said last night that this would be his first arctic experience.

"I have seen pretty cold country and rough weather in my life," added Major Hersey, who, by the way, was a Rough Rider with President Roosevelt, "and I have no fears of an arctic trip."

President Roosevelt has known Walter Wellman intimately for a long time, and just before coming here, Mr. Wellman had a long talk with the President on his novel polar expedition. Late last night, the following telegram reached Mr. Wellman at the hotel:

> My Dear Mr. Wellman: I earnestly wish you all success in your enterprise and trust for your safe return. With warm regards, believe me, sincerely yours,
> THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Besides Mr. Wellman, Major Hersey, and Mr. Smith, two Frenchmen will be taken on the trip. One will be Gaston Hervieu, one of the most expert aeronauts in Europe and an engineer of ability. The fifth man will be another aeronaut and mechanic to be selected after Mr. Wellman reaches Paris.

"Besides these five men," said Mr. Wellman, "the immediate members of the expedition will include several others. Dr. W. N. Fowler of Bluffton, Ind., will be the physician and surgeon; Felix Riesenberg of Chicago, a former member of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, will have special charge of the nautical instruments; Alexander Liwenthal, who was associated with Count Zeppelin in the famous airship experiments in Germany and Switzerland, will join the party in Paris. We are also going to take an Adirondack guide. Francis H. Buzzacott is the man. His father was a guide, and he has had experience in arctic and antarctic regions."

Mr. Wellman said that the entire party will assemble at Tromsoe, Norway, early in June. With ten Norwegian mechanics and workmen, the party will include about twenty men, exclusive of the crew of seventeen on the ice steamer Frithjof, which has been chartered for two years.

"The first section of the party will leave Tromsoe for Spitzbergen early in June, and the second section about June 20,'" added Mr. Wellman. "The latter place is 600 miles from Tromsoe, and the north pole is also 600 miles from Spitzbergen, so the latter place, which is our headquarters for the start, is our halfway house, you see. The mechanics will build at Spitzbergen a big house for the balloon, and toward the end of July we hope to make our first experiments with the airship.

"We are carrying to Spitzbergen 100 tons of sulphuric acid and 65 tons of iron filings, with which to make our hydrogen gas. We cannot make tests with the inflated balloon in Paris because the atmospheric conditions are so different. At Spitzbergen we will get, during the Summer, practically the same temperature that we will encounter at the pole—about freezing point. Of course, if any defect should be found in the ship the trip would have to be postponed, but if everything works right the start for the pole will be made as early as possible in August.

"How long do we expect to be gone? Well, that depends upon the winds and unforseen circumstances. If I get to the pole it ought to be in from two to seven days. As the air ship will be equipped with two motors it will travel from twelve to nineteen miles an hour. It is built, you see, on entirely different principles from any other airship. All previous ones have been designed for speed only, and while my ship will weigh but little more than the famous Lebaudy airship, which traveled 100 miles, it will carry vastly more weight. We will carry provisions for seventy-five days and 5,500 pounds of gasoline. That will be enough to take us 1,800 miles, so with everything going our way, we can sail to the pole and home again without landing. It will depend entirely upon the winds we encounter at the pole whether we return to Spitzbergen or not. We will make for the nearest point of land that is available."

Mr. Wellman will take with him two motor sledges, each weighing 200 pounds, so in case the airship collapses on the ice it will be possible "to go home as slow freight," as Mr. Wellman expressed it. "We are carrying a return ticket with us, and we hope to use it," he exclaimed.

One of these motor sledges, recently finished in Paris, has been tried out recently in Norway and gave satisfaction. The second has been built in this country and will be shipped this week. It will be taken to Norway for tests. These motor sledges have 3½ horse power engines and are made to tow arctic sledges which will be carried along.

In order to facilitate the receipt of wireless telegraph messages from the airship, two wireless telegraph stations are to be erected, one at Hamerfest, Norway, and the other on the steamer Frithjof, at Spitzbergen. If the airship reaches the pole, news will be sent through the air by Mr. Smith to the station at Spitzbergen, then it will go to Hamerfest, where it will be sent by cable to America.

Mr. Wellman said that while in Paris he will make from eight to a dozen balloon ascensions. He is a member of the Aero Club of France, and will use the club balloons. George Juchmes, the pilot of the Lebaudy airship, has offered Mr. Wellman the use of his big balloon, and Santos-Dumont has offered to teach Mr. Wellman something of the mysteries of aeronautics.

"I heard from Louis Godard this week by cable," said Mr. Wellman, "and he says the work is progressing very satisfactorily. It will hold 224,000 cubic feet of gas. It will have an inclosed canvas cabin, in which will be the engine room, sleeping quarters, and there will be decks fore and aft. Its total lifting power will be 16,000 pounds. The frame, the anchor, and the ropes will be of steel, and the machine itself will weigh 7,500 pounds."

Mr. Wellman said he would fly an American flag from his airship, and he also carries the colors of the New York Motor Club, some of whose members tendered him a parting reception last night.

FOR ARTS CLUB LIBRARY.

"By the Lotus Pool" Pleases Carnegie Lyceum Audience.

A series of three benefit performances was begun last night at the Carnegie Lyceum for the benefit of the Art Library Fund of the National Arts Club. Two plays were given. W. S. Gilbert's "Pygmalion and Galatea" preceded a sixth century curtain raiser, "By the Lotus Pool," described as a "romantic sketch." It was written by Edwalyn de Kay, (Mrs. Charles de Kay,) who played the feminine rôle, Theodora, chief dancer in the circus, and was staged for the first time.

The scene of the play is laid in Constantinople, and Justinian the Great, the Byzantine Emperor, disguised as Tarquin, one of the lion tamers in the Hippodrome, (Vaughan Trevor,) wins the love of Theodora. As Tarquin he is supposed to be condemned to death by the Emperor, who at this time sends for the dancer to appear before him. There she appeals for the life of her lover, rejects the proffered affection of the monarch, who then, sure of the sincerity of her affection, claims her as his Empress. A large pool in the centre of the stage, filled with pink lotus blossoms, and around which the play is acted, gives it its name. Mrs. de Kay made a beautiful Theodora in her flowing draperies, and was equally lovely as Galatea.

The other players in the second play were: Pygmalion, Edward Fales Coward; Cynisca, Miss Collins; Daphne, Mrs. William H. Judson; Myrine, Miss Effie V. R. Waddington; Chrysos, Robert B. Shepherd; Leucippe, Vaughan Trevor.

The incidental music was composed and the play rehearsed by Miss Laura Sedgwick Collins. A number of well-known artists and literary people were among the patrons. The performance will be repeated this evening and Wednesday afternoon.

ANNIVERSARY DINNER OF ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY

Organizations Celebrate Its One Hundred and Twentieth Year.

PITY FOR SAN FRANCISCO

Sir Percy Sanderson, Jerome K. Jerome, and Other Noted Englishmen Praise Our Institutions.

England's sympathy for the earthshaken and fire-swept city of San Francisco was expressed last night when the St. George's Society of New York dined at the Waldorf-Astoria in honor of the one hundred and twentieth anniversary of its birth.

The British Consul General, Sir Percy Sanderson, responding to the toast, "His Majesty's Representative," praised the American Nation for its courage in meeting the calamity and its promptness in relieving the unfortunate.

"I can not sit down," said Sir Percy, as he was about to close his talk, "without paying a tribute to the courage and devotion of the American people, who are meeting this great calamity with a promptness and generosity that have excited the admiration of the entire world. It is needless for me to speak of British sympathy, for the interests of England and the United States are interwoven as those of no other nations."

Lieut. Col. Gleichen, the British Military Attaché at Washington, spoke on "The Army," and took occasion to compliment the conduct of the American officers and troops in the fire at San Francisco.

"I am certain," he said, "that in San Francisco, where the American soldiers have just been so active, that British soldiers could have done no better—and that is about as high a compliment as I could pay."

to another famous occasion when he said he thought he had made a great success in an after-dinner speech, but that others did not, spoke of the personal relief he had felt on hearing of the safety of some of his own relatives.

"A few days ago," he said, "we were sympathizing with our Italian friends in the troubles resulting from the eruption of Vesuvius. Now we are called upon to mourn for a much greater trouble at home. I have not been in a very good humor in the last few days, for it was only yesterday that I learned of the safety of some of my own people who were in San Francisco."

A telegram from Admiral Dewey, expressing regrets at not being able to attend the dinner, called the battle of Manila to Rear Admiral Coghlan's mind, and he told the story of it, much to the delight of the diners. Capt. Ryan, British Naval Attaché at Washington, said:

"I hear some talk of the United States building a greater and a more powerful ship than the Dreadnaught, and that it will be called the Constitution. I am sure that with the Dreadnaught and the Constitution in the same battle line, no sea force could stand up against them."

Jerome K. Jerome was called upon to respond to the toast, "The Ladies." He said he didn't know why he had been chosen. He gently chid his hosts for "putting the women in boxes" and not letting them sit at the feast with the men. Mr. Jerome told three or four jokes. This was one:

His wife he said was listening to one of his lectures not long ago, when a man beside her, not knowing she was the lecturer's wife, turned to her and asked:

"When's he goin' to talk about himself?"

"Not at all," she said.

"Not talk about himself!" the man exclaimed. "Why, who do you think that is?"

"That's Jerome K. Jerome."

"Jerome K. Jerome," he repeated in disgust. "Why, I thought it was the Attorney chap."

Mr. Jerome said he thought it would be a good thing if man gave woman a little better chance at running the world, as man had been trying it a long time, and hadn't reached perfection yet.

President Darrell told of the charitable work the society had done in the last year. He said they had fed 5,185 men, given lodgings to 2,349, paid the rent of 255 families, and supplied clothing to 978 men and women. Among the guests were the Rev. D. Parker Morgan, Japanese Consul General Uchida, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Sir C. Purdon Clarke, Col. William Jay, Philip Livingston, Stephen H. Olin, and Melville E. Stone.

FIVE FAVORITES BEATEN IN MUD AT AQUEDUCT

The Two-Year-Old Gambol Was the Single Winning Choice.

HERMITAGE TOOK THE STAKE

Kenilworth Stable's Colt Made All the Pace, and Was First for Peconic Handicap.

The fortitude of racegoers had the first real and severe test of the season in New York, when, at the Aqueduct track yesterday, the regulars who gathered, in spite of the dismal weather conditions, went through an afternoon of disaster, which closed with a record of five beaten favorites. The regulars made up about all the attendance, for the cold rain that fell throughout the day checked anything that might have resembled popular support, and left the grand stand and clubhouse to a crowd of about 3,500 weather-proof professional bettors. The track was deep in slushy mud, but scratches were few, notwithstanding the treacherous going.

The one reverse for the betting ring was when David Gideon's two-year-old Gambol got home winner of the third race, this being a four-and-a-half-furlong sprint for selling-class two-year-olds. Gambol started favorite, being backed on private form, but the result was another reverse for public form, as Gambol beat horses that had showed fair races at the earlier meetings, and which carried the money of the form followers. Isidore Hirsch, which was backed on his previous running, was out in front as a contender with Gambol nearly all the way, and showed in front for a time, but Gambol held him safe through the closing strides, and won rather handily by a length and a half, while Isidore Hirsch got the place, far off before Chamblet, third.

The one stake race of the programme, the Peconic Handicap, at seven furlongs, for three-year-olds, brought out a field of only five runners, with the public support divided between Inqisitor and Israfel, which started the choices in the order named. The result was about as disastrous as possible for the bettors, as Hermitage, one of the outsiders, went on in front from the break, and, after making about all the running, won cleverly from Inquisitor, which just managed to beat Israfel for the place. Battleaxe, well backed, went wide at the head of the stretch and lost whatever chance he may have had by the detour he made.

The other winners were second choices, with the single exception of Red, White and Blue in the steeplechase, which was third choice to Tom Cogan and Saltine. Red, White and Blue made the pace and lasted in front to win, ridden out, from Saltine, while the odds-on favorite, Tom Cogan, finished a poor third. W. C. Daly won his first race on a New York track since early last Fall, when Veronese led the field home in the first race. Masaniello, after being all but left at the post in the fifth event, ran through the crowd from far in the rear and won a creditable contest from Lawsonian. Fay took the last purse in a smart finish with the favorite, Clare Russell. Summaries:

OLYMPIC CONTESTS BEGIN.

Minor Sports Occupy the Day—Swimmers Compete To-day.

ATHENS, April 23.—Actual competition in the Olympic Games began to-day with the minor events of the big programme that has been arranged. Football, lawn tennis, shooting, cycling, and gymnastics occupied attention, the Stadium being given over to the gymnastics and the other contests being conducted at the Zappeion. The gymnastics proved of little attraction to the populace, who thronged the Zappeion to overflowing and left the huge Stadium almost without any attendance.

The Swedish team and the Germans were the principal performers at the Stadium, while the entry at the Zappeion was of a fairly cosmopolitan character. No Americans, however, competed at either place, though the Anglo-Saxon interest was represented by the Britons, who figured noticeably well in the fencing contests.

The Americans put in the day with some strenuous practice at their specialty, and had quite a gallery of spectators watching and applauding their efforts. The speed and agility they display in both track and field contests is amazing to the more lethargic Continentals, and they are favored even over the English runners and Irish jumpers to win in these contests. Even in the strictly Grecian games, the javelin throwing and the discus throwing, they show a surprising skill, while with the weights they attain an excellence that bodes ill for the German and Hungarian athletes who have been counting to win these events.

While it is now certain that the four Americans who are indisposed will all be able to compete, it is not believed that any one of them can do anything like justice to their capabilities. The members of the team speak most regretfully of the illness of Parsons¼ to whom they looked to win the 800-meter event, and of Hillman, whom they regarded as sure to take the 400 meter. However, they are hopeful that Lightbody will maintain their reputation for them. Mitchel is in a poor way, and Moulton far from right.

A reception was tendered to the team to-night by James E. Sullivan, the American representative, at his hotel. All the athletes attended, with a large coterie of their friends. They all continue to be very happily impressed with the arrangements made for them and with the cordiality of their welcome. They look forward to the commencement of the actual contests on Friday with eagerness.

The swimmers—Daniels, Schwartz, Spencer, and Bornaman—begin their competition to-morrow, when the water sports are scheduled. All are in good shape.

RACING YACHTS FITTING OUT.

Were Begun Preparatory to Early Start of Busy Season.

In the various shipyards about New York work was begun yesterday on a number of well-known boats to fit them for the coming season. With the building of new yachts that is being rushed to completion for delivery in the first two weeks of May every yard has as much as it can handle, presaging beyond question an exceptional year in every way.

A rush order has been received at Jacob's yard to finish work on Sieglande, George W. Hopkins's new auxiliary yawl launched a week ago, to fit her for a cruise to the Bay of Fundy. Fern and Gertrude III., the new yachts that were to be launched last week, will go over about Thursday, while the new 27 footers will be launched and possibly Effort.

A most interesting arrival at Jacob's yesterday was Rainbow. Commodore Vanderbilt has sent her up to be overhauled preparatory to the racing season. Not having been in commission last year a lot of work is needed to whip her into shape for Charley Barr to get the best out of her. Both Virginia and Mineola are already there, but work has not been begun on either and probably will not be on Virginia. The fourth of the class, Yankee, is undergoing fitting at Tebo's in Brooklyn.

Sybarita lies beside Rainbow awaiting her turn to be overhauled. She will be ready early to meet Vigilant in the first races of the year. The latter is at New London and will be ready for the early June schedule. Work is also going forward on Isolde at Greenpoint and Eelin at Hawkins's yards. The big schooners are also well represented there.

Elmina II. and Katrina are nearly ready to be launched there, while Corona is finished at Lawley's. Tebo is at work on Rear Commodore Husted's Crusader II., but Murial and Valmore have not begun to fit as yet. Venona is ready to go on the ways at Jacob's and with her Richard Mansfield's Amorita, Sea Fox and Paladin. The auxiliary Cherokee is also overhauling there and at Wood's yard just beyond Tekla is being fitted for Vice Commodore Willets of Larchmont.

There are a number of interesting boats at Wood's to be commissioned at once. H. Mason Raborg's Canada cup winner lies there with the new Gardenia, which she will race, and the sloops Kestrel, Spasm, Dodger, and Pauktauk. Perhaps the most interesting boat in one sense at City Island is S. E. Vernon's Vivian, which is having an entirely new sail plan prepared for her, and will be an entirely different boat this year.

At Hansen's yards interest centres in the new freak schooner Pagan, the smallest schooner ever built, and Sayonara, which is being converted into a yawl. These are a small proportion of the sail craft that are refitting, to say nothing of the fifty or more steam yachts that are gradually being put in shape.

Announcement was made yesterday of the sale of Amos T. French's Linnet and W. D. Guthrie's Maid of Meudon, two of the New York thirties. This makes six that have changed hands this year. Maid of Meudon was bought by E. C. Miller and Linnet by a Hartford Yacht Club member.

KEEN HORSE SHOW RIVALRY.

A. G. Vanderbilt and W. H. Moore Will Compete in Brooklyn.

The annual horse show of the Brooklyn Driving Club will open to-night at the Club House, Prospect Park Plaza. Many of last week's successful exhibitors at Durland's and Boston have been entered. Alfred G. Vanderbilt and W. H. Moore, who led the winners at Durland's and Boston, respectively, have made a number of entries and with many other prominent exhibitors on the catalogue the competition promises to be keen.

Mr. Moore will show his $15,000 carriage horse, Forest King, which he did not send to Boston, with the hope of winning the $500 challenge cup for gigs. Mr. Vanderbilt won this class last year with Rustling Silk and if he wins again the trophy becomes his permanent property. Mr. Vanderbilt has entered Rustling Silk again, together with The Youngster, both of which secured blue ribbons at Durland's last week. The other prominent entries in this class are: Miss G. Gilbert's The Baron, Miss M. C. Maxwell's Adonis, and Mrs. E. R. Ladew's Sancton Squire.

The competition for the Whip Club's $500 challenge cup for tandems, promises to be equally keen. Herbert L. Pratt and Jay F. Carlisle have each won the trophy twice, which must be won three times before becoming the property of the exhibitor. Each has two entries this year. Mr. Pratt will probably show Lady Eocene and Lady Barbara, which won last year and Mr. Carlisle's team will be Eloquence and Revenue, winners of the championship at the last National Horse Show. Mr. Vanderbilt's entry will be Rustling Silk and The Youngster. Mr. Moore will be represented by Foraker and Empress. Miss M. C. Maxwell will show Venus and Adonis. Philip Livingston's team will be King Christmas and Santa Claus, and Mrs. Ladew's, Clarice and Mystery.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

The bidding up of selling race winners which distinguished the opening days of the Aqueduct meeting was resumed yesterday, when there were bids for the winners of both the selling races on the flat. William Hueston's Masaniello, winner of the fifth race, in which he was entered to sell for $800, was bid up and bought for $1,400 by J. L. McGinnis, owner of Lawsonian. David Gideon bid in his own colt Gambol, at $1,305, in the third race, after an advance of $800 over the selling price, by Joe Marone. Mr. Gideon later sold the horse to P. S. P. Randolph for $2,100.

Sewell, rider of Isidore Hirsch in the third race, made a complaint of foul riding to the stewards against Miller, who rode Gambol, the winner, alleging that Miller had crossed over on Sewell's mount at the finish. The complaint was dismissed, and the horses placed as they finished, but W. S. Vosburgh, one of the stewards, took occasion to visit the jockey's room latter and warn Miller concerning his riding in future.

The largest single commission reported to have been placed in the future betting on the Spring handicaps was bet on the Western horse Ram's Horn for the Brooklyn Handicap on Saturday night in the future book operated from Cincinnati by G. C. Bennett and B. J. Weller. The amount of the bet, made for the Williams stable, owner of the horse, was $2,000, at 8 to 1, or $2,000 against $16,000. As an earlier commission of a smaller sum had just been accepted from the West, Ram's Horn was cut to 6 to 1 in the betting, this making him practically the favorite for the race at the present time.

Jockey Walter Miller, the Harlem boy under contract to the stable trained by Thomas Welsh, led the riders at Aqueduct yesterday with two winning mounts, Veronese and Gambol.

QUAKERS TIE GIANTS FOR BASEBALL LEAD

Philadelphia Wins, but Champions Stopped by Rain.

CLEVELAND IS BEATEN AGAIN

Athletics Still First Among Americans, with Three Teams Even for Second Place.

The Philadelphia team placed itself on an equal footing with the Giants yesterday, the Quakers shutting out Boston, while the world's champions were shut out by rain. Pittsburg and Chicago, which had no schedule engagement, are now third and fourth respectively, while the Bostons, who started off the season by winning four games from Brooklyn and led the league until they met Philadelphia, are fifth in the race. In the American League only two games were played yesterday, both in the West, the results of which made quite a change in the standing. Philadelphia is still in the lead, with Washington, Detroit, and Chicago on even terms for second. Cleveland's defeat compelled Lajoie's men to fall back two places, while St. Louis's victory over Detroit makes Boston the tail-ender.

SUTTON BEATS SCHAEFER.

Chicago Player Gets Second Money in Billiard Tournament.

George Sutton won second money in the 18.2 balk-line billiard championship of the world tournament last night in the Concert Hall of Madison Square Garden by defeating Jacob Schaefer in the play-off of the tie by the one-sided score of 500 to 287. Sutton, by defeating Champion Willie Hoppe with the world's record average of 100, became a prominent factor in the tournament, and his work with the cue last night left little to be desired. Only once during the contest was the winner headed, and then for one inning only, but at all stages of the contest he demonstrated that he was Schaefer's master, last night at least.

His best effort was 191, made in the eighth inning, which gave him a commanding lead and at the same time abundance of confidence. It was a brilliant performance and compared favorably with any made during the entire tournament.

Schaefer was not in good form, the cold, damp atmosphere seeming to affect him, and he missed shots which would ordinarily have been easy for him. In addition to this, the ivory balls broke very erratically and compelled him to attempt almost impossible shots. It was not until his last inning that he was seen to advantage. Although hopelessly beaten, he never lost his nerve, and gathered 107 by the most delicate nursing of the contest.

The tournament, which closed last night, was the most successful ever held in this city. The total net receipts were in the neighborhood of $10,000, including $3,000 purse and $1,750 entrance fees. Of this sum George Sloson will receive about $4,000 for winning the tournament; Sutton's share will be about $2,500; Schaefer will get about $1,500; Willie Hoppe's end of the receipts will be about $1,200, and Louis Cure, the Frenchman, will take back to France with him about $800 in addition to his expense money.

Sutton won the bank and ran 28 points before missing a long single cushion shot, which had become necessary through the balls freezing. Schaefer replied with 10. In his fifth inning Sutton ran 40 points, carrying his score of 99, before failing on a single-cushion draw, which missed by a close margin. Schaefer gave a pretty exhibition with the globes in the seventh inning, making 57 points, which was the highest run of the game up to that time.

Sutton secured possession of the table for a long stay in the eighth inning. He scored rapidly and amassed 191 points in brilliant style. His position playing was almost perfect, while his control of the cue ball was marvelous. While not displaying the delicacy of touch that characterizes Schaefer's game, he showed that his reputation as a billiard expert was well founded. With the score at 125 the balls broke badly, and Sutton was compelled to play all around the table before getting the spheres together again. The 150-point mark was reached by a left-hand draw which drew applause from his opponent.

In the nineteenth inning Sutton essayed a draw, which was miscalculated, the cue ball missing the second ivory by a hair's breadth, bringing his long inning to a close.

Sutton again found the balls to his liking in the eleventh inning and put together 53, and totaled 31 in his sixteenth inning. Schaefer made 107 points in which he executed fully a dozen masse shots, all of which enabled him to hold the balls together. Sutton ran out the necessary 28 points in the seventeenth inning, winning the game by 213 points. The score:

G. Sutton—28 0 18 13 40 13 0 191 7 26 53 34 11 6 1 31 28. Total—500. Average—29 2-17. High runs—191, 53, 40, 34.

PIONEER RUNS IN THE RAIN.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt Drives in First Trip o Ardsley.

The road coach Pioneer, driven by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, started off promptly at 10 o'clock yesterday morning from the Holland House, bound for the Ardsley Club. It was raining hard at the time, but not one of the passengers who had seats for the opening run of the season, was missing. Mrs. T. J. Oakley Rhinelander occupied the box seat beside Mr. Vanderbilt.

Center Hitchcock engaged the coach for the day, and among his guests were Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, Mrs. Newbold Morris, Monson Morris, and R. Baldwin. The going was pretty heavy at times, but the coach pulled up before the Ardsley Club on time, and after luncheon the return trip was made safely and without incident, arriving exactly at 6 o'clock at the Holland House, on time to the minute. The coach to-day will be driven by Goadby Loew, and A. E. Gallatin will entertain a party of friends.

No Dates for Douglass Park.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 23.—The Kentucky State Racing Commission, just organized here, to-day refused to grant dates to the Western Jockey Club for a race meet at Douglas Park in Louisville. The application had been made for dates beginning May 12 and running till June 15. Chairman Jack Chinn stated that the commission would refuse to grant any dates that would cause two tracks to operate in Kentucky at the same time.

The Western Jockey Club has just completed a new steel grandstand at Douglas Park, and has expended in improvements at the course $210,000 to date. Douglas Park is at present the only track in the Central West controlled by the Western Jockey Club.

Picked Up on the Diamond.

After winding up with the Philadelphia team next Saturday, the champion New Yorks will go to Utica to play a game with the New York State League team of that city on Sunday. The up-State "rooters" are planning to give the world's champions a cordial reception.

"Dan" Brouthers, a member of the famous "Big Four" of the eighties, is still held in high regard by club officials of this city and those who remember his remarkable defense of first base and his sterling qualities as a batsman. "Big Dan" is still on the active list and besides owning the franchise of the Newburg Club of the Hudson River League, plays regularly at first base. The Giants on their return from Boston on May 5 will stop over at Newburg the following day, Sunday, to play Brouthers's team.

Although Mathewson, the National League's star pitcher shows the effects of his recent illness, he is impatient to get into the box again. To an inquiry yesterday as to when he would resume pitching he replied, "I'll be there pretty soon."

Abbaticchio, the Boston National League Club's clever infielder, evidently intends to stick to his original resolution and retire from the game for good. He has just secured a license for a hotel in Latrobe, Pa., and at a recent game in Pittsburg between Pittsburg and Cincinnati teams, "Batty" said positively that he was done with baseball after fifteen years' service.

Short Stop Dahlen can resume play with the Giants to-day. His two days' suspension for rather violently and unnecessarily objecting to a ruling of Umpire Conway in a game with Brooklyn last week ended yesterday.

The Greater New Yorks after playing to-day in Philadelphia go to Washington for four games. Next Monday and Tuesday Griffith and his men will begin a long campaign at home, competing up to June 2.

The first conflict of the season of the Nationals and Americans in New York will occur on May 4 and 5, when the world's champions play the Bostons and the Greater New Yorks and the American League Champions will meet.

On Decoration Day the Greater New Yorks have the field to themselves here, playing two games with the Washingtons. The New York Nationals will entertain the Brooklyns in two games at Washington Park.

Gessler, first baseman of the Brooklyn Club, has been traded to the Chicago National League Club for Pitcher Knoll, who is said to be quite a prominent pitcher from the minor league ranks. Jordan, it is understood, will take Gessler's place at the initial base.

BAIL FOR AUTOISTS MADE EASY BY BONDS

Speed Violators May Carry Power of Release with Them.

HOW THE PLAN WILL WORK

Surety Bonds Being Issued This Week in Sets of Five—Limited to Club Members.

Members of the Automobile Club of America, it was announced yesterday, will be the first to reap the advantages of the amended law recently passed by the Legislature, which permits automobilists to offer as bail a surety company bond. In other words, when a motor user is arrested for alleged violations of the law he will no longer be obliged to put up his machine for security or offer cash bail, provided, of course, that he is prepared beforehand with one of these surety bonds.

The work of getting the bonds printed and arranging other details has practically made the law inoperative until this week. The bonds are now being issued by the National Surety Company. President William B. Joyce said yesterday that extreme care would be employed in issuing them because if a motorist should jump his bail the bond would be immediately forfeited and the surety company would be called upon to settle. As the result of conferences held between the officers of the surety company and the Automobile Club of America, it has been decided to restrict the bonds, at present, to the members of the club. Affiliated clubs, however, will undoubtedly receive the same consideration, and motor owners who are properly introduced by club members may also obtain the bonds.

Books are being issued, each containing five bonds. A fee of $20 a year is charged for the bonds, and each one bears the signature of the person to whom it is issued for purposes of identification. When a man is arrested and has been wise enough to carry the blank bond instead of a $100 bill or more with him, he can sign his own name as the principal, and then the name of the surety company, thus making himself a duly appointed attorney in fact of the company. In other words, he really represents the company for the purpose of becoming surety on his own bond. Each bond is good for a sum not exceeding $500, and is good for one years from its date of issue.

Surety company bonds are accepted for bail in many cases, but when the effort was made over a year ago by the Automobile Club of America to have local Magistrates accept similar bonds for violations, it was met by a firm refusal. President Dave Hennen Morris said yesterday that the subject was discussed at length with District Attorney Jerome and the City Magistrates, but they all refused to consider it.

"It was, therefore, necessary to have the bill put through the Legislature," said Mr. Morris. "Mr. Jerome was perfectly agreeable to this, and the club did all that was possible toward securing the passage of the bill. It is now possible for a man to carry his own bail bond with him. He can also bail his chauffeur or his friends, if he should happen to meet them in difficulties. The bill removes the troubles incident in obtaining cash bail, for very often the man arrested has not the sufficient amount of money, and, unless he is willing to leave his car, he must undergo a long wait in the station house before securing the money or finding a friend to bail him out.

"By limiting the issuance of the bonds to club members or other responsible persons the surety company is practically protected against loss, for should a member of the club jump his bail after having been released on a bond the Automobile Club could make a very drastic example of him. In return for the greater convenience that this bill gives an automobilist when arrested, there is little fear that any one will go to such extremes as to require the forfeiture of his bond."

While the bond of any surety company that complies with the regulations of the New York State law may be accepted for bail, the National Surety Company is the only one thus far that is supplying bonds. It is of still further interest to autoists to know that the privileges conferred by these bonds will be recognized in Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Ohio, Wisconsin, Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, and California.

BOWLERS AGREE TO WAIT.

Likely to Join New Organization—Ebbets Quits Official Life.

Two important matters were brought to the attention of a well-attended meeting of the New York Bowling Association at the Hotel Victoria last night, one being the question as to whether the association should withdraw from the American Bowling Congress and affiliate with the Eastern governing body, which will be fully organized in Brooklyn on May 10, and the other was the retirement of Charles H. Ebbets from all official activity in the association and elsewhere.

Mr. Ebbets, who was one of the originators of the New York Bowling Association and formerly President of the organization, made quite a lengthy speech upon his withdrawal from bowling politics, saying that he had determined upon the course after the unjust attacks had been made upon him for the course he had pursued at the last National Convention at Louisville. It was contended that but for an inadvertent remark of Mr. Ebbets's Philadelphia might have been selected for the big tournament in 1907 and New York probably the year following. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Ebbets for his efforts in behalf of the welfare of the association.

No vote was taken in regard to joining the new Eastern governing organization, but the sentiment of two-thirds of the members present was favorable to withdrawing from the American Bowling Congress. Dr. Timm, however, was unalterably opposed to such a course. The question will be settled at the next meeting of the association, when the constitution and by-laws of the new body will have been adopted.

EX-CAVALRYMAN GOES FREE.

Miller, Who Shot Man Who Entered His Flat, Released by Coroner's Jury.

Herman Miller, an ex-cavalryman, of 320 East Thirteenth Street, who shot and killed William E. Scanlon in Miller's flat early on the morning of April 13, was released by the Coroner's jury yesterday. Patrick Donovan, who entered Miller's flat with Scanlon, is under $7,500 bail awaiting trial on the charge of burglary.

Miller testified yesterday that he and his wife were in bed when he was awakened by Donovan seizing him by the throat and exclaiming:

"Give me your stuff!"

Drawing his revolver from beneath the pillow, he fired three shots. The first struck Mrs. Miller in the leg. The other two struck Scanlon, one of them killing him.

Patrolman John G. Dwyer testified that upon hearing cries for help, he ran upstairs, and met Donovan leaving. Donovan testified that he and Scanlon were looking for a man named Quinn, with whom they wanted to discuss a project to beat the races.

LARCHMONT RACING DATES.

Announcement of Annual Yachting Fixtures on the Sound.

Announcement was made yesterday of the racing fixtures of the Larchmont Yacht Club. The dates are June 16, the Spring regatta; July 4, the annual regatta; Race Week, beginning July 14 and continuing until the 21st; September 1, special races; September 3, Fall regatta; and September 8, special races.

The features of the season are the Colt Cup for Class B. schooners for July 4, the race for auxiliaries on September 1, and the race for the Larchmont Schooner Cup and the big sloops on September 8. Throughout the entire season from June 16 to September 8 races will be held on each race day for the raceabouts for the valuable series prize, while there will be special series races during Race Week for Class B schooners; for 82, 68, 57, 40, 27, 22, and 18 foot sloops; for the New York thirty footers, for the Larchmont Indian Harbor and Riverside one design classes, and for both the Larchmont and general class of raceabouts.

Open regattas for all classes of yachts, whether regular or irregular, are announced for June 16, July 4, July 18, July 21, and for September 3. An innovation is a race for the entire Larchmont fleet, whether racing boats or cruisers, to be held on September 1.

As usual the Larchmont races will be the principal events of the racing year.

Hartford's Yacht Racing Dates.

Announcement is made by the Hartford Yacht Club of two open regattas and an ocean race from Fenwick Island around Block Island. The latter event is tentatively fixed for the third week in August. The regattas will be held July 4 and Sept. 3.

Besides these a ten days' cruise will be held in August. The sail craft will race eastward for five days, and return to Fenwick Island. The power boats will race westward for the same length of time and return.

A three days' regatta will be held off Fenwick July 5 to 7, and regular races will be held there every Saturday from then on until Labor Day.

Wrestlers Ready for Hard Struggle.

Two unusual wrestling attractions are scheduled for to-night at the Grand Central Palace, Forty-third Street and Lexington Avenue. John Piening, the "Butcher Boy," who is conceded to be the cleverest Graeco-Roman wrestler in America, and Fred Beell, the best light heavyweight in the West, will meet in a match at mixed styles and the struggle is to be to a finish. Beell is an aggressive wrestler, and while Piening is the favorite he will undoubtedly be compelled to use every trick at his command to win. The other encounter will bring together Harvey Parker, the "Little Demon," and George Bothner, who many good judges believe will defeat the lightweight champion.

Activity Ahead for the Golfers.

Judging from the large number of golfers who frequented the Van Cortlandt Park links last Saturday the improved course will be more popular than ever this season. The playing distance of the eighteen holes is now 5,400 yards. The fourth hole has been shortened by a few yards, due to the necessity of widening the road, and later in the season part of the sixth green will be cut away in order to widen the road opposite the railroad station. The New York Golf Club has stated its season of club handicaps and events will be held nearly every Saturday.

The St. Andrew's Golf Club, which will be the scene this year of a number of important contests, including the metropolitan championship, has made a number of improvements to the course. The playing distance is now 5,871 yards, and the greens are in splendid condition.

The competition on the links of the Dyker Meadow Golf Club, near Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, next Saturday, will be a four-ball foursome for cups given by J. G. Dettmer. The women's committee is arranging a number of handicaps and some team matches. The committee consists of Miss Madelaine Chauncey, Mrs. James H. Merritt, Miss Ethel Pearsall, Mrs. Donald G. Geddes, and Mrs. Adolphe E. Smylie.

A number of the golfers who competed last week in the Lakewood tournament will enter the three day event at Atlantic City to be held May 3, 4, and 5. Four or five sets of sixteen will qualify, as many cups and consolation cups are also offered in each set.

The Marine and Field Club opened its links near Bath Beach for the season last Saturday with the first club handicap. F. E. Hurst was the winner. The greens are in good condition, and a number of events have been planned for the coming two months.

BIG ENTRY FOR THE RELAYS.

Annual Championship Attracts Record List of Star Competitors.

The entry list for the big relay carnival of the University of Pennsylvania, which has come to mean the relay championships of colleges throughout the United States, will exceed in number this year that of any year in the history of the event. Every college east of the Mississippi that boasts of a track team almost without exception is to be represented, and the preparatory schools outnumber these. There are 285 teams to compete, which, with the contestants in the special invitation events, will make a total entry of over 1,200.

The championship events, as usual, are five in number. The colleges will contest at one, two, and five miles, and the high schools and preparatory schools one mile each. The college entry for the three contests includes:

One mile—Chicago, Pennsylvania, Harvard, Cornell, Syracuse.

Two miles—Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Yale, Princeton, Syracuse, Dartmouth, Amherst.

Four miles—Michigan, Cornell, Pennsylvania.

The competition in the one and four mile races will be distinctly a contest between East and West. For three years Michigan has walked away with the four-mile race in spite of every effort of the Eastern contingent to defeat her. Both Cornell and Yale have especially trained four-mile teams in the hope of wresting the honor from Michigan, but each time have succumbed. Last year a new world's record was the outcome. This year Cornell is again primed for Fitzpatrick's team with an exceedingly strong quartet developed by cross country racing, but Michigan will send Coe and Rowe, the great pair with 4:27 records, and Ramsey and Maloney with 4:30. Pennsylvania has three 4:30 men and a fourth good for near that speed. It looks like another new record for the race.

For the schoolboy championship the Boys' High School of Brooklyn and the New York High School of Commerce are pitted against the Central High and Manual Training Schools of Philadelphia, the Washington, Pittsburg, and Chicago High Schools, while Lawrenceville, Mercersburg, Centenary Institute, Pingry, and Hill School are entered for preparatory school honors. New York will send eighteen schools for the regular class events.

POLO AT VAN CORTLANDT.

Squadron A Will Begin Practice This Week—Additional Tournaments.

Polo will probably be started this week at Van Cortlandt Park by the Squadron A players. The second and third practice fields have been thoroughly rolled and are in very good shape for early work. A number of the new ponies that were brought on from Texas have been tried out in minor polo practice in a field near the stables on top of the hill east of the park, and the Squadron members who purchased some of these ponies last Saturday are anxious to try them in some stiff practice games. Informal practice between pick-up teams will be the order for the next few days, but early in May it is likely that the Squadron may meet some local club teams in informal contests. More Squadron men are taking up polo this year than in former seasons and inter-troop contests promise to be numerous and lively.

The opening polo tournament of the season, which will be held at the Westchester Country Club, will not be played on a new field, as had been expected last year. Arrangements for the new field were not successful, and the old field will be used again. J. Insley Blair, who was the Country Club's delegate to the Polo Association, has resigned and E. C. Potter has been appointed as the delegate. Blair will do most of his playing this season at the Meadow Brook Club.

To the list of tournaments as announced at the recent annual meeting of the Polo Association must be added the joint event of the Myopia and Dedham Clubs of Boston, from Sept. 3 to 14, and the Rumford Club tournament, Providence, R. I., from Sept. 25 to 29.

SLIGHT OPERATION KILLS.

Brother of District Attorney Knapp of Elmira Dies in Doctor's Office.

Having submitted to a surgical operation on the nose at the offices of Dr. Beaman Douglass, at 40 East Forty-first Street, Elias S. Knapp collapsed suddenly yesterday afternoon and died in a few minutes. Knapp was 42 years old, and a brother of District Attorney Wilmot E. Knapp of Elmira. He lived at 132 East Twenty-seventh Street.

Two nurses were present when the surgeon performed the operation. After it was over Knapp got up, declaring that it didn't seem to take long. Then he walked into the reception room. Apparently he was in good spirits. Going to a sofa, he said he would lie down and take a rest. A minute later one of the nurses found him writhing on the sofa. His heart beats were weak, and he was unconscious. Dr. Douglass worked over him for half an hour, but was unable to save him.

Dr. Douglass notified the Coroners' office, and explained to Coroner Dooley that he had used cocaine in the operation, but this, he thought, had nothing to do with Knapp's death. Knapp, it was said, died from oedema of the lungs. An autopsy will be held to-day.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Break—Call Money Rates 3½@5¼ Per Cent.

Liquidation by Pools Feature of the Trading—Further Shipment West.

One of the chief influences in bringing about yesterday's sharp fall in the stock market was the selling by pools, which seemed to have come to the conclusion that, reasoning from present conditions, the prospects for an easy money market during the Summer, belief in which had formed the basis of their operations for the rise, had either vanished completely or had become so dubious as to invite reduction of commitments pending a clearing up of the situation. To liquidation from this source were attributed the declines of 4⅜ points in Reading, 3⅜ points in Union Pacific, 3 points in Amalgamated Copper, and 4⅛ points in Brooklyn Rapid Transit, to note only the conspicuous examples of many shares upon which speculation has recently converged. Short selling in the final hour accelerated the movement. The selling of Reading began with the opening of the market and continued persistently throughout the day, irrespective of the feeble rallies in other sections of the active list, and its fall was correspondingly severe. The Steel issues presented an appearance of considerable firmness through much of the day, but shortly after the noon hour yielded ground rapidly under heavy sales, in spite of the general understanding that much new material for the reconstruction of San Francisco will be purchased from certain subsidiary companies of the corporation itself. In the same fashion, declines of 3 or more points in such issues as St. Paul, New York Central, the Hill shares, and other high-class securities suggested sales by fire insurance companies for the purpose of meeting, in part at least, the great losses these companies are known to have suffered through the destruction of the greater part of San Francisco. It is, of course, highly improbable that either professional holders of stocks or the insurance companies, which find themselves confronted with the necessity of raising money by this means, will hastily throw their holdings upon a stock market so unsettled as ours has been as a result of the occurrences of the past few days. So far as the insurance companies themselves are concerned, there seems no necessity for immediate steps of this kind, inasmuch as practically all policies contain clauses allowing ample opportunity for preparation for payment of losses. A decline of 4½ points in Virginia-Carolina Chemical and a sharp break in the stock of the American Cotton Oil Company were traceable to the announcement from Washington that the Department of Justice had under consideration the advisability of criminal prosecution against officers of the former company for alleged violation of the anti-trust law.

One other matter which was not without bearing upon sentiment was the receipt of advices by international banking houses, reporting the probability of a lukewarm reception by the French public of the Russian loan offering in Paris owing to strike disturbances and the approach of a general election. These advices were too indefinite to gain full credence, and were, in fact, disputed, but, intimating, as they did, the possibility of the falling down of this great flotation at the French capital, where, openly, at least, the bonds are quoted at a premium, no little apprehension was aroused. If it falls out that French banking houses are to be called upon to carry a great mass of Russian bonds, the consequent tying up of Continental funds cannot fail to affect all money markets. It may have been consideration of this matter, as well as our demands for gold, that gave rise to further fears in London yesterday that the Bank of England might find it necessary to restore its discount rate to the full 4 per cent., although doubt of the necessity of this step is again expressed here. In this money market, both call and time funds were practically unchanged. Additional shipments amounting in all to a trifle less than $5,000,000 were made through the Sub-Treasury and directly to Pacific Coast and other points. There was little change in the position of the foreign exchange market, and no further engagements of gold were announced.

RECEIVER FOR TELEPHONE CO.

Appointed in New Jersey for the Telegraph and Telephone Co. of America.

The Court of Chancery to-day, at Trenton, N. J., appointed Charles M. Myers of Newark receiver for the Telegraph and Telephone Company of America, a large holding company, with $30,000,000 capital stock.

The liabilities are placed at $825,562, made up largely of unpaid assessments on stocks. The assets are nominally $2,051,171. These are of uncertain value it is said, because they are composed of stocks and bonds of subsidiary companies, most of which are inactive.

RUSSIAN LOAN ISSUE.

Subscriptions Opened in This City to be Forwarded to London.

Subscriptions to the new Russian 5 per cent. loan were invited here at the office of Baring & Co. for forwarding to Baring Brothers & Co. of London. No information was obtainable at the office of Baring & Co. yesterday as to the response to their offer.

The total of the loan is equivalent to $440,000,000, and the issue price is 89 per cent. The bonds are irredeemable for ten years, and after that time may be called in by the Government by drawings calculated to redeem the entire loan by 1956, or sooner, at the Government's option. The bonds are in denominations equivalent in pounds to £19 17s., £99 5s., and £198 10s.

LONDON, April 23.—The prospectus of the British portion of the Russian 5 per cent. loan was issued to-day. The amount allotted to London is $55,505,000. The issue price is 89.

VIENNA, April 23.—Many Austrian Jews who are opposed to the subscription of any part of the Russian loan in Austria are holding meetings with the object of dissuading their co-religionists from participating. The Viennese Zionists demand the dismissal from the Vice Presidency of the Hebrew community of Herr von Taussig, a banker, who arranged for Austrian participation in the loan.

For Russian Loan of 1906.

A. A. Housman & Co. announce that they are prepared to receive subscriptions for the imperial Russia Government 5 per cent. loan of 1906, transmitting them to London free of expense. The issue price of these bonds is 89 per cent., being £88 6s. 8d. per bond of £99 5s. par value. Payment may be made on allotment or on any installment date under discount at the rate of 2½ per cent. The loan is irredeemable for ten years, but can be redeemed thereafter in its entirety or by annual drawing calculated to retire the whole amount by May 1, 1956. The subscription list will be closed in London on or before April 26.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

American Mills to Supply Most Material for San Francisco.

The problem of supplying the structural steel needed for the rebuilding of San Francisco was the chief topic of discussion in trade circles yesterday. It seems to be the general opinion that while some demand will have to be made on the foreign producers the lion's share of the orders will go to American mills. It is pointed out that while most of the plants in this country are congested with work there are a number of new structural plants in course of construction, and within six months some of these will be producers. The trade is of the opinion that it will be longer than that before the stricken city is ready for the shapes that will support her new buildings. By this time next year there will be a still greater increase in the country's producing capacity.

One of the surest signs that American plants will find ways of handling the San Francisco business, though their books show orders for nearly a year ahead, is the fact that all of the big companies have representatives in San Francisco seeking the new business. The American Bridge Company is reported to have obtained a contract for 6,000 tons of structural steel for use in San Francisco. The building in which it is to be used was planned before the fire, it is said.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, April 23.—Money was in good demand in the market to-day. Discounts were firm. They were affected temporarily by the Russian loan, but a more important factor was the weakness of New York exchange. The demand for gold for shipment to New York was still keen, and in the absence of supplies in the open market shippers were obliged to obtain the needed eagles from the Bank of England.

Prices on the Stock Exchange were quietly steady at the opening, the settlement being a hindrance to business. Consols were maintained, and closed with an improvement. Home rails drooped.

Americans opened irregular and mostly under parity, on New York selling. The movements were slight and generally downward. Prices rallied somewhat later, reacted, and closed dull. United States Steel had a better tone.

Foreigners were quiet on the Paris Bourse, having been adversely affected by the coal strike in the North of France.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101¼.

Bar silver firm at 30⅝d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.30; Lisbon, 4.50.

Bullion amounting to £80,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and £301,000 was withdrawn for shipment to the United States.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, April 23.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were depressed owing to the labor agitation in the Departments of the Pas-de-Calais and the Nord.

Russian imperial 4s were quoted at 82 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 495.

Three per cent. rentes, 98f 62½c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 11½c for checks.

BERLIN, April 23.—Trading on the Boerse to-day was quiet, due to realizations.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 49 pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates: Short bills, 3 per cent.; three months' bills, 3⅜ per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

An unforeseen break in the market, such as occurred last week, is commonly followed by a rapid recovery amounting to anywhere from a third to one-half the decline, and after such a recovery the market almost invariably settles back slowly to the low prices, as if it were making up its mind what next to do. The secondary decline under normal conditions should be gradual, and it ought not to carry prices below the level on which the recovery began, if the initial break was sufficient to discount the causes at work. The low prices last week were touched either in the last hour of Thursday's trading or on the opening the following day, and after midday on Friday the market recovered sharply. The improvement continued during the first hour on Saturday, and apparently culminated with the appearance of the bank statement. Yesterday's break not only wiped out the recovery, but carried a number of stocks lower than they were last week, as the following comparisons will indicate:

	Low Last Week.	Low Yesterday.
Union Pacific	150⅝	149¼
Southern Pacific	64	64¼
Atchison	89	88⅝
St. Paul	171¼	169
Pennsylvania	138½	138¼
Reading	125⅝	123⅝
Brooklyn Rapid Transit	82½	[illegible]
Amalgamated Copper	107	107⅛
United States Steel	41⅝	41½
United States Steel pf	107	107⅛

Of the ten stocks here named six made new low prices yesterday, namely, Union Pacific, Atchison, Brooklyn, St. Paul, Reading, and Pennsylvania. Atchison and Pennsylvania went only ¼ of 1 per cent. lower each, but Union Pacific went 1⅜ per cent. lower, St. Paul 2¼ per cent. lower, Reading 1⅝ per cent. lower, and Brooklyn 2⅝ per cent. lower. The weakness of Union Pacific contrasted curiously with the relative strength of Southern Pacific, which sold at 64 last week and went only as low as 64¼ yesterday. The right explanation probably is that the speculative bull account in Union Pacific was more extended than that in Southern Pacific. It is not so easy to account for the relative strength of Amalgamated Copper and the Steel shares, in which there has been an active bull speculation, more especially in Amalgamated Copper, except on the theory that they were better supported than other stocks. There was heavy selling of Amalgamated Copper on the way down, but the stock appeared to have reached the point of ultimate resistance just above 107. The same was almost equally true of the United States Steel shares. There was very heavy trading in Steel common at 41⅝ and 41¾, but there seemed to be a big market for the stock at those quotations.

It is never safe to assume that because a stock has been conspicuously supported at a certain point it is unlikely to go lower. Plans may be altered over night, and the buying orders which have caused a stock to show great resistance at one price may be renewed the next day on a lower scale. Evidence of such support as was seen yesterday in some stocks, especially Amalgamated Copper and the Steel shares, is nevertheless encouraging, unless, as sometimes happens, it becomes too obstinate and shows a disposition on the part of those who control the market for the securities to "peg" them arbitrarily at certain prices. Efforts to stem a tide of liquidation by "pegging" a stock lead often to unfortunate results. Support on a "scale down" is nearly always preferable, as being less arbitrary and more likely to endure.

⁂

It looked yesterday at one time as if an effort were being made to hold Reading arbitrarily at 125. It was reported from the floor that a broker who has long been associated with the bull side of the stock was bidding for it in large blocks at 125. The result was that when the stock broke through that figure in the last hour it declined very abruptly to 123½.

⁂

The weakness yesterday was most pronounced in the last hour, as on Thursday of last week, and prices closed at or very near their lowest.

⁂

It was to be supposed that many of the stocks bought on Thursday of last week to arrest the decline would be for sale as the market would take them, and it was natural that traders should seek to anticipate such selling with some of their own. In so far as yesterday's market conformed to these two ideas it was precisely the kind of market that might have been looked for, but in the afternoon it exhibited weakness beyond anything that should have been produced by the reselling of stocks and the aggressions of the bear talent. It had every appearance of a market in which bona fide liquidation had been resumed on a pretty broad scale. The supporting orders in many issues had evidently been placed on a lower scale than last week. That seemed to be true in the case of Union Pacific especially.

⁂

The market is now on uncertain ground. There is very little clear thinking about it. The San Francisco calamity has had a very sobering effect upon the speculative mind. The idea now predominating in Wall Street, if it is possible for one idea to have that distinction in such extreme confusion, is that caution is well advised. Men who are rarely at a loss for opinions hesitate to take positions on either side, and others, who were already committed, are afraid to do anything lest in trying to improve their positions they do the wrong thing. Extremes of opinion are encountered not only in speculative quarters, but in banking circles, where there seems to be almost as great a diversity of views as among speculators. In one banking quarter it is asserted that by a singular combination of causes the money market will be benefited, since a large proportion of the money sent from Europe on account of the San Francisco disaster will rest here. Other banks take a very dubious view of the outlook, declare that money will be tighter, and predict a steady stream of liquidation for some time to come in order to meet the emergency. Groups of speculators, hitherto acting in concert, have become divided, being unable to agree upon the market, so that some go one way and some the other, buying and selling heavily through the same brokers.

⁂

The weakness at the opening yesterday was due very largely to London's selling. This was followed up by traders, the professional contingent showing a strong preference for the bear side, and as prices declined the supply of stocks seemed to increase steadily, coming from various sources. The Western crowd, so called, is supposed to be on the bear side of the market, but there is at least one very important Western wire house that strongly advises buying stocks. Commission houses as a rule are non-committal.

"One thing against the market in my opinion," declared an active trader yesterday, "is that about seven in every ten people I meet hope to get just one more bulge in prices and propose, if they get it, to clean up on the bull side for good. Some want only 3 or 4 points now, whereas a week ago they wanted 10." But this is always the case after a break in the market. Men who have suffered profits to run into losses promise themselves that they will get out even on the first opportunity; that opportunity comes and they wait for profits, canceling their selling orders as prices advance.

⁂

The weakness of bonds yesterday had a depressing effect upon current opinion, superimposed upon the effect of a very weak stock market. There has been a very poor bond market for many weeks, and now that there is suddenly a prospect of forced liquidation in bonds corresponding to that which is going on in stocks, prices begin to give way.

⁂

There must be a very large short interest in the market. Several prominent cliques are reported to be heavily committed to the bear side.

⁂

A feeling of disgust pervades the bull. Says he: "Something always happens." It is generally believed that except for the San Francisco disaster a good bull market would be now in progress. Every superficial indication pointed that way. The money market situation had been relieved, encouragement to those who would bull stocks was coming once more from the proper sources, and there was an obstinate bear account which might have been forced to retreat at an enormous loss to itself and a corresponding gain to the bull forces. Such was the situation a week ago. Nothing has occurred of recent years more pointedly to illustrate the truth of the assertion that accidents help the bears.

⁂

Some precious bull ammunition is going to waste. Last week there was, for one thing, the increase of the Amalgamated Copper dividend, which went almost unheeded. If the United States Steel Corporation's statement for the March quarter is up to expectations, and if the market is so distracted as not to heed that, then more ammunition of the same kind will have been unavoidably wasted. Bullish news has its best effect in a bull market.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 23.—Apart from fairly good trading in Subway around 56½ to 55¼, local business in stocks was dull. Can preferred was easy at 61½. Match found a small demand in odd lots, and sold up to 132 and back to 131. Brick went at 56, and Kansas City Light common ran back to 61½. National Carbon was taken at 94¾. West Chicago sold at 28. Shipbuilding weakened late in the day.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Feels the Weakness of the Exchange.

After a Firm Opening Prices Weaken Under Light Selling Pressure —Coppers Suffer.

After a steady though sluggish opening yesterday the curb market wilted rapidly as the weakness of the big market became apparent wherever selling pressure developed, and, though activity was slight, the close showed losses, in some cases considerable, in those stocks that were freely offered. The mining shares were the chief sufferers. United Copper lost 2¾ points after sales of 6,000, selling down from 65¼ to 62½. Tennessee Copper dropped from 47 to 43 on transactions of 1,200. Granby and Greene Copper lost fractionally, as was the case with practically all those shares which were at all active.

Among the industrials Mackay Companies common, which was the only stock to sell over 1,000 shares, dropped from 65 to 64 after sales of 1,800.

Heavy liquidation from Wall Street, the South, and Liverpool, together with pressure brought to bear by influential spot interests, broke the cotton market yesterday 22 to 24 points. Liverpool declined 9 to 11 points, due, it was said, to heavy selling there by spot people here and a fuller realization of the magnitude of the San Francisco loss. The New York market started 1 to 4 points lower, at 11.20 for May, 11.03 for July, and 10.43 for October. A rumor gained wide circulation that a settlement had been made on May contracts between the bull leader and a prominent spot dealer. This rumor was given as the initial cause for the break. The report, however, was positively denied. The fact that May increased its premium over July to 16 points made it apparent to many that no settlement had been made.

Private cables from Liverpool said that spots over there were weakening. Ten thousand bales of spot cotton were sold yesterday, however, in Liverpool at a six-point decline, to 6.08d. The weather in the South continued excellent for crop progress, but a great many thought that the necessity for a large yield was so imperative that the amount of cotton to be raised must be absolutely assured before it could have a very decided effect. Home spinners were moderate buyers yesterday. Room traders generally sold. There was said to have been some support from the clique in May, and Theodore Price issued a statement expressing very optimistic views as to the impetus the rebuilding of San Francisco would give to American industries.

Liverpool closed 11 points off on near months and 9 points lower on the late options—May-June, 5.87; July-August, 5.87; August-September, 5.82; October-November, 5.61, and December-January, 5.60. Manchester yarns were firm, but cloths were reported quiet. Southern spot markets were generally easy at unchanged prices to ⅛ point decline. The local spot market declined 15 points, to 11.65, against 7.75 last year and 13.75 in 1904.

Cotton Opinions.

HUBBARD BROTHERS & CO.—With good weather we may look for rather more disposition to part with the cotton in the South and less desire to buy on the part of outsiders.

SANGER & ETTELSON.—There is considerable risk in selling cotton at present prices.

BAILY & MONTGOMERY.—Here and there spots have been weakening in some parts of the South, but all in all they are showing strength and generally good reports keep coming in as to trade conditions here and in Europe.

CARPENTER, BAGGOT & CO.—We are not less bullish and do not consider that the statistical position of cotton has in any way changed and we consider the decline as temporary.

ATWOOD VIOLETT & CO.—Whatever the cause of the decline the statistical position of cotton, as shown from week to week, is almost a sure guarantee that those short of spots to domestic or foreign spinners will be in serious trouble before the season ends.

Following are the opening, highest, lowest, and closing prices:

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 23.—Financial circles were much interested to-day in the announcement that two street railway experts, David Young and William W. Cole of New York, have been engaged by the United Railways Company to make a thorough examination of the property as to its physical needs. The details of the plan by which the improvements will be financed under the new Maryland Electric charter are anxiously awaited by security holders.

The United income bondholders are particularly interested inasmuch as about 9 per cent. back interest is due on the income bonds. When it was stated that the company would use the Maryland charter in financing new improvements many held out the hope that at least one of the coupons due this year would be paid. The company has been using this interest which amounts to $600,000 a year for betterments, particularly new tracks, ever since the fire two years ago.

Trading continued slow and narrow today. Seaboard 4s, on a run of sales, lost 1¼ per cent., to 87. United Railways pooled incomes sold actively for ¼ loss to 71⅞, in from 1,000 to 5,000 blocks. United Railways free incomes were slightly lower. Macon Railway and light 5s advanced ¼.

In the stock list prices were irregular. National Union Bank dropped 2¾ points, Norfolk Railway and Light stock advanced ½ point, Georgia Southern & Florida 1st preferred sold ⅜ higher, Atlantic Coast Line rights sold up ⅛. Seaboard new second preferred ran off 1 per cent. The close was dull, but firm. Sales, bonds, $50,000; shares, stock, 462.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—There was some local pressure at the start, under which wheat sold off about ¼c, but a quick rally of ⅜c followed on early calculations which forecast a large decrease in the American visible supply. At the same time the cables reported an advance of ⅛d on wheat at Liverpool, with May corn ⅜d higher in the English market. In the afternoon the market broke sharply. The decrease in the American visible supply proved to be larger than expected, but the bull party used the fact for an attempt to unload May contracts with the result of breaking the local market ⅝c. Cash wheat closed dull. No. 2 red, nominal, in elevator, and 89¾c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 87¾c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—It was well into the afternoon before any business was done here in corn; and then but little, with the market finally irregular at a decline of ⅛c to an advance of ⅛c. Selling was arrested by heavy decreases in the Western stock. Spot corn closed steady. No. 2 corn, 57c nominal, in elevator, and 54¾c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white and No. 2 yellow, nominal.

There was considerable strength shown in the early trading here to-day. Daly-West was a feature around the opening, advancing to 17¾ on commission house buying, a good part of these orders apparently emanating from Western sources. Around the noon hour realizing orders began to make their appearance, induced by the weaker tone shown by the New York market, and losses were recorded throughout the list, Amalgamated and United Copper each losing about 3 points, North Butte 2 points, and the balance of the Copper shares suffering in proportion. The closing was weak, but at a slight advance over the lowest point of the day.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 23.—An interesting feature of the local situation today was the position of the local insurance stocks. While Insurance Company of North America partially recovered from its 5-point break of Saturday, Alliance Insurance stock, an auxiliary company of the Insurance Company of North America, was down 4¾. Careful inquiry leads to the belief, however, that all of the local companies will be fully able to make prompt settlement of all their San Francisco claims without exhausting their surplus.

Some of the local banks have sent letters to their depositing insurance companies announcing their willingness to extend any accommodation within their power. The bulk of to-day's trading was again in Reading and United States Steel, both of which were weak. Lehigh Valley and Lehigh Navigation followed the former, declining sharply. The list generally was lower, and some long stock appeared to be coming out from commission house sources.

Total sales, 47,755 shares.

Olive Oil to Pay Higher Duty—Other Decisions.

In a decision by C. P. McClelland the Board of United States General Appraisers overruled a protest filed by A. C. Adamo and Alfredo Qui & Co. of Naples and Messina regarding the invoice prices to be attached to entries of olive oil. The merchandise was entered as possessing a foreign value of 80 and 90 lires per 100 kilos, whereas the board reached the conclusion that the merchandise should have been entered at the rate of 100 lire per 100 kilos.

In a decision by sub-board No. 2 of the General Board it was decided that Panama sombrero hats from M. San Lucas & Co. of Cayo must pay duty on the basis of $10 per dozen, and not at $8 per dozen, as invoiced by the importer.

General Appraiser Howell wrote a decision increasing invoice values on importations of Hardy & Morisot of Paris more than 100 per cent. The merchandise involved consisted of embroidered wearing apparel. Unless a sub-board of three appraisers reduces the advance below 50 per cent. the merchandise will be seized by the Government.

MILES GETS A YEAR FOR CITY SEWER FRAUDS

Brooklyn Lawyer Also Fined $500 by Judge Crane.

SAME PENALTY FOR CLERK

Bailed Later on an Order to Show Cause—May Be Tried in This County.

Following his conviction for conspiracy to defraud this city by bogus claims for damage because of defective sewers, William O. Miles, a Brooklyn lawyer, was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $500 by Judge Crane in the County Court yesterday. Charles M. Wells, one of his clerks, received the same sentence. This is the maximum penalty for conspiracy. Frank M. Wandell, Jr., a second clerk in Miles's office, who was convicted at the same time, was remanded to Raymond Street jail until next Monday because he has confessed to the District Attorney. It is believed that in his confession Wandell has implicated others whose names have not yet been made public.

Within half an hour after sentence had been pronounced an order to show cause why a certificate of reasonable doubt should not issue, signed by Justice Gaynor in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, was served on District Attorney Clarke, and both Miles and Wells were admitted to bail in the sum of $1,000.

After the usual motions had been made by counsel for Miles and had been denied by Judge Crane he addressed the two defendants. He said in part:

> The evidence given before me was such that, in my opinion, you should consider yourselves very fortunate that you were not indicted for a felony, instead of conspiracy, which is a misdemeanor.
>
> The manner and method employed, as the jury has found, in the attempt to get wrongfully the public moneys, was so destructive of all legal safeguards, so injurious to the proper administration of official duties, and so harmful to the reputation of the bar of Kings County that I believe it my duty to emphatically condemn them by imposing upon you both the maximum penalty of one year in the penitentiary and a fine of $500.

It was announced last night that Norman S. Dike, Chairman of the Grievance Committee of the Brooklyn Bar Association, would immediately ask the Appellate Division to disbar Miles.

Miles will also have to face criminal charges in New York County for his share in the frauds. Controller Metz said yesterday that District Attorney Jerome had promised to take the matter up as soon as he receives the stenographer's notes of the trial in Brooklyn. Miles received the money for the awards in this county, and Mr. Metz and Mr. Jerome hold that in so doing he committed a crime.

McMahon and Scanlon, adjusters for the Finance Department, will face charges this week filed by Controller Metz. The Controller says they misrepresented matters to him, and he wants to find out why. If the explanation is not satisfactory, Mr. Metz said, there will be two vacancies in his adjustment division before the end of the week.

When the Controller asked for a list of the lawyers interested in the sewer damage suits, McMahon and Scanlon reported in writing that Towns and McCrossin and W. O. Miles had 50 per cent. of the cases. The facts were that Miles had 3,500 cases, and the other firm 500 cases. Mr. Metz believes the report intentionally intended to deceive him and shield Miles.

TWENTY YEARS FOR FARLEY.

Union Official, Convicted of Killing George Tully, Sentenced.

Twenty years in State prison was the sentence given yesterday by Justice O'Gorman in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court to Michael J. Farley, a walking delegate for the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Association, who was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree for shooting and killing George Tully, a member of the Enterprise Steamfitters' Association, on Feb. 12, this year. A dispute concerning a strike declared by the metal lathers and not supported by the steamfitters led to the shooting.

Life Term for Policeman's Slayer.

Michael Brusch, alias Jacob Huter, found guilty of murder in the second degree for shooting and killing Policeman Enright after a former trial resulting in a death sentence had been set aside by the Court of Appeals, was sent to Sing Sing for life by Justice O'Gorman in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday.

"BUMPS" CHECK AUTOS.

Crowds Cheer as Machines Strike Them and Jump Into the Air.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., April 23.—The "bumps" installed by the borough officials of the village of Chatham to check the speed of automobiles through the village had their first test yesterday, and proved a decided success. Several hundred persons congregated at the crosswalks where the bumps were placed and watched with amusement the automobiles cross them.

The speed reducers are five inches above the level of the road and made of trap rock and clay. Signs warning automobilists of these bumps were posted at each end of the town.

When the first car came to one of the bumps the operator smiled contemptuously, and as the machine reached the elevation he slowed up the car and then with a sudden jerk of the machine took the bump.

There were several persons in the machine, and when the heavy rubber tires struck the elevation there was a palpitation of the machinery and the car shot up several feet in the air. Goggles, hats, a monkey wrench, sidecombs, hairpins, and other articles flew in all directions. The crowd gave a cheer and decided that the borough's plan was effective.

All day men, women, and children stood near the cross-walks and hailed with delight every automobile as it went over the bumps. One venturesome operator ran his machine on the sidewalk and around the elevations, but citizens placed heavy beams at those points, compelling the other automobiles to keep to the road.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO.

Mrs. Mollers Jumped in Front of Machine and Was Crushed to Death.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., April 23.—Jumping in front of an automobile from a carriage in which was her husband, Mrs. Herman D. Mollers, 30 years old, of Dover, N. J., was crushed beneath the heavy wheels of the machine yesterday afternoon, and died at her home, in Sussex Street, last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Mollers had been out driving in the afternoon. While on the Jefferson Turnpike they saw an automobile coming down the road at a high speed. As their horse was afraid of autos, Mollers turned the animal toward the gutter and stopped. Seeing this, Thomas Bright of Lake Hopatcong, who was operating the machine, also stopped his car. Then, on receiving a signal from Mollers to go ahead, Bright started his car forward. When the automobile got near the carriage Mrs. Mollers became frightened at the action of the horse and jumped from the carriage in front of the machine.

Bright tried to stop the car, but it knocked the woman down, and the two front wheels passed over her body. She was unconscious when picked up, and was taken to her home. Her ribs and hips were crushed, and she was also injured internally. Bright was not arrested.

SWEENEY AN INSPECTOR.

He Led Police Civil Service List—Takes Inspector Brooks's Place.

Capt. Dennis Sweeney, who was reduced from the rank of Inspector owing to the reinstatement of Inspectors Smith and Druhan by the courts, was repromoted to an Inspectorship by Commissioner Bingham yesterday. He will remain in the Sixth Inspection District, in Harlem, where he has been in command for the last ten months as Inspector and Acting Inspector.

Since the retirement of Smith and Druhan Capts. Sweeney and Hogan had been promoted to be Inspectors. With Smith and Druhan back, those vacancies no longer existed, and the positions of Hogan and Sweeney were legally untenable. The Commissioner reduced Sweeney and Hogan to the rank of Captain, but made them Acting Inspectors.

Then Commissioner Bingham found that he had one vacancy which was legal, caused by the retirement of Inspector Brooks. The Commissioner asked the Civil Service Commission for an eligible list, and three candidates were given to him—Capts. Sweeney, Hodgins, and Hogan, whose percentages ranked in the order named. The Commissioner chose Sweeney, who was the top man on the list.

WANT GROUT OR SWANSTROM.

One or the Other Likely to Succeed John Claflin on Transit Board.

Either ex-Controller Edward M. Grout or ex-President Swanstrom of the Borough of Brooklyn will be named in all likelihood to succeed John Claflin as a member of the Rapid Transit Commission. Mr. Claflin's resignation has not yet been accepted by the board, and probably will not be until action is taken by the Mayor and the Governor on the Elsberg bill.

This measure, if it becomes a law, gives the Mayor the power of filling all vacancies occurring after Jan. 1, 1906. If the bill does not become a law the commission has the power to fill vacancies in its membership.

Mayor McClellan is extremely desirous of having Mr. Grout go on the board, and the members of that body also are desirous of having him join it. Mr. Swanstrom is understood to be an active candidate for the place, and should Mr. Grout not be willing to become a member it is extremely probable that Mr. Swanstrom will be named. There is no salary to the office, but the Appellate Division is empowered to meet annually and fix an honorarium for each member. This in the past has been $5,000.

MONEY FOR NEW CITY FERRY.

Dock Commissioner Asks Finance Committee for $4,800,000.

Dock Commissioner Bensel appeared before the Aldermanic Finance Committee yesterday and urged it to report favorably on the resolution appropriating $4,800,000 for his department, as the second installment of the $21,000,000 to which the Board of Estimate is committed. The department received $5,000,000 as the first installment.

Commissioner Bensel said the present request was for the purpose of municipalizing the Thirty-ninth Street Ferry to South Brooklyn, to which proposition the Sinking Fund Commission is already committed. The plans for the new boats, to cost approximately $200,000 each, are finished, and the department is at work on the specifications. There are to be three new boats.

No action was taken by the committee.

Patrick Hearing Postponed.

The hearing of medical expert testimony in support of Albert T. Patrick's motion for a new trial, which was to have begun before Recorder Goff in General Sessions yesterday, was postponed till to-morrow afternoon on account of the death of Judge McMahon.

BLAME JOHN MITCHELL FOR COAL STRIKE DELAYS

Operators Say He Is Responsible for Holding Up Negotiations.

THEIR LETTERS UNANSWERED

President Baer Charges Mitchell with Playing Hard and Soft Coal Men Against One Another.

The anthracite operators, who have received a brief reply from President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers to their letter to Mitchell containing their formal answer to his last proposition, issued a statement yesterday attributing the present suspension of work and the chaotic condition of the soft and hard coal industries to Mitchell. The statement accuses him of playing one industry against the other.

Mitchell's letter, which was received by President Baer of the Jersey Central Railroad in Philadelphia yesterday, is as follows:

> Indianapolis, April 21, 1906.
> Mr. George F. Baer, Chairman.
> Dear Sir: Your favor dated April 17 is received. Replying, will say that I have called a meeting of the committee representing the anthracite miners to be held at Wilkesbarre Wednesday morning, April 25, at which the communication signed by you and your associates will be submitted for the consideration of the committee. At the adjournment of the meeting I shall communicate with you further. I am yours truly, JOHN MITCHELL.

The following is the statement authorized on behalf of the operators:

> When Mr. Mitchell presented his plan of arbitration on April 12 the operators informed him then and there that it could not be accepted. They also notified him that a detailed reply would be ready on April 17. The affairs of a rival industry, however, demanded Mr. Mitchell's attention in Indianapolis on April 16, and it was not until April 21 that he could even acknowledge the operators' letter of the 17th.
>
> It should be very definitely understood that the delay in these negotiations is not caused by the operators. They handed their formal reply to the miners' original demands to Mr. Mitchell's committee on March 9. But in order to take up the controversy with the bituminous operators Mr. Mitchell had to leave New York on March 10, and he was absorbed with questions relating entirely to the soft coal fields until March 31. On March 29, without any warning or further discussion, a strike to begin April 1 in the entire anthracite industry was ordered from Indianapolis, the soft coal miners' headquarters. Not until April 3 was Mr. Mitchell again able to meet the anthracite operators.
> Now, once more, from April 12 to April 25, the affairs of the anthracite region must be neglected while the bituminous dispute is taken up. Each industry alternately waits while efforts are being made to fix terms with its rival. Meanwhile the anthracite mines are idle and some 150,000 men are led to sacrifice their wages. The strike has been in progress now for over three weeks, and exactly thirty-six days have been lost in these negotiations since March 9 by reason of the demands upon the miners' leader by the competing bituminous industry.

The opinion among the coal dealers to whom this statement was shown was that it left no loophole for the belief that the operators would recede a hairsbreadth from their position. They also said that the operators had good reason for issuing such a statement: It puts Mitchell in a position, they said, where there is no half-way policy. He must declare a strike or back down. The coal dealers say that the miners in case of a short-lived strike will not lose much, as they never work the whole year round.

COAL COMPANY SUSTAINED.

Judge Overrules Action Suspending License for Alleged Extortion.

BOSTON, April 23.—The price of coal fixed by the Metropolitan Coal Company of this city three weeks ago, when the miners struck, was not extortionate, according to Judge Lawton of the Superior Court, who, sustaining the coal company's appeal, to-day overruled the action of Secretary of State William M. Olin in suspending the company's license.

On the charge of extortion the Secretary suspended the license under an act passed in 1903, at the same time announcing that he desired a ruling by the court on the question involved.

Judge Lawton holds that in the absence of any charge of conspiracy, combination, or discrimination the price fixed, although 13 to 33 per cent. higher than necessary to give a fair profit, is not extortionate under the meaning of the statutes governing the case.

COURTS CLOSE FOR McMAHON.

All His Late Colleagues Honor the Deceased Jurist—Cowing's Tribute.

All the parts of General Sessions adjourned yesterday until to-morrow morning out of respect for the memory of Judge McMahon, and to enable his colleagues on the bench to attend his funeral this morning. For the same reason Recorder Goff excused the Grand Jury until to-morrow morning.

The two terms of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, over which Justices Dowling and O'Gorman are presiding, adjourned their sessions also until to-morrow. In all the courts tributes were paid to the memory of the late Judge by representatives of the District Attorney's office and by members of the bar. Responses to these remarks were made by the presiding Judges, a particularly strong tribute to the ability and integrity of Judge McMahon being paid by City Judge Cowing.

At Republican headquarters last night it was reported that Otto A. Rosalsky may be appointed by Gov. Higgins to the vacancy on the General Sessions bench caused by the death of Judge McMahon. Mr. Rosalsky is the Republican leader of the Eighth Assembly District and served on the General Sessions bench last year, succeeding Judge Newburger by appointment of Gov. Higgins. He also is one of the few Republican leaders in New York County who has cast his lot with President Roosevelt and Gov. Higgins as against Chairman Odell.

IRISH BRIGADE CELEBRATES.

Veterans of Corcoran's Legion Went to War 45 Years Ago.

The Veteran Corps of the Sixty-ninth Regiment gave its forty-fifth annual banquet last night, to commemorate the departure of the regiment to the front on April 23, 1861. The celebration was held in the Roman Court of Shanley's, in Times Square.

Several months prior to the outbreak of war the then Prince of Wales visited these shores, and there was a great military parade in his honor. In this the Sixty-ninth voted to a man to sustain Col. Michael Corcoran in his disobedience for refusing to join in the parade on account of the policy of the British Government in dealing with Ireland.

Col. Corcoran was placed under arrest and held for trial by court-martial. The war broke out before the trial, the proceedings were at once quashed, and the regiment, 1,200 strong, went to the war. Although decimated in time, the numbers were renewed seven times. It was the parent of the Irish Brigade and the Irish Legion or Corcoran Legion.

The banquet room was decorated with American flags, with the green emblem of Ireland between. Nearly 800 veterans and their guests attended the banquet. Judge Matthew P. Breen, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, acted as toastmaster. The speakers and their subjects were:

"The Irish Nationalist," Daniel F. Cohalan; "The Irish in America," Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney; "Young America of Irish Descent;" Henry J. Breen; "The American Soldier," the Rev. Milton S. Littlefield, pastor of the Union Presbyterian Church; "The Day We Celebrate," Judge Thomas C. O'Sullivan, and "The Gallant Sixty-ninth Regiment," Gen. Edward Duffy.

MRS. CHARNER IS A SPRINTER.

Caught a Man Stealing, Chased Him, and Then Sat on Him.

After pursuing a burglar in Hoboken last night over several fences, until she had tired him out, Mrs. Walter Charner sat upon him until the police arrivedand locked him up.

The woman came upon the burglar as he was rifling the money drawer in the office of H. L. Smith at 510 Fourth Street. Mrs. Charner's husband is Superintendent of the mineral water plant owned by Smith and lives in the rear of the building. Mrs. Charner was about to leave her rooms, when she saw a man in the office. She rushed in and seized him, but he broke away and ran through the rear door to the yard. Mrs. Charner followed, and when the thief jumped the fence she was not far behind. A number of other fences were scaled by both until they reached the open street. As the thief ran down Fourth Street Mrs. Charner followed close behind. She finally caught up with him as he was running across a lot. He struggled, but she overpowered him and then sat on him until a policeman placed him under arrest.

Recorder Stanton held the prisoner for the Grand Jury. He said his name was Joseph Connon, but refusedt ogive his address.

Smoking Caused Lip Cancer.

J. Herbert Potts, President of the Jersey City Police Board, underwent an operation for cancer of the lip yesterday at the home of his son-in-law, Oscar Gubelman, in East Orange, N. J. The surgeons say he ought to recover in a few weeks. The X-ray treatment was used. The cancer was said to be due to smoking.

GRISCOM'S CURIOS DAMAGED.

Goods the Ambassador Brought from Japan Badly Injured on Voyage.

When the British steamship Coulsdon arrived in New York from Japan ten days ago she brought several hundred cases of Japanese and Chinese antiques and curios, consigned to Lloyd C. Griscom, former Minister to Japan, and now Ambassador to Brazil. When they were opened it was found that at least a score of the cases had been badly damaged, one of them said to have contained a Chinese musical instrument several hundred years old being particularly badly used up.

The cases are supposed to have been placed on board in good order. The damage resulted, it is said, from the rolling and pitching of the vessel during several big storms on the long voyage from Japan to New York. What Mr. Griscom is going to do about the matter is not yet known. The cargo agents, Messrs. Arnhold, Karberg & Co., said yesterday that, pending his decision, they had nothing to say. Mr. Griscom is now on his way to Brazil.

A NEW CITY TO RISE ABOUT BIG STEEL PLANT

Its Name Will Be Gary, for Steel Corporation's Chairman.

PLANT TO COST $75,000,000

Will Be Built in Indiana on Lake Michigan—To Change Calumet River's Course.

Detailed plans of the mammoth steel plant the United States Steel Corporation is building in Indiana on the shores of Lake Michigan were laid before the Directors of the company at the regular quarterly meeting of the board yesterday afternoon. The new plant, which is to cost $75,000,000, is to be built by the Indiana Steel Company, a subsidiary organization of the United States Steel Corporation, formed for the purpose of carrying out the company's plans for this new steel plant, which will be the largest and the best equipped of its kind in the world. The plant is being built primarily to serve the Western market, but it is so located that its product can be marketed advantageously in the East as well as in the West.

Many of the Directors were informed at yesterday's meeting for the first time of the details of this important undertaking. Frequently during the meeting the Directors expressed surprise at the plans which the active officers of the company, including E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors, have worked out for the establishment of this new steel plant, which will eclipse all others.

The furnaces, rolling mills, and other parts of the plant itself will cover a square mile, and in addition the company owns thousands of acres which will be used for a town site, for vast railroad yards, and for other facilities needed to insure the effective operation of this gigantic plant. After the meeting of the Directors yesterday Judge Gary, after whom the town which is to be built up around this new steel plant is to be named, announced some portion of the company's plans.

The plant will consist of a large aggregation of blast furnaces, open hearth furnaces, and finishing mills, but the whole is to be so thoroughly co-ordinated that it will in fact be a single plant. There are to be sixteen blast furnaces, eighty-four open hearth furnaces, and six finishing mills, some of which, individually, will be larger than any of the single mills owned by the Steel Corporation.

The rail mill, for example, will be built at a cost of $2,500,000, and will be capable of rolling about 75,000 tons of rails a month. The first of the big rail mills constructed by the Steel Corporation in the Pittsburg district, which at the time was considered a very large mill, cost but $600,000.

Some idea of the amount of material which it will take to supply these mills is gained from the company's estimate that fully 5,000,000 tons of iron ore will be required by the plant annually. This will be brought down from the company's mines in the Lake Superior region, and will be brought in to docks immediately adjoining the company's blast furnaces, which form the first division of the Indiana plant.

This ore will be converted into about 3,000,000 tons of pig iron, which in turn will produce from 2,500,000 to 2,700,000 tons of steel. Every ton of iron ore used will call for the consumption of at least another ton of coal and coke. The coal for steam purposes will be brought from the Indiana mines of the Deering Coal Company, with which the Steel Corporation has a fifty-year contract, and the coking coal from the Pocahontas coal fields in West Virginia.

The erection of the company's plant will require a vast amount of structural steel, the production of which will keep some of the company's present mills busy for many months. A small army of men will be employed for two years or more in the construction of the plant, and when it is completed it will give employment to about 15,000 men.

The location of the plant includes a portion of the present bed of the Calumet River, the course of which is to be changed so that the waterway will fit in with the company's plans for the development of the land between the lake front and the Calumet River.

In addition to the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern and the other railroads owned by the Steel Corporation, the new plant will be served by four great railroad systems—the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, the Baltimore and Ohio, and the Wabash. The Erie also passes within easy connection of the new plant. The Steel Corporation will own vast railroad yards to the west of the plant, which will be connected with all these railroad systems.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern of the New York Central system, the Baltimore and Ohio and the Wabash are engaged in altering their lines in the neighborhood of the new plant so as to avoid all grade crossings and to make them fit in better with the Steel Corporation's scheme of construction. The Baltimore and Ohio and the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern will have a union station in the town of Gary and the Pennsylvania and the Wabash will have separate stations of their own.

The town of Gary, which primarily will be the dwelling place of the men employed in the new plant, is expected by the officers of the Steel Corporation within four or five years to have a population of fully 100,000 people, which will place it in the front rank of the smaller cities of the United States. This population would make the town of Gary larger than Albany. The town is to be constructed as a model one, but the officers of the Steel Corporation say that no use will be made of fads.

Already the Steel Corporation has received applications from many directions for the privilege of establishing banks and stores of all kinds in this city which is expected to grow up around the Indiana Steel Company's plant. The Steel Corporation will sell building sites in the town of Gary, but only under restrictions, so that the Steel Corporation will be able to control the building up of the town.

J. P. MORGAN, JR., WILL STAY.

Won't Sail Yet—Report of His Father's Illness Is Denied.

J. P. Morgan, Jr., who was to have sailed for Europe to-day, has postponed his trip. The change in Mr. Morgan's plans was made known in a message sent by him to Secretary Wilson of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Morgan is acting as treasurer of the chamber's San Francisco Relief Fund, and in preparation for his departure plans had been made for the naming of another treasurer to succeed him so that the relief work of the chamber could proceed without interruption.

The news of Mr. Morgan's postponement of his trip to Europe led to rumors that some member of the firm of Morgan & Co. had been taken seriously ill. This, however, was denied at the Morgan offices.

The rumor of the illness of a member of the firm was said to be due to the haste with which Mr. Morgan left the Chamber of Commerce rooms yesterday afternoon upon the receipt of a message from his office. The report was circulated in some quarters that a cable message had been received at the Morgan offices saying that J. P. Morgan, Sr., had been taken ill abroad. This was denied, along with the other similar reports.

The older Morgan has been abroad for several months, and is expected to return soon.

MORE SEWER EXPLOSIONS.

Manhole Covers Blown Up and Windows Broken on West Side.

There was another series of explosions on the upper west side yesterday afternoon that seriously alarmed persons living in West Fifty-first Street and on Ninth Avenue, between Forty-seventh and Fifty-fourth Streets. Every manhole cover in the district was thrown high in the air, and the glass in many windows was broken. West siders have become pretty well accustomed to such explosions of late, as this was the third occurrence of this kind within a month. Fortunately no one was seriously injured yesterday, though two or three persons were slightly hurt.

The first explosion occurred about 4 o'clock in the cellar of Peter McMahon's saloon, at the corner of Fifty-first Street and Tenth Avenue. McMahon sent one of his bartenders out to turn in a fire alarm, and then went down into the cellar to see what the matter was. He found the top of a waste pipe blown off, and, as he tried to cover it, flames shot up and his face and hands were burned. He was taken to Roosevelt Hospital.

About this time the firemen arrived and entered the cellar. As they did so there was an explosion that made the big saloon windows rattle, and the manhole covers on Fifty-first Street shot into the air like a series of rockets. The same thing happened on Ninth Avenue, where the covers were thrown as high as the elevated structure.

The reserves from the West Forty-seventh Street Station were called out, and Roundsmen Tunney and Gilhooly soon had their men busy covering up the holes and quieting the crowd that gathered. Barrels and boxes were obtained from grocery stores and put over the holes. The Sewer Department sent word that it would put in new covers as soon as possible. In all twenty-six manhole covers were blown up, eleven of which were on Fifty-first Street, between Ninth and Eleventh Avenues. This is the same street that suffered from the two explosions earlier in the month.

Joseph Sardini, a coal dealer, of 691 Ninth Avenue, had a narrow escape from serious injury. He was walking along Fifty-first Street, near Tenth Avenue, with a sack of coal on his back intended for McMahon's saloon. One of the manhole covers near him blew up, and as it came down grazed his back. The bag of coal protected him, however, and he was not badly hurt. He went to Roosevelt Hospital with McMahon.

The other injuries recorded were trivial. Herbert Wickman, 2 years old, was cut in the hand by a piece of broken glass from the transom of his home, at 774 Ninth Avenue. A piece of a manhole cover cut a cab horse's leg so badly that his driver, William Nelson, took the animal back to the stable.

Borough President Ahearn is making an investigation of the repeated explosions in the district, but has not reported as yet.

MITCHELL ANSWERS OWNERS.

Says Delay in Action on Anthracite Proposal Is Due to Their Fault.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., April 24.—President John Mitchell of the Mine Workers' Union arrived here this afternoon, and will preside at the meeting of the Scale Committee to-morrow morning, at which action will be taken upon the last reply of the anthracite operators. He replied to the statement of the operators published this morning by saying:

"The delay is not due to me as they charge. I wrote to the operators on Dec. 16, asking for a conference any time between that date and Jan. 12, but they declined to hold it then. As for causing 150,000 mine workers to sacrifice their wages this month by the suspension order, I desire to say that the mine workers suffered no loss in wages by the suspension and the operators no loss in coal production. The mine workers made the wages they otherwise would have made this month in mining the overproduction of coal stored by the operators during the last twelve months, and had there been no suspension there would have been little work this month on that account."

He declared there have been no desertions from the mine workers' ranks since the suspension was ordered.

FRANCHOT OR WHIPPLE.

Opinion Divided Between Them as Probable Successor to Hendricks.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—There is no doubt that Gov. Higgins has decided upon the next incumbent of the office of Insurance Commissioner to succeed Hendricks, and it is understood that the nominee has given his assurances of acceptance to the Governor.

The best guessers here to-night profess to be at sea as to the man to be named. It is pretty well understood, however, that Matthew C. Fleming will not be named for the place, and the tide of prophecy runs to Franchot and Whipple, with opinion about equally divided between the two men. It is possible that the Governor will send his nomination to the Senate to-morrow.

RUINING THE RUINS TO MAKE CITY SAFE

Dynamiting All the Debris in San Francisco Yesterday.

THOUSANDS RUSHING OUT

Vehicles of Every Sort Used to Carry the Fleeing Throngs to Places of Safety.

From a Special Correspondent.

MINT, SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 24.—There are fewer people in San Francisco to-day than for forty years. Every boat, every ocean-going steamer, every train, and even wagons are being utilized by the burned-out inhabitants to escape.

A man on horseback to-day commands San Francisco. He rides up and down the streets at top speed. His dirty blue uniform, his clanking sword, and his authoritative countenance denote him the man of action that he is.

He directs the destruction by dynamite of enormous ruins, that fall with a resounding crash of protest against further shaking or disturbance.

He caused an enormous amount of dynamite to be placed under the great foundations, and his assistant pressed the electric button that touched it off. The explosion lifted huge blocks of granite and sandstone 100 feet in the air.

Back and ever back he drove the refugees. It seemed an anti-climax to ruin ruins, but it was necessary for the safety of the few thousands that must remain in the city. In the camps of the refugees things are more hopeful. Food is coming in fast, and in great quantities.

The problem of distribution has almost been solved, and adequate shelter tents are being provided as needed.

The refugees continue to leave by the thousands. The experience of the last two days and the last two terrible nights in the parks has been too much for the fortitude of even these courageous refugees.

Showers of cold rain have fallen upon them, and the bitter wind has rendered anything like comfortable sleep impossible. In the burned district no camps remain, except at Portsmouth Square and on the summit of Telegraph Hill, where an ancient pleasure garden is being utilized by a few dozen of the Italian population that remain faithful to the old hill that has sheltered them for so many years.

The ruined district is safer for traffic than it has been any time since the fire. The conflict in authority has disappeared with the assumption of control by the regular army and a dismissal of State troops and police for the time being. Maritime traffic has been resumed and work on the rehabilitation of traction and telephone and telegraph lines are well under way.

When the streets have been made safe by the destruction of dangerous walls under the direction of the artilliery engineers work on the actual reconstruction will be begun at once.

The death list yesterday reached 300. More bodies are being discovered, and more injured are dying every twenty-four hours. Doctors and nurses are working night and day to ameliorate bad sanitary conditions. Warning notices are being posted everywhere.

Four-fifths of the population have fled to interior cities. Oakland had 150,000 fugitives. The food problem is no longer serious, and financial affairs have been cleared by the issuance of transfer orders on the Mint for over $15,000,000. The railroads are carrying refugees free to the State line, and then East for 1 cent a mile.

The only dark spot on the horizon now is the fear of disease; pneumonia more than any other. Sporadic cases of fever and measles are being handled efficiently. The tone of the people is hopeful and the crisis is past. Plans for reconstruction are now all that is being talked of, and the work is already under way.

Despite the lamentable death of Mr. Tilden, the most active man on the Citizens' Relief Committee, most of the reports of indiscriminate shooting by guards are unverified. One Chinaman was shot in the shoulder for looting to-day. Fourteen men were shot Friday night at different places. No attempt has been made to rob the Mint. Its windows are barricaded with iron.

TEN OVERCOME BY SMOKE.

Policemen Carry Men, Women, and Children from Burning Building.

Ten persons were overcome by smoke and carried out of a burning building at 5 East 214th Street in Wakefield, at midnight last night in a fire which did about $400 damage to the place. It began in the cigar store of Dominico Costello, on the first floor of the building, a two-story frame structure.

There were a dozen persons on the second floor of the house. Policemen Edward Ross, Frederick Grecke, and John Eckerich of the Wakefield Sub-Station ran to the burning house when they heard the alarm. They were told the upper floors of the house were filled with sleeping persons and, as none had come out, the policemen ran to the upper story.

They found ten persons, men, women, and children, in rooms where they had been overcome by the dense smoke which poured into the place, and which could not escape on account of closed windows and doors. The police carried the people down one at a time until all were rescued. None was dead, but all were in bad shape. Doctors managed to revive them.

FATHER LYNCHES NEGRO.

Shoots Man Captured by Crowd After Attack on His Daughter.

GROSBACK, Texas, April 24.—While being conveyed to jail in the custody of two officers a negro who, it is alleged, assaulted the daughter of J. A. Eastland, a farmer of Delia, at an early hour this morning, was taken from the officers by a posse of citizens and held until the arrival of the girl's father.

When Eastland rode up he ordered the crowd to stand back, and emptied both barrels of his shotgun, loaded with buckshot, into the negro, killing him instantly. There is no excitement.

FRANK FARRELL HURT.

Automobile Hits a Telegraph Pole on Way from Race Track.

Frank J. Farrell, the baseball man and race horse owner, was injured in an automobile accident while returning from the Aqueduct race track yesterday afternoon.

The machine ran into a telegraph pole while on the way to the Thirty-fourth Street Ferry, and Farrell and two other men, who were gaurding a satchel full of money, were thrown out. Farrell was the only one hurt.

He was taken in a cab to St. John's Hospital, where he gave his name as James Williams. It was said at the hospital that he would be able to leave this morning.

The police learned his identity by the number of the automobile.

MATTEUCCI REACHES CRATER.

Indications Are That Vesuvius Is Becoming a Dead Volcano.

NAPLES, April 24.—Prof. Matteucci, Director of the Royal Observatory, to-day succeeded in reaching the crater of Vesuvius. He describes the spectacle there as one of great grandeur. The diameter of the crater has increased many times. There is no eruption of incandescent stones, as before the recent outburst, but a small quantity of ashes is being ejected.

Vesuvius seems to be assuming the character of a dead volcano. The cone of the crater, which before the eruption rose to a height of 6,000 feet above sea level, has diminished about 800 feet.

Work is being vigorously pushed to reestablish the Funicular Railway to the observatory.

HADLEY A BERLIN LECTURER.

Yale's President to Hold Roosevelt Professorship in 1907-8.

Arthur T. Hadley, President of Yale University, has been chosen Roosevelt professor for 1907-8 at the University of Berlin by the Trustees of Columbia University.

President Hadley has accepted the professorship, and his selection has met with the approval of the Prussian Ministry of Education and the German Emperor. Prof. Hadley's lectures while at Berlin will deal with American economic problems.

The Roosevelt professorship was founded by James Speyer, Trustee of Teachers College, who gave $50,000 to Columbia University for this purpose. The conditions of the gift are that the Columbia Trustees shall choose the incumbent, subject to the approval of the Prussian Ministry of Education and the Kaiser.

Further conditions of the gift are that the professor going to Berlin shall lecture upon subjects connected solely with the United States, and that the lectures shall be given in the German language. Prof. Burgess, Dean of the Faculty of Political Science at Columbia, will be the first one to fill the Roosevelt chair at Berlin. He will lecture in 1906-7 on American constitutional law.

The sending of American professors to Germany is part of a scheme for the interchange of lecturers which has been entered into by the Prussian Ministry of Education and several American universities. The selections of the German professors to come to America have not yet been announced.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 24.—President Hadley says that his appointment as Roosevelt Professor in the University of Berlin will necessitate his absence from Yale for four months, from November to March.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 24.—The Cornell Alumni News announces that Miss Nora Stanton Blatch, granddaughter of Elizabeth Cady Stanton and the first woman to win the degree of civil engineering at Cornell University, has received an offer from the Chinese Government to become a member of the corps of engineers which that Government is assembling to develop and open up the interior railroads of the country.

Miss Blatch recently was elected to membership in the American Society of Civil Engineers, being the first woman in the United States who has received this honor.

AN OCTOGENARIAN EVICTED.

Purdy Homestead Had Been in the Family for 170 Years.

Deputy Sheriff Doyle of Westchester County was sent to Yorktown, in the northern part of Westchester County, yesterday to dispossess Alsop Purdy, an old resident of that place, because he refused to move out after his property had been sold under foreclosure proceedings.

Purdy is 81 years old, and the homestead has been in the family 170 years. The old man's great-grandfather fought under Washington in the Revolutionary War. Yet the Deputy was forced to seize the old man's effects in the house where he was born and put them out on the highway. Then the Deputy locked the door with the key which had been used for 170 years, and brought it to White Plains. It will be turned over to the mortgagees.

Judge McKenna will sail for New York. He says he will see the President. The Bar Association is active in the matter of the appointment of a successor to Judge McKenna.

Protest Against Supremacy of Red Cross.

BANKERS PLAN TO RESUME

Southern Pacific Offers to Build a Special Line to Clear Away Debris—Schools Soon to Open.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Consternation was created this morning when Dr. Edward Devine of the National Red Cross arrived here bearing a proclamation of President Roosevelt turning over to him the management of relief measures and the distribution of the great funds so generously appropriated by Congress. This feeling was deepened by the President's recommendation to the people of the United States that their contributions of food and supplies and money should be diverted into the same hands. There was a feeling that the men who had endured the heat and the burden of the day and had done so well were being unfairly treated by this diversion of authority into new and foreign keeping.

At a conference at Fort Mason attended by Gens. Greely and Funston, Mayor Schmitz, Gov. Pardee, Dr. Devine, and some others, it was agreed that this was the case, and that Dr. Devine himself should frame a telegram to the President informing him of the splendid work already done and of his perfect willingness to assist in forwarding the measures already taken.

What hurt even more than this was the suggestion made in a letter from President Roosevelt to Secretary of War Taft telegraphed here to-day that reports had reached him that less charity was being shown the Chinese who dwelt here than the whites, and directing that if this be true, the situation should be remedied at once.

The portion of President Roosevelt's letter to Secretary Taft to which objection is made reads:

"According to the newspaper reports the suffering and destitution are peculiarly great among the Chinese. I need hardly say that the Red Cross work must be done wholly without regard to persons, and just as much for Chinese as for any others. Please wire Dr. Devine at once to see that this is done. Will it not be well also to wire Gen. Funston to the same effect? I know nothing of the matter beyond what appears in the daily papers."

If the people of San Francisco are not in love with the Chinese, it was felt that the name they have earned in the past for charity and open-heartedness should have saved them from any reflection that they would have permitted any human being—white, black, or yellow—within their reach to suffer.

Telegram of Protest Sent.

A special message was sent to Mr. Roosevelt signed by the constituted authorities recounting the exact facts. The message was as follows:

"President Roosevelt, White House,
Washington:

"All reports that the people or the officials of the Relief Committees of San Francisco are making any distinction in relieving, succoring, or protecting the Chinese or any other people differing in race or color are totally false and entirely unfounded.

"The committees and even the homeless sufferers themselves are treating the Chinese and all other fellow unfortunates with the consideration worthy of our civilization and our country.

"The people of San Francisco are striving with all their heart to relieve their destitute, care for the sick, protect their helpless, and uplift their stricken irrespective of race, color, or creed, in accordance with the dictates of humanity, in a manner worth of Americans, and in the common brotherhood of man. Please give press.

"F. J. SIMMS,
"President Merchants' Association.
"J. D. PHELAN,

"RABBI VOORSANGER,

"CATHERINE C. FELTON,

"FAIRFAX H. WHEELMAN,
"Committee Sick and Helpless."

Late this afternoon Dr. Devine said to members of the General Committee: "I have come here to see, hear, and report, and my chief aim is to co-operate with you and carry on the work you have so well begun."

It was decided at a meeting this afternoon that the Finance Committee should be reconstructed so as to include the Red Cross fund, and henceforth the official title of this most important committee will be the Finance Committee of the Relief and Red Cross Funds.

At a joint meeting this afternoon of the Finance Committee and the Chairmen of all the emergency committees it was ascertained that the loss of life caused by the catastrophe is less than 300. This approximation was made by Fairfax Wheelman, Chairman of the Relief of Sick and Wounded Committee, and surprised every one present, as an estimate of 1,000 and more had been made by the Coroner's office.

It was also ascertained that the expenses incurred by the different committees in carrying on their divers duties are thus far considerably less than expected. The statement of Mr. Wheelman that all physicians and nurses had volunteered their services and refused emolument was greeted with cheers by the committee members present.

This was the seventh day since the earthquake jarred the city so severely and started the fires that laid it in ashes, and, as on the preceding days, Tuesday took up the accumulated impetus of Monday and added much volume of force of its own, so that Wednesday will dawn on a situation that is a long way toward the normal.

Such marts of trade as remain unburned were opening for the transaction of ordinary business, temporary structures being run up for the accommodation of others, clearing of the devastated area of its ruins was well under way, the inquiry into the condition of the bank vaults was completed, and the organization and preparation for service of street railways were so far advanced that the company expressed its readiness to resume business as soon as the Mayor would permit.

In fine, there is all the evidence that puts at rest now and forever the fears of those who predicted that San Francisco would never rise again.

The work of housing and feeding the homeless and of reconstituting the sanitary conditions, already far advanced Monday, were carried on with tremendous energy to-day. It is certain that no one is hungry in San Francisco to-night unless he is wilfully so.

As for the health and sanitary conditions, there is, considering all circumstances, nothing to be desired. There has been no outbreak of disease of a contagious character, nor is any feared, and as for those pulmonary diseases that might be expected to be prevalent in such a crisis, they are chiefly notable by their absence.

Planning the City Beautiful.

Steps are being taken to organize the movement for the rebuilding of San Francisco on the plans of Architect Daniel Burnham, which have been before the San Francisco public for two years. While the various other committees have been busy with relief work many prominent citizens have been in consultation on this subject, and within the next few days the plans will be outlined for one of the most beautiful cities in the world.

W. E. Barnett, one of the leaders in this movement, says all the funds needed for this great work will be forthcoming as soon as the committee is ready. Telegrams have been sent all over the country explaining the plans, and great men of finance have expressed their willingness to co-operate in the task and advance any funds that are needed.

The work will begin right at the water front. This district will be entirely rebuilt on new and modern as well as picturesque lines. It is estimated that $25,000,000 will be spent in this section. New wharves will be constructed on entirely different lines and new depots will be built.

The other portions of the city will be improved after Mr. Burnham's plans, which have been fully explained in the San Francisco press for two years. The great boulevard, the terrace at Twin Peaks, and the various parks and other beautiful spots will now be constructed.

W. D. Wood, ex-Mayor of Seattle, who came to San Francisco immediately after the receipt of the reports of the earthquake to search for relatives who had been visiting in that city, and who has since been actively engaged in relief work in the interests of the Seattle Relief Committee, after a thorough review of the situation, to-day expressed his impression as follows:

"San Francisco is a world lesson in optimism," he said. "Her triumph is proportionate to her misfortune. The spirit of her 'forty-niners' and her 'native sons' falters at nothing. Already she is rising from her ashes. The man who burned his hands yesterday because he could not wait for the bricks to cool truly represents the San Francisco spirit.

"The new San Francisco will be better than the old, as was the case in Boston, Chicago, Seattle, Galveston, and Baltimore, but on a much larger scale. Thirty days will see 50,000 men at work in the burned district.

"San Francisco's great commerce will go on. This, with the expenditure of her reserve wealth, of her insurance moneys, and of the many millions of outside money that will seek investment in her new improvements, will make San Francisco the busiest city on the globe. This activity will continue for years until a modern and greater San Francisco shall reward the faith and restore the losses of her people."

Big Forces Work in Debris.

Many merchants are making arrangements for clearing the ruins of their buildings as rapidly as men can be hired, preparatory to beginning building operations. Walls are constantly being blown down, and big forces of men are at work on the débris.

It is announced that work will be rushed on the seventeen-story building of the Humboldt Bank, on Market Street, near Fourth. The steel for this structure was on the way West when the earthquake came. The disaster has not made any change in the plans. It was found that buildings of brick and terra cotta construction stood the test of the earthquake and fire, and it is of this material that the bank building will be constructed.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company has decided to rebuild on the old site on Montgomery, Sacramento, and Commercial Streets, a bigger and better building. It will now cover the whole frontage of the block on Montgomery Street instead of a corner of the lot, as heretofore.

The condemned ferry building will be removed and rebuilt at once. The tower was damaged by the earthquake in three lower stories, and it will have to be strengthened by rods and timbers before the actual work of removal can be safely done. The new tower will be of reinforced concrete. Temporarily the Southern Pacific Company will have its headquarters in the building.

The Stock and Exchange Board, which was burned out, has opened temporarily at 1,407 Gough Street. An executive session will be held in a few days, to decide upon the date of resumption of business. The Goldfield Exchange was closed immediately on receipt of news of the catastrophe.

New Chinatown Is Ordered.

The big fire obliterated the old Chinatown forever. Mayor Schmits has informed Chief of Police Dinan that all of the Chinese now in the city will be collected and placed in and near Fontana's Warehouses, near Fort Mason, and that the new Chinatown would be located at Hunter's Point, on the southern extremity of the county on the bay shore. It is several miles distant from the old Chinatown. All Chinese who have left the city and who return to it will be concentrated at the new point.

The United Railroads has tendered the use of the entire system to Mayor Schmitz for the benefit of the people during the present crisis. Free transportation will be furnished over the lines. The company's cars are also free for shelter and lodging.

Within twenty-four hours probably four street-car lines will be in operation in the city, and the streets of two extensive districts will be lighted by electricity. The United Railroads declare that lines are safe for operation. The lights will be turned on as soon as the wires leading into the houses which might prove a source of danger have been cut. This work is progressing rapidly.

Railway to Take Away Debris.

As a welcome relief to the officials and citizens of San Francisco who have looked upon the ruins of the city and upon the monstrous piles of bricks and stone and twisted iron that were once their homes and places of business, is the announcement that the Southern Pacific Railway will aid in any way in the work of tearing away the débris.

The railroad officials are ready to build a track through the heart of the devastated city from Harrison Street to the bay and to run their flat cars in for the wreckage that must be removed before new buildings can arise and normal conditions be restored. In this great work it is announced that between 3,000 and 4,000 men will be employed.

The railroads will carry the débris wherever the authorities want it taken, and by so doing will make possible the performance of the enormous task that has been terrifying to those who have looked forward to it.

It is said an application will be made immediately to the Supervisors of San Francisco for a franchise for this track. The route is not known, but the rails will perhaps be laid along the lines of least resistance and under the express stipulation that they shall be removed as soon as the work of clearing away the wreckage has been completed.

E. H. Harriman, President of the Southern Pacific Company, will inaugurate the work and see that it is faithfully performed if the suggestion of the railroad men meet with favor at the hands of the city officials.

The high officials of the commercial banks of San Francisco held another meeting to-day. The principal business transacted was the decision to appoint a general committee of nine with full power to provide means for the paying of depositors and in general to make all necessary arrangements for resumption of business in every branch by the banks.

After the meeting Homer S. King, President of the Clearing House Association, who is presiding at the present conferences, said:

"We have made arrangements to pay out funds as rapidly as possible, and to this end we have had an understanding with the United States officials whereby the money will be paid at the Mint. Details of the plan have not yet been fully worked out, and we will not be able to pay out any money for several days."

President King said that no San Francisco bank would change its headquarters to across the bay. The savings institutions are deferring in all respects to the commercial banks, and the new plans of the latter are awaited.

Gov. Pardee has announced that he will continue to proclaim legal holidays from day to day as long as the financial condition of the State is unsettled.

"Although the leading financial men of the State have been holding meetings daily since the fire," he said, "they have arrived at no definite conclusion as to when they will be able to reopen the banks. I am informed that the vaults of many of the destroyed banks are still so hot that it will be unsafe to open the strong boxes for a week or more."

A safe expert after examining safes and vaults in many buildings in the burned district says that the vaults of the banks are all right, but it will be several days before they can be opened on account of the heat.

Eighty men of the Benecia Signal Corps have arrived, and are at work restoring the Government telephone and telegraph communications. The Home Telephone Company, to which has been given a franchise, will soon begin work on their telephone system. The company will spend about $4,000,000 here in the next three years.

The embargo on merchant vessels has been removed and shipping can now be moved as usual. For the last few days vessels of the Pacific squadron have been keeping vessels from leaving the port, but this restriction has been removed by orders from Admiral Goodrich.

The teachers, Principals, Superintendents, and the Board of Education are ready for work. Buildings or tents suitable for school purposes will be provided in the near future, and just as soon as they are ready school will begin.

Weather Favors the Homeless.

The weather to-day was ideal, and indications for a continuation of such conditions are good. Following the rain which fell Sunday night and yesterday, last night was one of comparative comfort. The night was clear, warm, and balmy. Yesterday afternoon wagon loads of quilts and blankets were distributed among those who have suffered intensely from the cold and exposure, and tents replaced many improvised shelters.

While the heavy rain for the time being added much to the misery of the homeless, it did much toward improving sanitary conditions throughout the city.

No Fear of an Epidemic.

"Say to the people of California, of the United States, and of the world that there is no epidemic in San Francisco and no danger of one," said Dr. J. W. Ward, Chairman of the Health Committee, at a meeting of the general committee to-day. "If we are not absolutely free from contagious diseases we at least have fewer of them than we have under the circumstances any right to expect. Indeed, we have at this moment fewer cases of such diseases than we had a month ago, and there is nothing in the present condition of affairs in San Francisco that would lead us as medical men to fear an outbreak. The sanitation of the city is absolutely under control."

This statement was received with applause by the general committee. The doctor was distinctly impressive, and his remarks were at once supplemented by a motion that it was the sense of the committee that The Associated Press should disseminate this important news through its agencies.

Three hundred plumbers under the direction of the Board of Health are now at work in all sections of the city. They are confining their efforts solely to sewers and water pipes. The broken mains in the business districts are being repaired and the outlets closed. In the unburned residence section the sewers are being flushed and cleaned, and water pipes set in order as fast as possible. Two weeks possibly will be required for this work. By that time there will be running water in all occupied houses.

It is now stated by the officers of the Board of Health that the staff of physicians and nurses at all hospitals is complete.

Red Cross Not to Interfere.

It was announced at the meeting of the General Committee to-day that Dr. Devine, who has been placed in charge of the Red Cross work, had arrived, and would immediately confer with Mayor Schmitz. There seemed to be some fear on th part of the committee that President Roosevelt's proclamation turning over matters to Dr. Devine would put the Municipal Committee in the background, but the committee was assured by Congressman Kahn, who arrived to-day, that Dr. Devine has been sent to co-operate. United States Circuit Judge Morrow made the same statement, saying that he had been in communication with Secretary Taft by telegraph.

The relief and supply committees have reported that all refugees are being cared for and there is plenty of food. If anything, supplies are being distributed too lavishly. Measures to economize, however, will be put in force at once.

A representative of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce was present at the meeting of the General Committee, and he stated that Los Angeles would continue to send supplies as long as needed. A telegram was received from Gov. Curtis Guild of Massachusetts saying that Massachusetts had subscribed $250,000 and had sent enormous supplies, and that they were prepared to continue until every one was supplied. The reading of the message was followed by great applause.

Temporary structures have been erected in Golden Gate Park for the housing of 40,000 people. This work was begun this morning by the shelter committee and the homeless who have been sleeping out of doors for nearly a week were moved into comparatively comfortable quarters. More blankets and bedding were received and sent to the park.

At present there is little suffering, and before a week it is expected that all the refugees here will be comfortable. At the same time the committee is sending as many of the refugees as possible to interior points.

Work and succor have been promised. The railroads furnish transportation gratis to all who come with recommendations from the committee.

The seizure begun yesterday of all vacant houses in the unburned district is still under way. Many vacant flats have been taken, where the homeless are housed and the sick are put in good accommodations. A committee of architects has been sent out to examine churches and other buildings, including schoolhouses, with a view of turning them into living rooms for the homeless.

Every Ounce of Food Checked.

Supplies of food are coming in rapidly from outside points and are being centralized in the freight sheds and warehouses still standing. A corps of shipping clerks has been placed in charge of these depots, and every ounce of food is checked as it comes in and goes out.

With the assistance of Michael Casey, President of the Teamsters' Union, the Food Committee has systematized the distribution. They have taken possession of all the large trucks and teams which are now utilized in hauling supplies to the forty odd sub-depots throughout the city. This places the transportation facilities in excellent shape and makes it possible to deliver supplies as quickly as they come.

The city has been laid off in areas of four blocks. The sub-committees in these districts regulate the supply of food furnished to the families living within their boundaries.

"From our investigation," said Oscar D. Cooper, who is in charge of these committees, "we know that there are thousands of people in this city who are able and willing to pay for their supplies. If the dealers in butter, eggs, flour, and other staples should resume business it would do much to re-establish confidence and put the city on its former business basis.

"We want those in the unburned districts to start out with deliveries going from house to house with supplies just as they have been in the habit of doing. When this is begun the people will soon return to their homes and the unrest and uncertainty will soon vanish. I can say that the situation is in excellent shape, and that by the end of the week all the confusion will have disappeared."

Model City at Presidio.

Conditions at the Presidio are being rapidly reduced to a systematic basis, and the efforts of the authorities are now being directed to the organization of a perfect system for the control of the thousands of people who have sought refuge within the reservation.

Within a day or so a model camp will have been put in operation. Preparations are being made to gather together all the refugees within one immense tented city. The model city will be located just within and north of the Union Street entrance of the Presidio. It will be streeted, sewered, and constantly patroled and order and sanitary conditions preserved as nearly as is possible.

The food supply will be regulated. Hereafter the residents of the camp will not be required to go to the various relief stations for their supplies, but the commodities will be presented from tent to tent.

It has been definitely ascertained by the commissary and other departments that there has been great abuse of the free food and clothing privileges. Whole families have been accustomed to stand in line several times a day, each carrying away with him supplies of food to last for several days. In this way several families have accumulated stocks of provisions to last them for many weeks to come.

At one camp canned beef, canned corn and beans, rice, onions, potatoes, prunes, bread, pepper, sugar, tea, and milk were served in turn to the line long, each person asking for what he or she wanted when passing the various tables.

In the past few days thousands of people have left the reservation, having found homes with friends in this city or gone to Oakland, Alameda, or other places. The authorities estimate that the number of campers on the grounds has now been reduced to less than 8,000. A few days ago over 30,000 people were camped on the reservation. Excess tents will be taken to other camps throughout the city and distributed. In a few days tentage sufficient to house 150,000 people will arrive here and will be distributed at various points throughout the city.

Women in Men's Clothes.

In some of the provisional camps established for refugees near the foot of Van Ness Avenue and near Fort Mason it was difficult this morning to distinguish men from women. Evidently the supply of women's clothing had been exhausted, for many women could be seen dressed in ordinary soft shirts and overalls. In this garb they were walking about their tents, unconcernedly, preparing breakfast. It was no time for false modesty, and those who were able to make themselves comfortable in any sort of clothing were indeed fortunate.

It has been suggested to the Relief Committee, especially to the members of the Finance Committee, that stores of khaki bloomers and blouses be purchased for the women. They are preferable to overalls, and will in some measure save the feelings of the women whose wardrobes were lost in the destruction of their homes.

A transportation line for passengers and baggage has been established to the ferry, and the authorities will not permit expressmen to charge more than 50 cents for the hauling of a trunk and 25 cents for smaller baggage to any part of the city.

The Spring Valley Water Company has about 1,000 men at work repairing and replacing broken water mains, and many portions of the residence section are now abundantly supplied with water.

Kahn's Tribute to the Nation.

Representive Kahn arrived this morning, having left Washington Thursday afternoon after briefly telling the House of Representatives of the disaster. His wife and family are still here, and after visiting Police Headquarters he went in search of them.

"Never in my life have I seen such a spontaneous response to the needs of a distressed country as was witnessed after the news of the disaster was learned," he said. "From every hand I was promised assistance to repair the damage that had been done to the Western metropolis. Money was offered in any amount we might need, and promises were made that all the Federal buildings that had been destroyed would be rebuilt.

"Congressman Overstreet of the Committee on Post Offices asked me to telegraph him the extent of the damage to the local Post Office, and said that he would incorporate in the appropriation bill now pending a sufficient sum to put it in repair. The same action will be taken in regard to the other Government buildings.

"As soon as I find my family I will return here and do what I can to aid the stricken city, because I believe that the disaster will not destroy but only retard its progress. We should all put our shoulders to the wheel to help bring from the ruins a city more beautiful and more prosperous than San Francisco has been in the past."

Military rule by the police, irksome at all times to the civilian, is still maintained. Yet there is some amelioration of its severity. The soldiers of the militia having given some cause of complaint by impressing men when it was necessary that work should be done, they were warned this evening in a letter sent by Mayor Schmitz to Gen. Koster that this city was never and will never be under martial law, and that the impressment of citizens would no longer be tolerated.

Following the killing of Major H. C. Tilden of the General Relief Committee on Sunday by some self-constituted vigilantes, the city patrols and all guards probably will be disarmed and the troops, both regular and militia, will be instructed not to shoot except in cases of extreme necessity.

The regulars, soldiers, and marines have earned for themselves high commendation for their efficient work and the exercise of good judgment and discretion in dealing with the people under their present trying circumstances.

Chief of Police Dinan announced to-day that reports of clashes between police and National guardsmen were greatly exaggerated. The officers of the department are taking their regular details from the Captains of their respective companies, and are doing patrol duty in conjunction with the regulars.

"As far as the Police Department is concerned," said Chief Dinan, "we have endeavored to co-operate with the regulars in patroling the streets and preserving order. We have had no clash with militiamen or the citizens' patrol, but there have been numerous complaints of the overzealousness of the guardsmen by citizens and for that reason we have deemed it advisable to request the withdrawal of all bodies of troops not acting under the direct command of Gen. Funston.

"Policeman Alpers, detailed on duty in an automobile, was fired upon by militiamen at Hayes Street and Van Ness Avenue shortly before midnight last night. He was speeding to Headquarters, and was challenged by regulars several times, but no effort was made to stop him until he came up against the militia patrol at Hayes Street and Van Ness Avenue.

"They commenced to shoot before challenging the automobile party, and as the officer dashed by four shots were fired by the Guardsmen. Fortunately all were poor marksmen, and Alpers lived to tell his story to his company commander.

"Captain of Police Martin was informed by militiamen in his section last night that there must be no lights. He told the guards that the orders were that the lights should be permitted until 10 o'clock P. M., but the guard was obdurate, and the Captain put in the evening without lights.

"It is such little incidents that make the militiament undesirable for the patrol duty, and has called forth a vigorous protest from the citizens."

Cheering news was received at Police Headquarters relative to the valuable records of the police identification bureau. Photographs, Bertillon measurements, and the record of every criminal in the city and many Eastern and foreign prisoners have been saved from the ravages of the fire which swept through the Hall of Justice.

When it became apparent that everything in the building was doomed, Detective Sergeant Thomas Gibson took charge of the work of saving the records of the Identification Bureau. They were carried out into Portsmouth Square, and when during the night the fire raged so fiercely that the bodies of the dead in the square were scorched Gibson and his assistants stood by with wet blankets to cover the valuable papers and photographs.

The officers were driven from the square at last, but before going the records were covered with fireproof material, and an inspection made on the order of Chief of Police Dinan this morning showed that all were intact.

Property Clerk Dinan has hopes that the valuables in his department are safe. The attachés of his office placed everything possible in the steel vaults. These receptacles seemed to be intact. Outside the vaults were warped and twisted by the heat, but the hope of the property clerk rests on the fact that the vaults are said to be fire-proof.

Squads of bluejackets were sent out to-day to kill dogs found wandering in the ruins. On Telegraph and Russian Hills and along the entire north beach front of the city this morning scores of half-starved dogs were found digging up bodies and tearing at them. Men who had been sent into the ruins to look for what little property that might have escaped the flames came upon them and immediately reported it to the naval officers in command of the water front military district.

In response to their appeal that something be done, bluejackets were detailed to cover the sections. All morning rifle reports could be heard on the hillside and along the beach as the dogs were killed. Men were pressed into service either to bury the carcasses of the dogs or throw them into the bay. In a few places some old fires were found, and there it was possible to cremate the animals.

It was not believed that there were so many dead in the ruins of Telegraph and Russian Hills until the dogs were found there digging for the bodies. When the dogs have all been run down and slain a further search will be made for the bodies.

Many sidelights of an interesting character might be thrown on the situation here, but without question that which strikes one most is the equality upon which the millionaire and the pauper stand in this community. Men of means shoulder poverty-stricken laborers in the long quest extending from the bakeshops, where the bread is dispensed.

New Yorker Is Married.

Walter Arnstein, son of a New York banker, and Miss Alice Sussman were married by Judge Lawler at the Justice's residence to-day. At the time of the earthquake Miss Sussman had been in a hospital for three days in preparation for an operation for appendicitis. After the disaster came, however, the operation was deferred, and Arnstein, who was about to leave for New York, induced Miss Sussman to wed at once. A marriage license was secured in Alameda County, and the ceremony performed by Judge Lawler.

HEROIC WORK OF GUNNERS.

Three of Them Blew Up Houses to Stop the Fire.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24. — Three heroes saved to San Francisco what is left of it. They were the dynamite squad that threw back the fire demon at Van Ness Avenue.

When the burning city seemed doomed Admiral McCalla sent a trio of his most trusted men from Mare Island to help check the flames. They brought a ton and a half of gun cotton. Capt. MacBride was in charge of the squad. Chief Gunner Adamson placed the charges, and a gunner set them off.

The detonations to which the terrified city listened all that Friday night meant the saving of many lives. A million dollars' worth of property, noble residences, and worthless shacks alike were blown to drifting dust, but that destruction broke the fire and sent the raging flames over their own charred path.

The whole east side of Van Ness Avenue, from Golden Gate to Greenwich, was dynamited a block deep, though most of the structures stood untouched by sparks or cinders. Not one charge failed. Van Ness Avenue was made as flat as the earth on the east side.

From Golden Gate Avenue north the fire crossed the wide street only at the Claus Spreckels place, on the corner of California Street. There the flames were writhing up the walls before the dynamiters could reach it. Yet they made their way to the foundations, carrying their explosives despite the furnacelike heat. The charge had to be placed so swiftly and the fuse lit in such a hurry that the explosion was not quite successful from the trained viewpoint of the gunners. But, though the walls still stood, it was only an empty victory for the fire, as bare brick and smoking ruins are poor food for flames.

The ruined district formed a trench through the clustered structures that the conflagration, wild as it was, could not leap. Engines pumping brine through Fort Madison from the bay completed the work that the gun cotton had left.

It was learned to-day that great damage has been done to the defenses of San Francisco. In fact, almost all the big guns on both sides the Golden Gate will have to be remounted, and much work will have to be done on the fortifications of concrete. The earthquake shook up the hills on which these were placed and changed the ground in such a way that some of them must be reconstructed. Only a survey by the Engineering Corps can disclose the full extent of the damage.

At Lime Point, which is a towering bluff, the emplacements of the big guns have been cracked and twisted. The heavy concrete, both on the floor and in the walls, bears unmistakable evidence of a bad shaking. Conditions are said to be equally bad at the fortifications back of Old Fort Point.

The great thirteen-inch guns on both sides of the Gate, constituting the main defense, are practically useless. They weigh many tons each, but their adjustment upon their carriages is as delicate as that of a watch. The earthquake destroyed this adjustment, and, though the damage can be repaired, it will take much time and la-

DAY OF GREAT EXODUS, FROM SAN FRANCISCO

Trains Carry Many Thousands Away from the City.

LOOTING HOMES OF THE RICH

Detectives from Chicago Arrest Some Thieves from the East—E. H. Harriman Is Giving Much Help.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—To-day was marked as the day of the greatest exodus San Francisco has ever known. Train after train on the eastern lines of the Southern Pacific, on the Santa Fé, and on the Southern Pacific toward New Orleans has rolled out, every train filled to its capacity.

Each road, in addition to the regular trains on which tickets are required, is running free trains and victims from the East are urged to leave town at once. It is the great desire of the committees to get as many of these people out of town as possible.

They are only too anxious to go. Late last night another slight earthquake shock was felt, and in a moment the entire city was in an uproar. Those who passed through last Wednesday here were panic stricken. Although no damage was done the nerves of the people are in such condition that they are wild to get away from San Francisco.

Three days ago 30,000 persons were camped on the Presidio reservation; to-night there are less than 10,000 there. Hundreds of tents are without occupants, and will be moved to more crowded quarters to-night and to-morrow. From this one camp alone more than 20,000 have gone. Survivors are leaving other camps in the same proportion. Thousands are leaving the city by rail, while other thousands are finding homes with friends without the fire district.

However, there are yet thousands of people who are without any shelter whatever, and tentage must be prepared for fully 125,000 before all are housed. The authorities have succeeded in reducing baggage rates to a normal charge. All expressmen are now forced to accept 50 cents for a haul to any part of the city.

Eastern Crooks Among Looters.

From the many cases of looting which are being reported, it is believed that Eastern crooks have reached San Francisco and are systematically at work. These reports are coming from the houses of the wealthy and better class of people. There have been many cases since the panic ceased.

To offset this ten Sergeants of police arrived to-day from Chicago to assist the local police. These Chicago officers were selected from their familiarity with the faces of Eastern crooks, and were sent here for the explicit purpose of ridding the city of these criminals. They have already made several arrests.

To-day Market Street is clear from the ferry entirely through the burned district, and Mission Street, paralleling Market, is to-night being cleared of débris. Market Street is unable to accommodate the traffic. Two street car lines are in operation.

E. H. Harriman is doing much to assist with the work. His well-known organizing ability has been invaluable to the committee.

In addition Mr. Harriman has lent the committees the use of all the clerks and employes formerly in the Southern Pacific headquarters in San Francisco, and this body of trained men is doing much to bring order out of chaos. The bank Presidents held another meeting this afternoon in Oakland, but have not yet decided when they will open for business.

Bank Papers Blaze Up.

It is recognized that as soon as the banks reopen there will be a grand rush from depositors to secure money now on deposit. For that reason, all banks are making deliberate preparations to withstand runs.

All banks and other institutions having vaults are still afraid to open them because of the intense heat and the danger that the inrush of air will cause the papers to burst into flame. This occurred in one insurance vault which was opened to-day.

Arrangements made to-day with the Southern Pacific have taken a weight of care from the committee having the cleaning up of the city on its hands.

The Southern Pacific has agreed to build a temporary railroad through the heart of the ruined district and haul the immense amount of débris away by rail instead of permitting it to go out by wagons. This would have required weeks; the railroad will take only days. As soon as the Mayor gives his consent the spur track will be built.

In some parts of the city San Francisco to-day presented an almost normal appearance. In that section which was not burned, business houses are now open, and trade is being carried on at normal prices. Despite the great wreck thousands of people here have cash, and these people are trading as usual.

There is comparatively little sickness—nothing like what could reasonably have been expected. Many survivors have caught colds, but pneumonia has resulted in only a few cases as a result of Sunday night's rain, and the general health is satisfactory.

While there is much to be done, yet there are thousands of people working at it, and a great deal is accomplished every day. With an army of 50,000 at work cleaning débris from the streets, it is only a question of a few days before the streets will be clean.

COAST CARING FOR REFUGEES.

Seattle and Portland Have Many—Thousands Going Through Utah.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 24.—Six hundred refugees from San Francisco reached Portland yesterday over the Southern Pacific Railroad. Four hundred were destitute, and are being cared for by the relief committee, individuals, and trades unions. The latter made no discrimination between union and non-union men. Three hundred more refugees will arrive to-morrow morning.

SEATTLE, April 24.—Nearly one hundred refugees reached Seattle last night from San Francisco. The steamer Burnside sails to-day with additional supplies, making the third relief ship to sail from Seattle.

OGDEN, Utah, April 24.—A. [illegible], general passenger agent of the Harriman lines at this point, estimates that 10,000 or 15,000 San Francisco refugees will pass through Ogden before the end of the exodus. A special train to-day had 340 to be fed by the Relief Committee, and other trains from the Coast are crowded with the helpless people.

DENVER, April 24.—Six hundred refugees from California arrived in Denver this afternoon and evening. Most of them were penniless and hungry. They were supplied with food in abundance by the local Relief Committee, and free transportation eastward was given those who had no money or railroad tickets.

LOS ANGELES QUARANTINE.

Trains Held Up There to Prevent the Spread of Disease.

LOS ANGELES, April 24.—The health authorities of Los Angeles are making every precaution to prevent the introduction of disease from San Francisco by the thousands of refugees now flocking to the city.

All trains from the north on the Southern Pacific are being held at a quarantine station established at Tropic and placed in charge of Dr. Barlow. Trains over the Santa Fé are being detained at San Bernardino for inspection.

SAN MATEO TOWNS HIT.

Buildings in Other Places Wrecked—Summer Homes Badly Damaged.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—There was much damage in towns in San Mateo County, but only a single death resulted. Redwood City, the county seat, appears to have sustained the most damage to its buildings, but the people of the town are sending supplies and assistance of other sorts to San Francisco. San Carlos and Belmont suffered but slightly.

At San Mateo the damage was considable. The Southern Pacific station there was nearly wrecked. About 2,500 persons are being cared for at San Mateo, and many patients are being removed to that point from the San Francisco hospitals. The mansion of the late Alvinsea Hayward has been turned into a hospital, and one part of the building is being used by the Southern Pacific as its hospital.

South San Francisco, lying along the line of San Mateo County, sustained considerable damage. The large packing establishment of the Western Meat Company has resumed work, and the killing, dressing, and packing of meat is under full sway. Live stock is being shipped to that point over the Southern Pacific, and a plentiful supply of fresh meat is therefore assured.

The railroad tracks through South San Francisco and near Holy Cross Cemetery were badly damaged by the earthquake, sinking in many places as much as six feet. Considerable damage was done to gravestones and monuments in cemeteries.

St. Patrick's Seminary and the mansions of the Floods, Nicholses, and other wealthy San Francisco people, who had country homes in San Mateo, were seriously damaged. The students at the seminary have been sent to their homes.

President Wilkins of the Deaf, Dumb and Blind Asylum at Berkeley reports that no pupil or employe of the institution received the slightest injury.

The University of California has suspended for the academic year. The buildings are being used as homes for the refugees, and many of the students are doing Red Cross work.

The Sacred Heart Convent at Menlo Park is badly wrecked, but the inmates are uninjured. Very little damage was done in Monterey. There was slight damage at the Hotel Del Monte.

The home of W. A. Clarke at Burlingame was nearly demolished by the earthquake. No one was injured. Many other residences there suffered.

BIG GIFT BY CHINA'S RULER.

Dowager Empress Sends $70,000—Sympathy from Other Lands.

PEKING, April 24.—The Empress Dowager has sent to the American Legation a check for $50,000 for the relief of the sufferers from the disaster at San Francisco, and is sending $20,000 to the Chinese in that city.

DURBAN, Natal, April 24.—The municipalities of this colony are adopting resolutions of sympathy with the people of San Francisco, and relief funds have been inaugurated at several centres.

VIENNA, April 24.—On the reassembling of the Reichsrath to-day the President, Count Vetter von der Lille, referred feelingly to the San Francisco and Vesuvius calamities. The House instructed him to convey to the Governments of the United States and Italy the deep sympathy of the Reichsrath.

ROME, April 24.—Many telegrams and other manifestations of sympathy with the United States in the Californian disaster continue to reach the American Ambassador, Mr. White, from Italian cities, associations, and institutions. An especially touching dispatch was received from the Marquis Del Carretto, the Mayor of Naples, who referred to San Francisco as the sister city of Naples, as shown by the fact that San Francisco had been so hospitable to Italians. The Pope inquires daily regarding the situation at San Francisco.

HELPING FIRE COMPANIES.

Bankers Don't Want Them to Lose on Their Holdings.

The apprehension of heavy liquidation of securities by the fire insurance companies hit by the San Francisco fire was pretty completely dissipated yesterday by the attitude of bankers generally toward the demand for heavy time loans on collateral. These must necessarily be made if the stocks and bonds are not to be thrown on the market. There was little doubt that the New York bankers would make it easy for the companies to realize on the securities in their treasuries, and word reached Wall Street yesterday afternoon that the bankers of Hatfod, the home of seveal of the companies which will have to meet heavy losses, had held a meeting and decided to come to the help of the fie companies with all the money they had or could raise to prevent the unloading of securities on the market.

According to the report of the State Superintendent of Insurance, dated two days before the disaster, the fire insurance companies are heavy holders of securities that are among the most active in the stock market. The largest block of any one stock is 20,000 shares of Pennsylvania held by the Home. Of this stock 40,166 shares in all are divided among nine of the principal companies. Its par value is $2,008,300, and yesterday at the close of the market it was selling at 139. The Home has stocks and bonds with a book value of $15,394,452.

Among the stocks that the nine muncipal companies hold in greatest amount are Northwestern, 6,498; Lackawanna, 6,000; Reading first preferred, 5,500, and New York Central, 4,220.

A. B. Hepburn, President of the Chase National Bank and former Controller of the Currency, said yesterday that he thought the heavy losses in San Francisco would have a tendency to carry stiff money rates over into the crop-moving period in the Fall. He thought the West would feel the greatest drain on capital, and would suffer from the diversion to the rebuilding of the city of funds which otherwise would have found their way into ordinary industrial channels. An important factor of alleviation, Mr. Hepburn pointed out, was the $40,000,000 or so which the foreign companies would have to send over here to pay their losses, and which would represent a permanent [illegible] of capital.

VICTIMS' FIRST LETTERS NOW REACHING THE WEST

Mere Scraps of Paper Without Stamps—More Refugees.

FREE TRAINS OVERFLOWING

Man Who Had Been Left with the Dead—Bride Whose Husband Was Killed at Her Side.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., April 24.—The first mails from San Francisco since the catastrophe arrived here to-day. A motley assortment of missives was disclosed when the mail pouches were opened.

Volumes of letters, unstamped, many of them even without envelopes, were in the sacks. They had been sent by sufferers in San Francisco in the desperate chance that they would reach relatives and friends in other places. Destitute of money and everything else, unable to find stamps even if provided with money, the writers had simply scribbled a few words on pieces of paper and put the paper in mail boxes. The Government is delivering all such matter without collecting dues thereon.

Some letters were written on cards, others on wrapping paper. Even pieces of paper sacks were used. The general trend is: "We are still alive, but have lost everything."

One letter was written on the edge of a newspaper three inches square. Another was on a piece of a letter carrier's slip.

It was a ragged, unkempt, badly dressed and slightly dressed, hungry crowd of refugees who arrived to-day from San Francisco on the first of the free trains which the Union Pacific Railroad is running for the benefit of these survivors who lost their all in the great fire and earthquake. Another train with 600 such passenger trains will reach Omaha to-night, and on Wednesday morning still another train will come in for the East. As fast as equipment can be furnished these free trains are being run.

Among the passengers in to-day's entire trainload there was probably not $5. All had saved their lives, but very few had saved more than the clothes in which they were sleeping. Weary and worn with the excitement through which they had passed, they had climbed aboard the train at Oakland in a condition bordering on collapse.

Added to the previous hardships there had then been three days of travel in ordinary day coaches, every seat filled. They were fed at Omaha by the committee having the work in charge and sent on toward the East.

Every passenger could tell a tale of tragedy and woe. All had gone through an ordeal which had robbed them of everything. Henry Howe of St. Paul, 70 years old, was in the Hotel Langdon.

"I woke when the ceiling fell on me and pinned me to the bed," he said. "After several hours I managed to get loose, wrapped a blanket around me, and crawled away. Sometimes crawling, sometimes walking, I managed to reach a camp having nothing but my blanket. My knees are raw from the long crawl. Somebody gave me the old clothes I am wearing. I had nothing but a key and the blanket."

L. A. Dickerson of Indianapolis was in a hospital sick with fever.

Quake Found Him in a Hospital.

"I was twenty-four hours making my way to the ferry because of my feeble condition. I had only a nightshirt. The steward on the train lent me a pair of trousers and the porter gave me this coat. I have no hat and nothing else. I am trying to get to friends in Indianapolis."

Willis Hammond of Anderson, Ind., said: "I was in the Golden West Hotel. I managed to reach the street, and was knocked senseless by something. When I recovered I was lying in the Mechanics' Pavilion along with a long row of dead men. I had been hauled there in a wagon full of dead. When it was found I was practically unhurt I was given a pair of trousers from a dead man. It's all I have."

Injured Burned in Pavilion.

Archibald McInerny, en route to New York, was a passenger, although he had paid his fare. He said:

"I was in Mechanics' Pavilion when it was full of dead and wounded. The fire reached the building when it was filled with these. Only a few could be got out. Most of them were burned. Out in the streets the dead were everywhere. I saw a charred skull in Market Street. I had two crackers to eat that day."

Mrs. William Stone, Emmettsburg, Iowa, was one of the passengers.

"I and my husband were at a rooming house south of Market Street. The house collapsed. He was killed at my side. His body was taken away by the authorities, I don't know where. I secured an old dress skirt and at Ogden a woman took off her shoes and gave them to me. We were on our wedding trip. My people will take care of me when I get home again."

Mrs. Wilson Evans of Reading, Penn., said: "I am all that is left of a family of five. My husband and three children were killed and their bodies buried. We were living in the city. I saved an old wrapper, nothing more. I only went to get away from that horrible place."

Mrs. James Taylor, an old woman with a blood-stained cloth tied around her head, said:

"I was a widow and lived with my son and his family. The house fell. The relief workers pulled me out after several hours. They said the others were dead. I have friends in Eastern Ohio, and am going there. My husband was a soldier, and I get a little pension which will keep me for my remaining days."

Similar stories are told by them all. There is little excitement among the refugees. Occasionally some woman breaks into hysterical weeping for a moment, but in the main all they seem to want is to be let alone with their thoughts—and to be fed and assured of future protection. And they all want to get as far away from San Francisco as possible. It is one long story of misery, suffering, and death.

The passengers tell their stories in monotonous tones, as if talking by rote. A large booth has been erected in the street near the Union Station, and in this the refugees will be fed when they reach here. The Union Pacific will notify the committee several hours before a train arrives and good meals will be awaiting them on their arrival.

The trains are expected to continue for two or three weeks at the rate of two or three a day at least.

Germany to Help Germans.

BERLIN, April 24.—The Foreign Office here has instructed the German Ambassador at Washington, Baron Speck von Sternburg, to investigate as soon as possible the situation of the Germans in San Francisco, to ascertain the number of German victims and to make arrangements for taking care of the survivors.

SYMPATHY FROM WEIMAR.

Shakespeare Society Pauses to Send Regret and Encouragement.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES. [Copyright, 1906.]

BERLIN, April 24.—The Chairman of the Shakespeare Society at Weimar, commenting to-day on Dr. George B. Churchill's address on "Shakespeare in America," delivered before the society, took occasion to refer in terms of heartfelt sympathy to the disaster in San Francisco.

He expressed the hope that the wrecked city would rise again more beautiful and that the American people would be able to alleviate present suffering.

MORE GOLD FROM LONDON.

Advance in Rates in Money Market as Result of Frisco Disaster.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

LONDON, April 24.—The Bank of England sold another £351,000 in eagles to-day for shipment to New York.

Its losses in gold on American account during the last fifteen days now amount to something over £2,000,000, with the movement unchecked and no present prospects of its being checked until an amount approximately equal to the losses suffered by British fire companies in San Francisco have been transferred across the Atlantic.

The effect of the movement on the money market has been to cause an advance in rates, and on the stock market to produce depression.

Stocks were very quiet and weak to-day. Consols were especially affected by the gold withdrawals, also by sales of gilt-edged securities by insurance companies. Insurance shares remained flat and almost unsalable.

NO SAN FRANCISCO MAIL.

May Come Here To-day—How to Send Money Orders There.

No official information as to the condition of the Post Office in San Francisco has been received here by Postmaster Willcox, and the New York office is in the dark as to what to do in the matter of sending registered letters, letters containing money orders, and other valuable matter. The mail which left Oakland three hours before the disaster was received here on time, but nothing has been heard of the mail which should have been started from San Francisco on the day of the disaster, and which was due yesterday morning

One inquirer at the New York Post Office yesterday wanted to know if he could count on $100 being received by his brother in San Francisco. His brother wired him to rush "100 to eat with." He said that his brother had $75,000 in the banks of San Francisco, but that the banks were buried under débris and the money there did not buy any groceries. He and others were advised to send their mail to Oakland and follow it with other letters to San Francisco advising the parties addressed to watch the Oakland mail if by the time the second letter crossed the continent the San Francisco office had been re-established.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The Post Office Department has received no advices in explanation of the failure of San Francisco mail to arrive in New York to-day. It is assumed here to be due to the crippled condition of the force in San Francisco. The mail collected during the night before the earthquake was probably handled all right, and made its connections at Oakland, so that it would arrive practically in due course. But the day after the shock, when the city was on fire, the Post Office force was disorganized and scattered, and it is considered only natural that the connection should have been missed.

The accumulated mail may arrive in New York to-morrow, and after that for a few days there is likely to be little or no San Francisco mail coming east. In the three days that the fire was raging San Francisco did not write many letters.

Aid from the Philippines.

MANILA, April 24.—A monster mass meeting to raise funds for the victims of the San Francisco earthquake and fire, which is indorsed by Gov. Gen. Ide, and will be composed of all elements, will be held to-morrow. The Jockey Club, composed of Spaniards and Filipinos, has subscribed $15,000 and has also decided to devote the proceeds of three days' racing to the relief fund. The Baseball League has taken similar action, a monster concert for all classes will be given shortly in behalf of the fund, and the newspapers are receiving subscriptions for the sufferers.

$500,000 ADDED TO OUR AID FUND

Local Gifts to San Francisco Are Now $2,500,000.

NATION'S FUND, $14,000,000

More Than $2,000,000 Pledged Yesterday — Chicago Gives $700,000, Boston and Philadelphia $500,000 Each.

Nearly half a million dollars was added to the San Francisco relief fund in this city yesterday. The biggest gain was in the combined fund of the Red Cross and the Mayor's committee. It was reported last night that this fund had passed the $600,000 mark.

The grand total of amounts contributed for the earthquake sufferers in this city, as nearly as can be estimated, is now well past the $2,500,000 mark. As there are several big theatrical benefits to come, and as many churches have postponed their collections for the stricken San Franciscans until next Sunday, it is predicted that in another week the fund will be far in excess of $3,000,000.

The grand totals of the amounts received by the various relief agencies at work in this city are shown in this table:

Chamber of Commerce	$724,564
Mayor's Red Cross funds, (estimated)	618,000
Direct individual contributions	465,000
Stock Exchange	150,000
Merchants' Association	145,654
Churches, (estimated)	100,000
Theatrical benefits, (estimated)	40,000
Cotton Exchange	20,000
Jewelers' Board of Trade	18,250
New York Nat. Exchange Bank	17,107
Salvation Army	13,434
Produce Exchange	10,130
Tobacco Board of Trade	10,000
Silk Association of America	8,975
Consolidated Exchange	6,500
Clothing Manufacturers' Trade	4,820
Curb brokers	1,000
	$2,653,434

The largest gift recorded yesterday came from The Jockey Club, which sent a check for $25,000 to Mayor McClellan. The Liverpool, London and Globe Insurance Company contributed $10,000 to the Chamber of Commerce Relief Committee.

Nearly $30,000 was received by Secretary Wilson of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday. The millinery trade sent a check for $6,875. The Merchants' Association added $24,441 to its fund yesterday.

Aldermen Would Help.

The Board of Aldermen had its first meeting yesterday since the Court of Appeals confirmed the legislation taking the powers of making appropriations away from that body. The board passed resolutions of sympathy with the people of San Francisco, and also officially regretted their inability to appropriate a sum from the City Treasury. The board unofficially is arranging a baseball game to be played by a picked nine from their number against a team composed of prominent actors. Both the National League and the American League baseball clubs have offered their grounds free, and the Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band has promised to furnish the music.

The Executive Committee of the Mayor's Relief Committee held a meeting at the City Hall yesterday evening and added several new names to the membership. Among the new appointees are John Lee and Joseph M. Singleton, who are members of the Chinatown Relief Committee.

Morris K. Jesup, President of the Chamber of Commerce, sent a telegram to E. H. Harriman asking him for information regarding the exact condition in San Francisco and advise as to best relief methods.

The largest contribution received at the office of the Red Cross came in a telegram from Mayor Gans of Albany, who wired $10,000 as the first installment to the relief fund by the people of Albany. Mayor Cahill of Watertown telegraphed that he would send on $10,000.

The California Fruit Growers' Association donated a carload of oranges. They were sold yesterday and netted $2,000, which was sent to the Relief Committee.

The big department stores have responded cheerfully to the call sent out by the Mayor's committee, and yesterday in nearly all these places the shoppers had an opportunity to make donations.

The International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association yesterday sent out an appeal to its members to contribute at least $20,000.

Several Californians now living in New York met yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria and appointed a committee to aid and assist Californians who are now in this city and who are unable to return to their native State on account of the disaster.

They will also aid victims in the stricken city to reach those who can care for them in other parts of the country. The committee is composed of Henry I. Kowalsky, Charles A. Pearson, Franklin Brooks, and T. L. Brawley.

About $2,000,000 more was added yesterday to the San Francisco relief fund from all parts of the country. Last night's dispatches indicated that the National fund for the earthquake sufferers had reached and possibly passed the $14,000,000 mark.

Chicago reports $700,000 collected. Boston has got $500,000. Philadelphia has collected a similar amount. Pittsburg is approaching $500,000. Kansas reports $500,000 as its contribution.

Subscriptions Received.

TO-DAY'S THEATRE BENEFITS.

$50 for Two Seats—Weber "Department Store" Has Raised $2,000.

To-day's theatrical benefits for the San Francisco relief fund are the performance of "Arms and the Man" at the Lyric Theatre this afternoon, and the performances of "Mrs. Temple's Telegram" at the Madison Square Theatre this afternoon and evening.

From the sales at the Joe Weber "department store" in the Gilsey House and the benefit at the Music Hall, yesterday there was realized about $1,000. This makes a net result of more than $2,000 for the two days.

Blanche Bates received a check for $50 yesterday from Virginia Harned for two seats for the benefit performance of "The Girl of the Golden West," to be given next Tuesday at the Belasco Theatre.

The receipts from the matinee yesterday in Hurtig & Seamon's Music Hall, $187, were given to the San Francisco Relief fund. In addition $491 will be turned in, money collected from the audiences by "passing the hat" since last Friday night. Of the last sum $309 was raised on Sunday night.

THE ARTISTS' EXHIBITION.

Twenty Pictures Obtained Already and 200 Are Expected.

Albert L. Groll of the committee of artists, which is raising a fund for the benefit of brother artists in San Francisco said last night at the Salmagundi Club that he had met with very favorable responses in soliciting pictures for the forthcoming exhibition and sale.

Not one artist has refused to contribute, and more than twenty pictures from representative artists are already promised. The artists expect to collect at least 200 for the exhibition, which will be held in the American Art Galleries. Mr. Kirby will give free use of the galleries for the picture show, so that the entire proceeds may be sent to San Francisco.

NO SCHOOL COLLECTION.

Plan of the Board of Education Met with Opposition.

No money for the San Francisco relief fund will be collected by the Board of Education from the teachers and pupils of the public schools. This decision has been made because some opposition has been expressed.

President Winthrop will issue an order to the Principals of the schools cancelling the instructions he gave them Monday relative to the collection of such subscriptions. President Winthrop said yesterday that he wanted to avoid a controversy. He added:

"There was no opposition to the plan in the Board of Education. I spoke to several members of the board before I took the step I did, and all thought it a good idea. The collection of such subscriptions would not establish a precedent. The schools raised a fund for the Galveston sufferers in 1900."

WHY NO FOREIGN AID.

The President Opposes It because We Can Care for Our Own.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Inquiries continue to pour into the State Department, many of them from abroad, as to the disposition of this Government in the matter of contributions toward the relief of the San Francisco fire and earthquake sufferers.

Some of these appear to indicate a misunderstanding of the reasons which influenced the President in declining money contributions from abroad. So to-day several dispatches were sent from the department in reply to these messages, explaining that the President disapproved of the proposals to collect funds from abroad because he felt that there were already ample means in hand or in sight flowing from domestic sources to meet any expected demands. It was felt that to accept money under these conditions from organizations in England and Germany and elsewhere would scarcely be justifiable.

The explanatory messages to-day contain an expression of the keen appreciation with which the President received these spontaneous tenders of assistance, but showed why, in his judgment, they should be declined.

Herman Ridder, editor of The Staats-Zeitung, sent this telegram to President Roosevelt yesterday:

"Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, Washington: Your statement is reported in the German press as declining assistance from foreigners for the San Francisco sufferers. Will you allow us to correct the false impression, so that our friends in Germany may be permitted to follow the dictates of their hearts, and contribute?"

This reply came from Assistant Secretary of State Robert Bacon:

"You kind message to the President is received. The spontaneous contributions of the American people have been ample to meet all requirements, and the proffers of aid from other parts of the world have been so in excess of all needs that to avoid any discrimination it was determined best to accept no outside help. The President wishes the German people to understand how deeply we appreciate their hearty sympathy, and that we are quite as grateful to them for fraternal and humanitarian motives as we would be did it seem possible to accept their generous aid."

ALL UNITE TO RELIEVE SAN FRANCISCO'S WANTS

Cities Vying with One Another to Get Supplies Through First.

DONATIONS TO RED CROSS

Organizations Throughout the Country Turning Their Funds Over to the National Relief Bureau.

There will be no lack of either food, clothing, or money in San Francisco in a few days. Organizations, cities, States, and philanthropic institutions all over the country are anxious to have their contributions the first to reach the goal.

There was no falling off in yesterday's donations, and everything turned in to the various relief committees is being made ready for shipment with all speed.

The total amount so far collected in Chicago is $691,222. Saturday will be "San Francisco Day," and all who have not contributed will have an opportunity to do so then. Policemen will make a house-to-house canvass asking contributions. Fourteen carloads of provisions and clothing were sent to the coast yesterday.

Boston's main contribution yesterday was 5,000 blankets. Large quantities of necessities are pouring into the city from smaller towns to be forwarded. Mrs. Mary Morton Kekew of the Women's Educational and Industrial Association sent notices to all the women's clubs in Massachusetts yesterday, asking for contributions of money and clothing.

Gov. Hoch of Kansas announced last night that the State will contribute more than $500,000 to the relief fund. Forty-four cars of provisions have already been sent to the coast, and as many more will be sent before the week is out.

Gov. Charles T. Bell of Vermont issued an appeal to the citizens of his State yesterday on behalf of the inhabitants of San Francisco.

The activity of the Red Cross Society is indicated in communications from Albany, Rochester, and Jamestown, in New York State, all of which have sent large sums of money.

The New York County division will hold a great meeting in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf-Astoria to-morrow at 5 o'clock to extend its work. In Boston $25,000 has been voted for the Red Cross Fund by the General Relief Committee.

In Watertown, N. Y., $10,000 has been collected. Steps will be taken in New York to organize a Red Cross quota at once. Hartford, Washington, and Detroit have subscribed $26,000 and $23,000 respectively to this fund.

Adolphus Busch of St. Louis, who gave $100,000 for the relief of San Francisco, declares that his city must toe the mark in better shape in the matter of financial assistance to the sufferers.

"St. Louis must contribute at least $1,000,000," he said last night, "or stand disgraced among the cities of the United States. If this amount is not raised, other cities will point the finger of scorn at us and say: 'Stingy! Stingy!'"

St. Louis has already raised $500,000.

The officers, enlisted men, and prisoners on board the United States Prison Ship Southery, stationed at the Portsmouth Navy Yard, at Portsmouth, N. H., have contributed $571 to the relief fund.

May Irwin, whose theatrical company played at Ithaca on Monday night, gave $1,000 of the proceeds to the Red Cross Society for relief work.

The Supreme Lodge of the Ladies of the Maccabees of the World, through its presiding officer, Mrs. Lillian M. Hollister of Detroit, has instructed the head officer of the organization in California to draw on the treasury for $3,000 for relief work.

Thomas Hooker of New Haven, Conn., State Treasurer of the Red Cross Society, has received and forwarded $25,664.62 to Charles H. Keep, the National Treasurer, to be sent to San Francisco.

Seattle has collected a cash fund of $15,000.

The Board of Trade of Bloomfield, N. J., has appointed a committee to raise subscriptions. The committee will act with Mayor George Fisher. The amount on hand is $1,000. In Montclair, N. J., $2,000 has been subscribed to the fund, while $600 has been collected in Nutley.

After the fire which destroyed the City of St. John, N. B., Canada, on June 20, 1877, San Francisco contributed $6,300 to the relief fund. The St. John Daily Telegraph has collected $3,500 and forwarded it to the coast sufferers.

A benefit performance was held in the Lyceum Theatre in Morristown, N. J., on Monday night by the local lodge of the Order of Eagles. Daniel Sully, one of the actors, auctioned off a carnation for the San Francisco fund. It was knocked down to James Riley for $25.

The committee appointed by Mayor Johnson of Paterson, N. J., reported last night that they had $5,150. It will be turned over to the Red Cross Society.

Many relief funds were organized in Newark, N. J. They have formed a merger and announce a total of $42,000 collected. Of this, $40,000 has been sent to the coast through the medium of the Red Cross. Three carloads of food and clothing have also been sent from Newark.

Employes of the Singer Manufacturing Company at Elizabeth, N. J., have contributed $4,695 to the relief fund. As much more has been raised in the city by the employes of the same firm.

Including the value of supplies and food stuffs already on the way to California the citizens of Philadelphia have thus far raised $500,000 for the victims of the earthquake and fire.

The City Council unanimously passed a bill yesterday appropriating $100,000, and the money now awaits the disposition of Gov. Pardee of California. The Citizens' Permanent Relief Committee of Philadelphia has already forwarded $250,000 to San Francisco, and the Red Cross in that city has also sent large sums West.

The relief fund is expected to be greatly increased during the week by the proceeds from many entertainments that have been arranged. A great benefit performance, in which every theatrical company in the city will participate, will take place on Friday afternoon at the Academy of Music.

Four cars containing provisions, cooking utensils, and clothing left Baltimore last night for San Francisco.

CANADA STILL WOULD GIVE.

To Appropriate $100,000 for San Francisco Despite Refusal.

OTTAWA, Ontario, April 24.—Information has reached the Government that the $100,000 voted for the San Francisco relief fund by the Dominion Government will not be accepted at Washington.

It was stated to-night that the appropriation will be put through its final stages and that the Government will await further developments.

NOW GREELY REQUESTS 2,500 MORE SOLDIERS

Gen. Funston Thought There Were Enough in San Francisco.

SOME CAVALRY MAY BE SENT

But No Decision Is Reached at Washington—Heavy Orders of Medical Supplies Shipped.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Two long dispatches were received at the Military Secretary's office to-day from Gen. Greely, who has resumed command of the Pacific Division. He reports that he has had long and careful consideration of the general situation in San Francisco with Gen. Funston and Mayor Schmitz, and that Funston will continue the line of active operations already mapped out by him.

From these dispatches it is evident that San Francisco is much better pleased with the work of the regulars than it is with that of its own volunteers, for Mayor Schmitz has urged Gen. Greely to take charge of the district now controlled by the National Guardsmen, and has signified his intention of asking Gov. Pardee to withdraw all the militia at once.

Gen. Greely expresses the opinion that a large addition to the force of regulars will be absolutely necessary in a very short time. The situation in San Francisco will require more men to cope with it adequately, and men will be needed for some of the outlying smaller cities and towns which were damaged by the earthquake. Gen. Greely says that 5,000 more men could be used to advantage, but he thinks that for the present he can get along with half that number, in addition to those he now has.

No decision was reached at the War Department to-day in regard to complying with this request. It has not been felt here that more men would be needed. At first Gen. Funston thought the forces at hand would be sufficient. But there has been a change in the feeling in San Francisco since Funston's first recommendation. He now wants both more men and more officers, and has asked specifically for several officers to help out Majors Devol and Krauthoff, the Depot Quartermaster and Commissary. A few more officers have been ordered out and Gen. Greely has been authorized to keep there all officers arriving at San Francisco on leave or with the numerous shipments of supplies that have gone forward. Headquarters here is inclined to think that these extra officers will be amply able to take care of all the work that is created by the unusual situation, and will not send more unless the need becomes imperative.

It may be decided, however, to send Gen. Greely a couple of regiments of cavalry. He asked particularly for that arm, owing to the difficulty of providing transportation in San Francisco by infantry.

It is evident from Gen. Greeley's message that he has taken over personally a large share in the work that devolves upon the army in San Francisco. He notifies the War Department that he will charge himself with questions of policy, the general movement of troops, and particularly the important matter of sanitation. This leaves to Gen. Funston the administration duties of the various staff departments and the distribution of relief supplies. Gen. Greely pays a high tribute to the energy, judgment, and tact of Gen. Funston, and says that, due largely to the possession of those qualities by Funston, there has been a minimum of violence, even under very distressing conditions.

As far as work at army headquarters here is concerned, it has got back to the old routine of the days before the earthquake—details of officers, changes of station, leaves of absence, courts-martial, and that sort of thing, with only now and then an echo of the disaster at San Francisco.

Supply Train Grew.

Only one telegram was received by Gen. Humphrey, Chief Quartermaster, to-day, and that told of the arrival of a huge supply train. It started out only ten cars, but got to Oakland more than thirty, and all the way made fast mail train time. Gen. Humphrey is busy now with the problem of replacing the army stores destroyed by the burning of the depots in San Francisco. He has already made the discovery that, no matter how much money Congress appropriates for this replacement, he cannot duplicate the material he sent to the victims of the disaster. The new tentage and the new clothing and blankets will be manufactured out of last year's crop of cotton and wool, and for some peculiar reason last year's cotton will not make as good a quality of duck as was used in the tents shipped to San Francisco, and last year's wool will not make as good blankets. Something was the matter with both the cotton and the wool crops last year, and the Army Inspectors have found it difficult to get from either supplies that come up to the rigid army standard.

It is felt here that the most difficult part of the situation in San Francisco yet to be handled by the army is the question of sanitation. The principal trouble there will arise from the fact that the persons living in the concentration camps are civilians, unaccustomed to the rigorous discipline of the army, and very likely to be resentful of it. Yet it is recognized by all who are experienced in such work that only by the most faithful enforcement of discipline and the strictest compliance of regulations can the health of the concentration camps be properly preserved.

Surgeon General O'Reilly is hopeful that the camps can be well settled before the most dreaded disease, typhoid fever, has a chance to start. If that can be done, he thinks it can be held in check in case it does manifest itself thereafter.

Many Medical Supplies.

He has shipped to San Francisco a tremendous amount of medical supplies. The first lot of five carloads from St. Louis has been followed already by twenty cars more, and as soon as the material can be procured and prepared for shipment there will be thirty more carloads sent out. This will be sufficient to take care of 200,000 persons for three months and Gen. O'Reilly does not think it will be necessary to figure on caring for any more than that number. In fact, he thinks that there will not be that many, although the present reports are that 200,000 are homeless and relying on the shelter of the concentration camps. Gen. O'Reilly thinks that there will be a rapid thinning out from these camps to the surrounding cities and towns of California in a very short time, as soon as the refugees can begin to collect themselves. But he is prepared to take care of as many as stay, no matter how many they may be, and for as long a time as necessary.

Several telegrams were received by Gen. O'Reilly to-day from Col. Torney, the Chief Surgeon of the Pacific Division, who is in charge of the medical relief work at San Francisco. Replying to a question from Gen. O'Reilly, Col. Torney said emphatically that no more physicians were needed now in San Francisco. Nurses may be needed later, especially if there should be an epidemic of typhoid fever, but just now there is no need for more than are in the city.

Col. Torney says that 500 of the 1,300 resident physicians of San Francisco are absolutely destitute, having lost all their belongings, including their diplomas. Most of these, he says, will want to emigrate to other cities, and he asks the Surgeon General to do what he can to have the rigid requirements of other States moderated in the cases of these doctors, so that they may not be required to produce diplomas immediately before going into practice. Col. Torney adds that the corps of local physicians will be amply able to take care of all sickness unless a great epidemic arises.

Gen. O'Reilly has already endeavored to discourage the kindly intentioned physicians from other cities who were volunteering to abandon their practices and go to San Francisco, and on receipt of this message from Col. Torney he again called attention to the fact that it was entirely unnecessary for an outsider to go. There are now more persons in the devastated city than can be taken care of without great effort, and all outsiders who go in will, in Gen. O'Reilly's opinion, merely put themselves in a very uncomfortable situation, without being able to render enough aid to make it worth while.

Vaccine Points Provided.

In addition to other medical supplies going forward, Gen. O'Reilly has arranged for the shipment of 1,000 vaccine points a day until they are stopped by the surgeons in San Francisco. About 20,000 have been sent out already.

Col. Torney reports that the General Hospital, which is on the Military Reservation of the Presidio, and which was considerably damaged by the earthquake, has been restored to its normal condition and is now running smoothly. Water has been provided in plenty, and the lighting and heating systems are working properly. Even the laundry is running again. In the Presidio sanitary district an auxiliary supply department has been established, and tools, disinfectants, serums, and antitoxins are being obtained. A distributing brigade has been organized and is at work. A contagious disease hospital has been established at Harborview Park. The Medical Supply Department is now beginning to receive volunteer supplies, and systematic distribution is going on.

Red Cross Work.

Red Cross headquarters here have been busy receiving contributions all day. Miss Boardman, in charge, was notified of contributions aggregating more than $200,000 in three telegrams this afternoon. The Red Cross is waiting to hear from Mr. Devine, the agent sent to San Francisco last week, before taking any steps involving the expenditure of the vast sums to be handled by it. As soon as Dr. Devine reports what is needed the purchasing officers of the army, through whom the Red Cross will expend its money, will be notified to buy, and the supplies will be obtained at once. Miss Boardman said this afternoon that the Red Cross was considering the advisability of constructing more permanent camps for the homeless of San Francisco than the army tents would afford. Something of that nature may be done if it proves to be desirable.

The War Department has ordered Capt. John S. Sewall of the Corps of Engineers to go to San Francisco at once to study the effect of the earthquake on steel buildings and other forms of construction. This is with a view to using the results of Capt. Sewall's observations in the building which the department may have to do hereafter, especially in regions likely to be visited by earthquakes.

A telegram came to the Treasury Department to-day from the Superintendent of the Mint in San Francisco. He reports that the Signal Corps has established a wire in the Mint Building and that they are once more in direct communication with the outside world. The San Francisco bankers, the telegram says, are acting jointly, and will establish a disbursing office in the Mint with funds furnished by transfer.

The Senate Committee on Finance met to-day, but did not consider the Cullom resolution providing for the suspension of duty on structural steel imported for use in rebuilding San Francisco and other California cities. Senator Aldrich said that if a measure of that character were originated by the House it would be considered immediately by the Senate.

President Roosevelt late to-night signed the joint resolution of Congress appropriating $1,500,000 more for the relief of the San Francisco sufferers.

APPEAL TO LABORING MEN.

Samuel Gompers Asks Them to Give a Day's Pay Each.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to-day, through President Samuel Gompers, issued an appeal to all organized labor throughout the country to contribute one day's pay in aid of the California earthquake and fire sufferers. The letter is as follows:

> To All Organized Labor of America:
>
> You are fully aware of the distracting calamity which has befallen our brothers and sisters of San Francisco and vicinity. It beggars description; it is more heartrending than we can conceive. We are all appalled at the great loss and suffering, and our keenest and tenderest sympathies are aroused.
>
> The expression of our sympathy must take practical form. While the immediate needs to barely sustain life may have been supplied, yet in the days and weeks and months to come untold suffering and privation will be endured unless the means are at hand to obviate and avoid them. Even under the most favorable circumstances, life in stricken San Francisco and vicinity will be most difficult to endure for some time to come.
>
> To assuage and alleviate to the fullest the loss and suffering of our brothers and sisters of the stricken localities, and to help them in their effort to rehabilitate themselves, their children, and other dependents the union members the country over must help generously and promptly.
>
> Having these facts in mind, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor appeals to all members of organized labor of America to devote one day's wages, and that the same be paid to the Secretaries of the local unions or lodges; by them forwarded to the headquarters of their respective international officers, and through the latter transmitted to California local unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor direct, and others which care to should forward the day's pay of their members to Frank Morrison, Secretary, 423-5 G Street Northwest, Washington, D. C.
>
> Act at once. Fraternally yours,
> SAMUEL GOMPERS, President.
>
> By order of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor.

Later in the day President Gompers announced that the local Plate Printers' Union had contributed $500, which he immediately telegraphed to Mayor Schmits at San Francisco.

WOMEN OF CALIFORNIA TO ACCEPT FOREIGN AID

Club Passes a Resolution Criticising the President's Action.

MANY FOREIGNERS IN NEED

California Artists Arrange for an Exhibition and Sale of Pictures for the Relief Fund.

The California Club of Women in executive session yesterday at its clubrooms in the Waldorf-Astoria decided to accept donations from foreigners in opposition to the stand taken by President Roosevelt. The following resolution, drawn up by Mrs. O. Newhouse, put by Mrs. Edwin Stevens, and seconded by Mrs. Russell Bassett, was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the refusal of the donations of the Hamburg-American Line and others in aid of the California sufferers by President Roosevelt has caused much adverse comment; and while recognizing the grounds upon which the refusal was based, namely: that 'Americans are amply able to take care of the situation,' to be absolutely correct; nevertheless we hold that the denial of the right to contribute on the ground of nationality is wrong, harmful, ad without precedent.

"San Francisco is a very cosmopolitan city, and, while we do not understand that the amount was tendered as a German donation, the donors unquestionably had in mind the fact that thousands upon thousands of their nationality will require assistance; furthermore, Americans have never been excluded from giving their aid and sympathy in cases of European disasters; therefore, be it resolved;

"That the California Club in New York is prepared to accept any and all foreign or domestic donations, properly and gratefully acknowledge the same, and see to it that the greatest amount of good flows therefrom by a judicious expenditure of these funds. That the Secretary notify the Hamburg-American Line, and give this resolution wide publicity, so that foreigners may know that there is an avenue through which their generosity may reach the stricken of their nationality."

A copy of this resolution was sent to the Hamburg-American Line immediately.

The California Club and the California Relief Association, with headquarters in the clubrooms, received fifty donations of money yesterday, ranging from $2 to $25. Many valuable prizes were received for the euchre that is to be given on Friday at 2 o'clock, in the big ballroom of the Waldorf, for the benefit of the California sufferers. They range in value from $5 to $50, and include, besides several paintings of California scenes, silver, cut glass, hand-painted china, smart hats from first-class milliners, and a five-pound box of candy in a fancy box. The tickets are $1, and many people buy them and give them back to be sold again.

The Chevalier Gargiulo has offered to give the use of his concert band of fifty pieces with soloists, augmented by twenty-five other artists, for a concert for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers, if a theatre can be found for it. The Chevalier had a wife, two children, and a mother-in-law in San Francisco, and has not heard from them.

The California Artists' Relief Association, formed the latter part of last week to aid the suffering artists of San Francisco, practically completed its arrangements yesterday for an exhibition and sale of pictures, which promises to be one of the most interesting entertainments given for the benefit of the earthquake victims. The galleries of the American Art Association, on Madison Square South, has been offered free for the occasion, and the exhibition will open on Sunday, May 6, and continue for several days, the length of time not yet being decided upon or the days of the sale.

Alreaody 200 pictures have been promised. It is probable that an admission fee will be charged to the exhibition. The committee will arrange for the transportation of the pictures from the artists' studios to the galleries on the day preceding the opening of the exhibition.

On the Executive Board of the Relief Committee are Emil Carlson, Chairman; George De Forest Brush, Miss Clara MacChesney, Ernest C. Peixotto, Mrs. Ernest C. Peixotto, W. Merritt Post, Symore Thomas, Mrs. Symore Thomas, J. Alden Weir, J. Gutzon Borglum, Treasurer; Miss Del Mar, 152 West Fifty-fifth Street, Secretary. California—Arthur F. Mathews, Trustee.

HIGGINS SENDS $100,000.

He Quickly Signs the Bill Giving $250,000 to California.

ALBANY, April 24.—Gov. Higgins has signed the bill appropriating $250,000 for the relief of the people of San Francisco and the State of California. The bill was introduced by Senator Raines and Assemblyman Moreland in response to an urgent special message of the Governor, and was immediately passed by both houses. It places the money at the disposal of Gov. Higgins to be expendd at his discretion through the Red Cross or otherwise.

Gov. Higgins sent this telegram to Secretary of War William H. Taft, as President of the American National Red Cross Society:

"The Legislature has authorized me through the National Red Cross or otherwise to expend $250,000 for the relief of the sufferers from earthquake, fire, or pestilence into the State of California. I will forward to-day $100,000 to Charles Hallam Keep, Treasurer of the American National Red Cross. I wait your further advices."

FINGER CUT OFF BY A THIEF.

Young Woman Robbed and Disfigured in San Francisco Hotel.

COLORADO SPRINGS, April 24.—Passing through this city to-day in a Denver & Rio Grande train bound for Chicago, where her parents reside, was a San Francisco fugitive, who said her name was Miss Logan. She wore a bandage on her left hand.

Miss Logan said that while she lay unconscious on the floor of the lobby of the St. Francis Hotel, in San Francisco, after the earthquake last Wednesday morning, the third finger of her left hand was cut off and she was robbed of rings she had worn on it. The young woman is about 20 years old, and is almost prostrated.

Amazing News of Women's Afternoon and Evening Costumes

More than 100 Creations as Beautiful as Paris has ever sent or New York has ever seen at LESS THAN ONE-THIRD—some at LESS THAN ONE-FIFTH—their Intended Price

WE believe this to be the most extraordinary piece of news that has ever come out of our Women's Wear stores—and that is saying a good deal.

The garments concerned are what are generally termed in the trade "costumes"—that is, fine dresses or gowns for women's afternoon and evening wear;—the elaborate sorts which take the place of honor in the wardrobe—the exquisite, silk-and-lace creations in which women revel, but which a mere man-advertiser can but admire and admit his inability to describe.

The source of inspiration and authority in such garments is in Paris among such famous designers as Paquin, Beer, Worth, Sara Mayer and perhaps a dozen others who constitute the world's rulers in women's dress. The superb costumes we show to-day are New York productions from these Paris guides and models.

Costumes more beautiful—costumes uniting more perfectly the desired attributes of originality and elegance with serviceability—have never been seen in this city,

THE RAILROADS' LOSSES ARE DWINDLING FAST

Atchison's Figures Drop from $5,000,000 to $50,000.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC LUCKY

Damage to Its Line Only $500,000—San Francisco Street Roads May Not Lose $2,000,000.

Reports which reached this city yesterday from officers of the United Railroads of San Francisco, of the Atchison, and of the Southern Pacific showed that the early statements telegraphed from San Francisco about the losses sustained by these companies were greatly exaggerated. A recent estimate of the insurance loss resulting from the fires in San Francisco, placing the amount at less than $100,000,000 instead of more than $200,000,000, is another indication that the losses by the fire were much smaller than was supposed in the first excitement after the catastrophe.

Dispatches received in Wall Street last Thursday placed the damage to the Atchison and the Southern Pacific, the two transcontinental lines which enter San Francisco, at many millions. It was said that the Atchison was likely to lose $5,000,000 by the earthquake and the fire. The officers of the road in this city received definite reports yesterday from the officers of the road in San Francisco that the loss to the company amounted to only $50,000. The Southern Pacific was also reported to have lost many millions. Its loss was much greater than the Atchison's, but it is now said that it will not exceed $500,000, if, indeed, it reaches that amount. The Harriman line suffered more than the Atchison, for the reason that the Atchison's freight terminals are across the bay, at Point Richmond, while the Southern Pacific has terminals in San Francisco proper.

The estimate of the losses sustained by the street railway lines in San Francisco formed by the stock market was indicated by the extent to which the company's securities fell on the news of the disaster. The United Railways Investment Company, which owns these lines, has common stock to the amount of $25,000,000 and preferred stock amounting to $15,000,000. Between Wednesday morning and Saturday afternoon the common stock dropped 43 points, which is equivalent to a depreciation of $10,750,000 in the market value of the stock. The preferred dropped 37 points, or $5,500,000. The decline in the two stocks during the four days marked $16,250,000 off the value of the company's stock.

The actual loss sustained by the company, according to the advices received in this city yesterday, direct from George H. Davis, the company's chief engineer in San Francisco, amounts to not more than $2,000,000, and much of this is insured. The officers of the company in this city, who had been without any full information in regard to their property until yesterday, were agreeably surprised by the report.

Under date of Sunday last Mr. Davis reported that one of the company's two electric power houses was in operation and that the other had been only slightly damaged by the fire and that two of the four power houses for the cable lines were intact. The company has already taken steps, under special privilege secured from Mayor Schmitz, to convert the Market Street cable line into a temporary electric line. This change is already well under way.

Work on the line was begun on Saturday and it has progressed so rapidly that the chief engineer was able to report that by the middle of this week the company would be prepared to run electric cars through Market Street from the ferry as far as Fifth Street. The operation of the lines in Fillmore and Sixteenth Streets, which are about five miles long, was resumed last Saturday.

The electric cars of the company were practically all saved from the fire, only 7 out of 455 being destroyed. The loss of cable cars was greater, totaling 75 out of 423 cars. Mayor Schmits has granted the company the right to operate all the old cable lines by electric power for the time. The officers of the company said yesterday that the work of converting all the cable lines that are not now in serviceable condition will be pushed. All the cars that were burned as well as the power houses that were totally destroyed or badly injured are insured, so that the final loss to the company, the officers say, will be much less than $2,000,000.

In preparation for the rebuilding of the city the local engineers of the United Railroads of San Francisco, Ford, Bacon & Davis of 24 Broad Street, are already engaged in drawing up plans for the extension of certain of the company's lines. The company expects that in the rebuilding of the city the filled-in ground which was the part of the city most affected by the earthquake, will not be used as the site of new office buildings.

It is thought that the business section will be reconstructed partly to the south of the section which it formerly occupied, and that this will so encroach upon the residential section that many dwellings will be constructed at a greater distance from the old centre of the city. The street railway company is planning to meet these conditions.

WARRANTS PAYABLE HERE.

Treasury Department Helping the San Francisco Post Office.

Orders were issued yesterday by the Treasury Department permitting the payment by the New York Sub-Treasury of Post Office Department warrants drawn on the San Francisco Sub-Treasury. Ordinarily such warrants are payable only at the office on which they are drawn. The payment of San Francisco warrants by the New York Sub-Treasury is intended to expedite the payment of these drafts until the office in San Francisco is able to handle business more conveniently. The warrants are issued for expenses.

The Sub-Treasury transferred yesterday to San Francisco $2,673,000 and $75,000 to Denver. In addition the banks sent to the Pacific Coast by express about $2,000,000, bringing the day's shipments of currency from New York to the Pacific Coast up to about $4,700,000. Including the amounts forwarded on Monday and last week, the New York banks have now sent to the Pacific Coast directly or through some of the interior cities approximately $20,000,000.

HIGHER INSURANCE RATES WILL BE MADE GENERAL

In All Congested Districts There Will Be an Increase.

ONE COMPANY IN TROUBLE

The American Fire Insurance Company Suspends Operations Till It Knows More About Its Loss.

Not only in this city, but in the congested districts of all the other cities of this country, will fire insurance rates be increased because of the San Francisco disaster. E. G. Snow, President of the Home Insurance Company of New York, which took the lead in demanding higher rates, said yesterday:

"You can take it as a fact that the rates will be advanced in all the congested parts of the country. I don't know how much the other companies will advance their rates. We have already advanced ours 25 per cent."

Mr. Snow added that some definite step would probably be considered at a meeting of fire underwriters this week.

One of the chief subjects of comment in the fire insurance district yesterday was the haste with which Supt. Hendricks of the New York State Insurance Department had called for sworn statements as to California losses. The full statements are required by June 1, and preliminary estimates of California business by May 5. Such statements were required after the Baltimore fire, but not so quickly, and the loss there was so much smaller than at San Francisco that the companies needed less time in which to weather the storm and make subsequent statements showing good condition. After the Chicago fire of 1871 and the Boston fire of 1873, the companies had the balance of the year in which to go ahead with new business to repair the inroads into underwriting capital made by the loss payments.

The companies have obtained pretty accurate data as to the burned areas now, but no exact information as to the probable ratio of insurance loss to insurable property loss, except that it is believed that the percentage of insurance loss to the total damage is considerably less than at Baltimore, partly by reason of the earthquake element and partly because a smaller percentage of insurance was carried in San Francisco.

Everywhere the belief is expressed that most of the companies will weather the storm without radical measures. In most of the comparatively few cases of weakness the stockholders are preparing to rebuild their companies as soon as the payment of the California losses has shown how much is needed. In the case of a few companies, after the payment of losses, the problem will practically be whether the present stockholders wish to put new money into fire insurance or some other business.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 24.—The officers of the American Fire Insurance Company have put up signals of distress in consequence of the heavy losses sustained in San Francisco. They know that their outstanding risks exceed $7,000,000. Secretary Henry S. Bean admits that he has advised agents outside New England to suspend operations until definite information shall be received defining the fire zone.

The company was incorporated in 1818. Its capital is $300,000, and, according to the last report, it had assets of $796,862 and a surplus of $89,168. Last year it received about $634,000 in premiums, its gross income being $658,000. Its losses for the year were $279,000, and $21,000 was distributed in dividends.

The company operates generally over the entire country. Its President is Francis Peabody of Danvers, and its Secretary is Henry S. Bean, 37 Waverley Street, Roxbury. The stockholders are mostly Bostonians. They successfully resisted a recent attempt of a New York coterie of bankers to wrest the control of the company from its present management for the purpose of reinsuring its business at a profit.

The company has maintained a high reputation, and this action of its officials exemplifies its record for conservatism and uprightness.

PROPHECY OF EARTHQUAKE.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 24.—Charles B. Mandeville, assistant to the Treasurer of Cornell University, declared to-day that the earthquake at San Francisco was predicted by the late Prof. Charles Fred Hart of Cornell over thirty years ago.

Mr. Mandeville, while a student in the university took several courses in geology under Prof. Hart. He remembers that the class was shown the peculiar situation of the city, the contour of the mountains, and the formation of the coast and that Prof. Hart predicted a calamity in California similar to that of Lisbon.

CONRIED'S SINGERS HUG AND KISS HIM

Much Excitement When They Get Back from San Francisco.

THE STARS' LOSSES ARE HEAVY

Sembrich Lost $30,000 and Caruso $20,000—Tell Gayly of Their Tribulations on the Coast.

When Herr Conried entered the Pullman of the Twentieth Century Limited at Albany soon after daybreak yesterday morning and his familiar voice called a greeting to his famous singers, on their way to New York after the horrors of San Francisco, his arms were piled high with roses for the women. He got no chance to deliver them, for tenors, bassos, contraltos, and sopranos fell upon his stout neck and began kissing him and crying affectionate greetings in French, German, and Italian.

Miss Fremstad and Miss Jacoby came back to New York on Monday. Of the other stars only Mme. Eames, who remained in California on the ranch of a friend, and Mme. Homer, who left the train at Chicago, did not return yesterday.

In the party reaching New York yesterday morning were Mme. Sembrich, Signor Caruso, Bessie Abott, Edyth Walker, Alten, and Bella, and MM. Rossi, Journet, Campanari, Dippel, Hertz, Goerlitz, and others.

Mme. Sembrich estimates her loss in costumes and personal wardrobe at $30,000. She reached New York with the walking suit of blue which she got after two trips to her hotel room the morning of the earthquake. She had to wash some of her own garments while on the way to Chicago.

Caruso's loss is estimated at $20,000, and in order to fill his Covent Garden engagement next month he will have to make a flying trip to Paris to get his costumes duplicated before he goes to Florence to see his family.

Dippel's loss is estimated at $7,000. Journet, who is to sing with Caruso at Covent Garden, will go with Caruso to Paris to get new costumes. The latter estimates his loss at $4,000. Scotti thinks that about $5,000 will cover his loss.

What Conried May Pay.

Caruso, Scotti, Campanari, and Van Rooy were singing with the company for extra emolument, and, according to one of the stars, will not have any charge against Herr Conried for salary. The others, however, were engaged for the end of the tour, the out-of-town engagements including their season contract. These will expect pay for their services just as if they had sung in the various cities included in the grand opera tour.

Van Rooy carried some insurance on his wardrobe and costumes, and is thus protected. The other stars had nothing insured, and will look to Herr Conried to provide them with new costumes or pay their losses, as they were in his care at the time of the disaster.

Besides the heavy loss in costumes, in personal wardrobes, scenery, &c., there will be the loss of the instruments of the orchestra. Conductor Hertz said yesterday that the two instruments of the harpist alone came to $3,000, while from the other members of the orchestra will come reports of valuable violins, 'cellos, and other instruments destroyed. A matinée was to have been given on Wednesday, the day of the earthquake, and the instruments were left in the Opera House, which was destroyed.

Mme. Sembrich gave the clearest and the most dramatic account of the catastrophe.

"The building seemed to tremble as with the reverberation of a heavy truck passing," said Mme. Sembrich yesterday at the Savoy. "Then the trembling increased until it was so violent that it threw me from the bed. I struck the floor at the highest point of violence of the earthquake, and was thrown to the window and then back to the bed. The walls of my room on the sixth floor of the St. Francis cracked, the plastering fell, and the chandeliers came down. The hotel rocked like a ship in a heavy gale. I knew what had happened. I rushed into the corridor in my night dress and met Dippel. The elevator had dropped to the bottom of the shaft. He helped me to the square. A long line of men and women scantily clad filed out with us. There was a stillness as of death. None cried out. It was appalling. We stumbled over broken glass and débris to the open air, to behold one building down with the people in it, and another without its front, all of the rooms showing their contents.

Sembrich Got Her Jewels.

"I determined to get some clothes, and returned to the hotel only to meet the second shock, which sent me hurrying to the street. But I could not stay out without some sort of wear other than my night clothes, and I went back a second time. It was a climb of six flights of stairs, and on the third floor the third shock came. I kept on and got this suit I have on and my jewels.

"We remained in the square until we were ordered to move on account of the fire. Mme. Eames and her friend, Dr. Tevis, came in an automobile and wanted to take me away, but I preferred to stay with the other members of the company who were gathering in the square. Later I walked to the home of Dr. Tevis, and there the fire entrapped us. We bundled blankets, some crackers, and a little whisky into a wagon and went to the beach near the Presidio. Thousands of people had gathered there, and there were many animals. Among Chinese, Japanese, negroes, and all races we slept that night on the beach, nothing between us and the sky save our blankets. We felt a slight shock every half hour. Dr. Tevis had been in the habit of saying with each shock before the disaster when there were many slight tremors of the earth, 'Shake a little faster.' I told him that night that it had shaken fast enough at last."

Mme. Sembrich crinkled her eyes and smiled at the jest.

"After the night on the beach," she resumed, "the sun rose blood red, making the stretch of water a sea of fire to the west, while to the east there was a sea of fire from the burning city. Overhead the moon and stars lingered in the heavens. Then came a slow, dull, tramping sound. It was the procession of convicts being marched in files of twos from the prison, which was threatened by the flames. Mounted soldiers led them, and files of soldiers marched by the poor creatures. It was like some terrible death procession.

"Then came the soldiers to us and ordered us to move. We were between fire and water. We filed toward the Oakland Ferry in a long procession of beasts and humans. It was a two-hour march, turned here and there by the soldiers on guard. We tramped on through the ruins in the fierce heat of the sun and the flanking flames. As the fire crept up on parts of the city thought to have been safe the sick and wounded stretched in the street on mattresses were dragged, foot by foot away. It was a strange and terrible march. Hundreds of men and women were without anything but night clothes and under clothes. I saw a man in his underwear marching grimly ahead with a phonograph under his arm, a woman with a cage of birds, others with parrots, dogs, children, bundles, and other things they held dear.

Sembrich Praises Americans.

"I cannot admire the American people too much—the way they showed their nerve and the way they helped each other. One man who was trying to help a laborer move his things was told by the laborer that he had no money to pay him. 'We are all poor to-day,' the helper replied. 'Yesterday I was rich, and to-day you and I are poor together.'"

Dr. Tevis took Mme. Sembrich to the home of his sister in Oakland. They found it closed. One of the family had been killed, and the home had been ruined. He started to take them to his ranch outside of the city, when a messenger informed him that the building on it was down. His town house had been burned to the ground. His kindness and hospitality were only ended when he had nothing to offer but the blankets he had furnished the singer the night before. She went to the special train of the company and remained in one of the cars until the start was made for New York. There was food there. For twenty-four hours before that they had lived on a few crackers each and a drop of whisky every now and then. Mme. Sembrich, in the car, washed her handkerchief and stockings and straightened up as best she could to start home.

"But my plight in Union Square was not so bad," she said with a smile. "I saw Mme. Homer in her husband's trousers. It was the nearest garment to her when the shake came, and she got into them. Later she got a dress."

Rossi described his meeting with Caruso in the Palace Hotel with a thousand gestures between pages of a letter he was scribbling home in the York Hotel yesterday.

He found the door of his room jammed tight and every light out when he was thrown from his bed. He broke through the door with a chair, grabbed his suit case, and rushed to the floor below, where he found Caruso in the arms of his valet, evidently overcome by fear. He assisted his compatriot to the street, and then, half naked and in a frenzy of excitement, he sang, as if he was before a Metropolitan audience, the "Vecchia Zimmara" from "La Bohême," the song which he sings when he tells of the coat he has pawned for the dying woman in the students' attic. For a day and a night he had only two or three crackers and a glass of milk. "And I with my appetite!" he exclaimed. "I who eat any quantity of spaghetti at dinner!" In his march through the flames and ruins to Golden Gate Park he held tightly to his suit case, intending to put on his clothes at a safe point. When he opened it he found only a shirt and a pair of shoes. He slept on Thursday night in a street car.

Caruso Had Some Clothes On.

Caruso denied with some bitterness that he had displayed his embonpoint in pajamas. He said he had on a waistcoat and a pair of trousers when he reached the square. He also said he had used a picture of the President bearing Mr. Roosevelt's signature as a passport to get around.

Plançon, escaping from the St. Francis Hotel, and finding several women of the company gathered in the square, tried in vain to get a hotel employe to make coffee for them. He then went to the hotel kitchen himself and made two pots of the beverage and brought it to the square.

Conductor Hertz, who has had hardly an hour's sleep in the last week, said at the Astor yesterday that he and some friends found a German saloon where they got sausage and cheese and beer last Wednesday.

"But," he added with tears in his voice, "martial law was declared, and the saloon was closed."

Hertz is going to Germany on the Deutschland on Saturday. Journet and Caruso leave on the Savoie to-morrow. Mme. Sembrich said she feared that she would not be able to take the Deutschland on Saturday. She will sail next week.

"Until I can get clothes," she said, "I have no future or any plans."

When Mme. Homer got to Chicago she went to the Wesley Hospital. It was reported yesterday that she was doing very well.

Word came from New Orleans last night that the opera chorus, which took the Southern route, had reached that city and had started on to New York.

Mrs. Caesar Young, wife of the bookmaker for whose murder Nan Patterson was twice tried but acquitted each time, was among the passengers on the Twentieth Century Limited which reached New York yesterday morning. Mrs. Young was met at the Grand Central by her brother-in-law, William Luce, to whose home in New Rochelle she went immediately.

CORONER SAYS 1,000 DIED IN EARTHQUAKE AND FIRE

Knows of 300 Buried and Lodging Houses Not Searched.

277 DEAD, GREELY REPORTS

He Does Not Expect the List to be Further Increased—Gives 100 Names.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Coroner William Walsh estimated to-day that the total number of dead from the earthquake and fire will not be less than 1,000. His reports are complete, and his estimate is made up from all the data he has been able to collect. Coroner Walsh said:

"Bodies that the Deputy Coroners have found and buried number 300, as follows:

"At Polk and Bay Streets, 32; at Portsmouth Square, 23; at Washington Square, 12; at the Six-Mile House, 200; at Laurel Hill, 23; scattered in different parts of the city, 10.

"No thorough search has been made of the district south of Market or the Chinese quarter. Many lives must have been lost in these sections. South of Market Street are the cheap lodging houses, and many of these collapsed from the earthquake. There is little chance that half of the inmates of the collapsed buildings had opportunity to escape. This also is true of Chinatown.

"Shortly after the earthquake soldiers and police, so I have been told, buried bodies along the water front. I have received no official report of these. The total number of dead will undoubtedly reach if it does not exceed 1,000."

The Coroner's office was reorganized to-day and a morgue was opened in a vacant store in Hayes Valley. Up to the present time bodies have been buried by the soldiers and the naval militia in open squares near where found. For this reason it is feared that the exact number of dead will never be accurately known.

All burials hereafter will be made in the cemeteries, and the usual reports will be made to the Coroner and an opportunity given for identification. The bodies which were buried in Portsmouth and Washington Squares and near the corner of Bay and Polk Streets will be exhumed and an attempt made to identify them before reburial in the cemeteries.

"Although this report very materially reduces the death list for San Francisco it is not believed that it will be further increased save by isolated victims among the ruins.

BULLETIN LIFTED A LOAD.

Told Samuel Edwards His Brother in 'Frisco Still Had a House.

For six or seven days since the news of the San Francisco disaster reached here thousands of Californians in the East have been borne down with anxiety for their relations and the fear that comes with lack of news. A TIMES bulletin took a load from the mind of one man last night.

It read prosaically enough: "The Stock Exchange Board, which was burned out, has opened temporarily at 1407 Gough Street." It was, however, the most comforting thing that Samuel Edwards of The Lambs Club had read.

His brother, Col. William Edwards, is the President of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, and of him he had had no news since the earthquake. Telegram after telegram had received no response, and after a week no amount of congestion on the wires seemed able to explain the long silence.

"That message," said Mr. Edwards last night, "is all I want to know. I'll sleep to-night for the first time since I heard of the disaster. You see, 1,407 Gough Street is my brother's house. As far as I can make out the fire stopped just one block away. If they are going to open the board in his house he must be there, and that is all I want to know. He's got a baby about a year and a half old, and if he and his wife and the children had had to sleep out in the wet, I don't know what would have happened to them.

"I've bought all the editions of all the papers. I knew the news by heart, but I wanted to see if I could glean anything. But now I know it's all right. There are many more just as anxious as I. Why D. O. Mills up to 8 o'clock this afternoon had received no news whatever, and they say there are 8,000 messages in San Francisco waiting to be sent.

"But you must excuse me now. I've got to telegraph to a brother in Plainfield and to cable another in Rome. They've been telegraphing me again and again, asking if I had any news or could not do something."

HEIR'S LOSS IN DISASTER.

Property Left to Plainfield Man Wiped Out in San Francisco.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 24.—In the San Francisco disaster property worth $500,000 belonging jointly to Adam Fritz of this city and Charles Buhr of Los Angeles was destroyed. Mr. Fritz received news of his loss in a letter to-day, and will go to San Francisco to-morrow.

The property consisted principally of large buildings in the heart of the business district. It was left to Fritz and Buhr recently by Adam Billinger, a one-time resident of Mount Bethel.

Billinger went West when a young man and made a fortune in San Francisco real estate deals. He also bought property in Los Angeles and other places.

Billinger died recently, and the estate is to be divided equally between Fritz, who was named after him, and his nephew, Charles Buhr. It is estimated the value of the property is $750,000, and of this more than $500,000 worth was in San Francisco.

SALVATIONISTS HARD AT WORK.

No Casualties Reported in the Army's Ranks in San Francisco.

The Salvation Army in this city received a telegram from Col. French in Oakland, Cal., yesterday, saying:

"No casualties among Salvationists reported to date, but great destitution; officers and soldiers homeless, losing even all personal effects. Nevertheless all our forces working day and night on relief.

"Have opened relieving stations in citadel here, also our own camp at Beulah Park, Oakland. Five hundred are already being sheltered here; increasing accommodations every day."

THE EARTHQUAKE PLAY READY FOR REHEARSAL

Theodore Kremer Hasn't Been Wasting His Time.

MAY SHUDDER IN COMFORT

Rainstorm and Pneumonia Put In Yesterday — Fire Leaves Only the Villain's Waistcoat Buttons.

The playwright is already busy with the San Francisco disaster. Melodrama is bursting to get hold of the latest details. In a few weeks everybody can shudder in a comfortable theatre chair while quakes, fire, and famine get in their work on the other side of the footlights.

The Hero will stay the walls of the tottering tenement house with his strong right arm until "the only girl in the world" is safely out; then, in the deserted streets of San Francisco, he will share with her his last orange. The villain will meanwhile sprinkle the hero's coat with kerosene and buy up all the food in sight. There will be foretastes of it all on the billboards.

Theodore Kremer, playwright, author of "The Fatal Wedding," "Deserted at the Altar," and other thrillers too numerous to mention, said last night that he had spent most of the afternoon planning scenes and ordering posters for his earthquake play. In fact, the piece was already so far along that it needed only a few more heavy strokes of the pen to be ready for rehearsal.

"You see," explained Mr. Kremer, "I happened, by a lucky chance, to be just finishing up a four-act piece the main scenes of which were to be laid in San Francisco's Chinatown.

"I got my idea for the piece partly from the Taft excursion in the East. Of course I didn't put any of the party into the play. But I had my hero and heroine meet in a group of travelers in Hongkong. I took them into a forbidden temple. Then in the second act I brought everybody back to San Francisco and stowed 'em away in the tunnels and underground dives of Chinatown."

Mr. Kremer went on to show that since the earthquake all he has had to do has been to fix up his third act to make a big earthquake drama. This latest edition third act will be a thing of three scenes: I. The Earthquake; II. The Flight from the Doomed City; III. The Holocaust.

The last act will take place in a tent in Golden Gate Park. Mr. Kremer hinted that since reading the morning papers he had put in a heavy rainstorm and a few cases of pneumonia. But the curtain will fall on a tableau of the hero and heroine hand in hand against a lovely Golden Gate sunset, just as somebody brings in the villain's waistcoat buttons found in the hottest part of the smoldering ruins.

Mr. Kremer says he is going to call the play "The Last Days of San Francisco." P. H. Sullivan will produce it at the American Theatre early in August—possibly before "Bertha the Sewing-Machine Girl" and "For Her Daily Bread," which are two of the latest plays of the same author.

WILL TAKE REFUGEES.

California Towns Willing to Shelter Thousands of Them.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Gen. Funston has received this dispatch from Gov. Pardee:

"The following is a list of towns and their offers to take refugees: Calistoga, 200; Colton, 100, or 200 if necessary; Covina, 100; Napa, 500; Pasadena, 'any amount until we wire to stop'; Riverside, 500; San Bernardino, 150; San Diego, 3,000; Santa Ana, 1,000, or until further notice; Santa Barbara, 1,000; St. Helena, 200; Santa Monica, 200, women and children preferred; Ocean Park, 200, women and children preferred; Stockton, 5,000; Tulare, 300; Highland, 50; Ventura, 400; Pomona, 300; Ontario, 100; Harford, 500; Lodi, 100 families; Pelamus, 1,000 at once."

HARVARD PLANS TO HELP.

Committees Appointed by Every Class to Raise Money for Sufferers.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 24.—A plan was adopted to-night by the Harvard student body to raise money to be forwarded to the San Francisco sufferers. A committee of five members was appointed from each class to begin an immediate canvass of the classes and raise all the money possible.

Among those whose people suffered by the disaster are two Harvard students, D. A. MacLeod and E. Hohfeld, both of San Francisco and both members of the Harvard law school. Their homes are in the Van Ness Avenue district, which was entirely destroyed by fire. Their fathers lost heavily, their business houses being burned out. MacLeod has as yet heard nothing from his parents and fears that they may be lost.

MORE TELEGRAPH WIRES.

Both Companies Overwhelmed with the Flood of Messages.

Officials of both the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies reported yesterday that wire conditions were improving.

"Our wires are now in good shape to and from San Francisco," said Assistant General Manager Barclay of the Western Union yesterday. "We are handling ten times the amount of business we usually do, and have enough men and facilities on hand at San Francisco to keep a complete day and night force constantly at work. I think that at least 15,000 personal messages telling of the whereabouts and conditions of various people were sent from that city to-day.

"Within a few days we will have established ten branch offices throughout the city. The great trouble is in the delivery of messages sent from the East. It has been impossible to locate hundreds of persons for whom these messages are intended, but in the hope of locating them we have arranged for bulletin boards containing alphabetical lists both at the ferry house in San Francisco and at Oakland, where many of the refugees are located.

"Another great difficulty is being experienced by persons in business in the scarcity of ready cash. There is plenty of money, but change is short. We were obliged to-day to remit our San Francisco office $50,000 through the Sub-Treasury here, to be paid at the Mint there. Our San Francisco office will get small currency, so that our business may go on without embarrassment."

Vice President Bradley of the Postal said: "We are having trouble in locating persons to whom messages are being sent at San Francisco. Otherwise the situation is comparatively satisfactory. We are doing an increase of 1,000 per cent. in business, and are handling all that is possible. Messages sent from San Francisco to New York are subject to delay from eight to ten hours."

Schrader, the Healer, Got Out.

EL PASO, Texas, April 24.—Schrader, the self-styled "divine healer," reached here this afternoon from San Francisco. He said he feared his entire family was lost and that not half the horrors of the disaster have been reported.

FORMED OPEN-AIR CLUBS.

Campers in San Francisco Parks Didn't Suffer Much.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, April 24.—Miss Marguerite Robinson of New York reached here to-day from San Francisco. Her brother-in-law, W. O. Evans, was with her. They stayed for three days in Jefferson, Alamo, and Golden Gate Parks. Mr. Evans said:

"We did not suffer much. We got acquainted with five other persons in Golden Gate Park, and all clubbed together in one camp. Others did the same way. We dug up an old tin trunk, found a pipe, and made a stove out of the trunk and cooked some good meals upon it.

"Food was plentiful, and we did not suffer for a moment, and we did not see any one else that was suffering. The reports say that every one was frenzied, but I didn't see it. People were unusually calm. Even the women were not hysterical and everybody was the soul of kindness to their suffering neighbors."

MUTUAL RECORDS GONE.

Destruction of the San Francisco Office Troubles the Company.

Officers of the Mutual Life Insurance Company are considerably worried over the situation created by the destruction of its San Francisco building and the entire disorganization of the business that has centred in that office. Thus far no word of any kind has been received either from W. H. Hathaway, the San Francisco General Agent of the company, or from any one under him. The General Agent in Los Angeles has telegraphed simply that the company's building in San Francisco, caried at something like $850,000, was completely destroyed.

The San Francisco office of the Mutual Life is the headquarters for a force that covers Northern California, Nevada, and the Hawaiian Islands. It had $50,000,000 of business, and 12,000 policy holders were represented on its books. Every record pertaining to this business, except the incomplete records of the home office, is gone. From these incomplete records the company will have to compile its list for this State by June 15, under the new law.

Boston to Send Architect Force.

BOSTON, April 24.—The Executive Committee of the Massachusetts Association for the Relief of California to-day decided to send eighteen architectural draughtsmen, an engineer, and an architect to California to-morrow. Each man is to have a guarantee of $150 for services, $100 for incidental expenses, and free transportation.

TO BUILD OWN SUBWAY.

Yonkers Residents Plan Line to Van Cortlandt Park.

Because of the failure of the Interborough Street Railway Company to extend the Subway to Yonkers, a number of New York and Yonkers capitalists, headed by ex-Mayor Leslie Sutherland of Yonkers, took steps yesterday to organize a new railway company with a capital of $1,000,000 for the purpose of building an extension of the Subway from its terminus at Van Cortlandt Park to Getty Square, Yonkers, a distance of two miles. The route of the road will be in accordance with the plans of the Rapid Transit Commission and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

Yonkers residents are greatly in need of rapid transit, and they say it seems that the only way they can get it is by the formation of a new company to do the work.

HURT IN FALLING ELEVATOR.

Seven Persons Slight Injured in an Accident in a Brooklyn Store.

Seven persons were injured yesterday by the falling of a freight elevator from the second story to the basement of a store in Fulton Street, Brooklyn. The accident was due to the breaking of a cable. None of the passengers was seriously hurt. Their names are as follows:

O. E. Elbrecht, a traveling salesman, of 107 South Elliott Place, Brooklyn; John Wilson, the elevator man, of 187 Bond Street, Brooklyn; Philip Wolf, a traveling salesman, of 1,247 Hancock Street, Brooklyn; George B. Angel of 214 West Twelfth Street, Manhattan; Louis Taub, a traveling salesman, of 138 Avenue D, Manhattan; Matthew Hayes of 206 West 142d Street, Manhattan, and George Mitchell, a porter, of 3 Maiden Lane, Manhattan.

LOCAL OPTION BILL TO-DAY.

Assembly Committee to Report It as a Special Order.

ALBANY, April 24.—The Assembly Rules Committee at the conclusion of its daily meeting late to-night announced that it would report the Wainwright Local Option bill as a special order for to-morrow. The bill will be the third on the Assembly calendar.

The bill adds "the residence district" feature to the system as to the sale of liquor, both for cities and towns and villages.

ARCHIBALD SMITH DEAD.

Broker Succumbs in Stamford to Operation for Appendicitis.

Annual Pass for Jersey Legislators.

CAMDEN, N. J., April 24.—Members of the New Jersey Legislature in this section of the State to-day received annual passes over the Pennsylvania Railroad, Central Railroad of New Jersey, and West-Jersey and Seashore Railroad. They have been using passes good only during the session of the Legislature, which the railroads are required by law to furnish. The receipt of the annuals was a surprise.

Will Contains 196 Words.

The will of Judge Frederick Frambach of Jersey City was admitted to probate yesterday. It was drawn by himself, and was one of the briefest wills ever filed in Hudson County. It contained only 196 words. In it Judge Frambach left all his property to his wife and appointed her executrix, enjoining her to pay all his debts.

MR. TAFT DENOUNCES MEN WITH MUCK RAKE

Their Wares Not as Salable as They Were, He Says.

LAUDS THE FEDERAL COURTS

Tells Yale Students the Legislature Has Power to Prevent Transmission of Great Fortunes to Heirs.

NEW HAVEN, April 24.—William H. Taft, Secretary of War, delivered to-night the second of the series of addresses on "Responsibilities of Citizenship" before the students of Yale. He discussed the subject from the point of view of the bench.

Judge Taft said that where an intelligent jury is drawn the combination of court and jury makes an admirable trial. He lauded the administration of justice in the Federal Court, drawing comparisons to the advantage of the Federal Courts when considered with the State Courts in the South and West with reference to criminal trials.

He remarked that it is absolutely essential that the administration of justice should seem to the public, as well as be, impartial and just. Judges, for that reason, must not accept courtesies like railroad passes, or favors from persons or corporations that are frequent litigants in their courts because of the possibility that should a defeated litigant hear of it he might believe that the court was unduly influenced.

Mr. Taft paid some attention to the "men with the muck rake," saying that they have sold their articles for political purposes and to stir up feelings of unrest.

"The denunciations of these muck-rakers," he said, "have reached such a point that a reaction has set in, and they find that their wares are not as salable as they were. They do not realize that everything they say is discounted by the public as born not of a desire to present a just picture, but of a desire to be sensational at the expense of fact and at the expense of justice.

"While it is true that there is corruption in many municipal governments, there are encouraging movements to stamp out those evils. It is not true that there is great corruption in the National Government. Those who are familiar with the National Capital for the last twenty-fiv eyears will admit that there has been a very decided improvement in the disinterestedness of legislators, and the freedom from venality and corruption in Congress and executive departments. But considering that there have been abuses and violations of the law by great corporations, what is the remedy! Is it not in taking measures to secure the maintenance and supremacy of the law?

Any suggestion that there is any other remedy possible for preventing the violation of law and these abuses than in the training and character of the individual on the one hand and in the strengthening of the arm of the law by judicial procedure on the other, is vicious."

He referred to the suggestion that great fortunes in the hands of individuals have reached a point where an inheritance tax or other measures should be instituted as a discouragement. He said:

"Neither in common law nor under the Constitution is the right of descent of property or of devising it an inalienable right. It depends wholly upon the Legislature, and if the Legislature sees fit to give a tendency to the division of fortunes and prevent their greater accumulation in the second and third generations there are ample means under our present system, and without revolutionary methods, to bring this about."

BLAMES THE MINE OWNERS.

Labor Riots Their Fault, Says Robert Hunter at People's Institute.

The People's Institute held a meeting in Cooper Union last night, devoted to the consideration of labor conditions in Colorado. Robert Hunter and John Martin were the principal speakers.

Mr. Hunter's address was practically an accusation of mine owners. He held them responsible for nearly all the crimes committed in connection with labor disturbances at their properties. The alleged murderers of ex-Gov. Steunenberg of Idaho, he declared, were the victims of a plot.

"If they live," he said, "they will be forgotten. If unjustly convicted, their names will live forever. Three or four million persons will march in their funeral procession. They will be known as martyrs, and songs will be written in their memory."

Mr. Martin said that lawlessness had been rampant in Colorado ever since its foundation. He said that strikes arranged by the Federation of Labor were conducted in a more orderly manner than those of the mine workers. He declared that he did not believe Moyer, Haywood, and Pettibone, accused of the murder of Steunenberg, would be convicted.

Clement Driscoll made a speech, in which he said the accused men had no chance of a fair trial. He had just returned from the West, and he got his opinion partly from "an interview the Governor had with me for three hours in my hotel."

DENIES TWOMBLY'S MOTION.

Court Sets Next October for the Trial of Van Slooten Suit.

Counsel for H. McK. Twombly and James B. Haggin moved yesterday before Justice Maddox, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to discontinue on the ground of failure to prosecute an action of Mrs. William Van Slooten against them to recover $1,000,000 alleged to be due to the estate of her husband, of which she is the administratrix.

Mr. Van Slooten, who was a mining engineer, was a Democratic candidate for the State Senate in Brooklyn in 1893. As he had never been heard of in politics before, and made no public appearance during the campaign, he became known as the "mysterious Van Slooten," a popular query during the campaign being, "Who is Van Slooten?" He was defeated by Daniel Bradley.

Several years ago Mr. Van Slooten sued Mr. Twombly and Mr. Haggin for $1,000,000, which he held was due to him for services rendered in the development of certain mines in Peru, owned by the defendants. Before the suit was to come up for trial Van Slooten committed suicide. His widow alleged that worry over the matter had driven her husband to kill himself.

A commission was appointed to take the testimony of witnesses in Peru, but on account of the death of Mr. Van Slooten the prosecution of the suit was delayed.

Justice Maddox denied the motion, setting Sept. 15 as the time for the return of the commission, with a stipulation to try the suit in October.

Mr. OWEN WISTER'S

LADY BALTIMORE

By the Author of "The Virginian"

"Mr. Owen Wister's 'Lady Baltimore' stands out in the weary waste of present day fiction like a palm tree in the desert. . . . Here is taste, here is wit, delicacy, humor . . . tempting one to apply many rather extreme expressions of approval to this book." —Baltimore News.

"As a picture it is charming; as a story it has genuine strength."—Evening Mail, New York.

"A dainty, whimsical, sympathetic comedy." —Inter Ocean, Chicago.

"It is a love story, pure and simple, dainty and full of grace. . . . Very rare, indeed, is it to come upon a novel which gives one so much satisfaction as does 'Lady Baltimore.'"—Brooklyn Eagle.

"Owen Wister has accomplished the unexpected, he has written another novel equal to 'The Virginian.' . . . The worst thing Mr. Wister could possibly have done would have been to write a second story of the West. . . . But he has done the unexpected, he has traveled far from the West, far from cowboys and heroines courted on horseback. Equally unexpected, he has produced a second piece of fiction which is likely to be almost as good a seller as the first and certain to rank higher as a literary product." —The Register and Leader, Des Moines.

"A delightful story. . . . It's a worthy successor to 'The Virginian'—although entirely different." —The Post-Dispatch, St. Louis.

SCARED HOTEL GUESTS.

A $2,500 Fire Next Door Frightened Holland House Diners.

Fire in a brownstone building at 13 West Thirtieth Street caused some unnecessary excitement in the Holland House early last evening and did some $2,500 damage. A number of the guests at the hotel jumped up from dinner and ran out when the fire engines arrived. The hotel management, however, soon quieted the guests and there was no panic.

The fire was on the second floor of the former dwelling, which had been converted into shops and offices. Policeman Fitzgerald opened the door of the building and shouted to find out if anybody was there. A young woman at the head of the stairs on the second floor called back to him and then rolled to the foot of the stairs unconscious. She was Miss Rose L. Hall, an employe in the office of F. H. Pool, an architect, who has an office on the top floor. She had been overcome by smoke. A volunteer physician attended her and then she was sent home.

L. Hagen, a milliner on the street level, estimated the damage to her stock at $200; the Blaisden-Bragdon Webb Company, decorators, on the floor above, thought that $200 would cover their loss, and Charles Brown, tailor, whose shop was an extension of the building, where the fire originated, lost some $2,000 on his stock.

FREE ALCOHOL BILL BURIED.

Aldrich Puts It Away in a Finance Committee Desk Niche.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The Free Alcohol bill which passed the House is in the hands of the Senate Committee on Finance, of which Mr. Aldrich is the Chairman. The bill is doomed to lie in the pigeonholes of the Chairman's desk until, on March 3, 1907, it dies with the Congress—unless public sentiment and the result of next Fall's elections shall sound a warning that even Aldrich must heed. The ground on which consideration in the Senate is denied to this measure is that it will possibly affect the revenues of the country unfavorably.

It is understood that the real opposition to the bill comes from the Standard Oil Company, because denatured alcohol is likely to compete with gasoline as a material for providing power, and possibly with other by-products of petroleum. It is not charged that Mr. Aldrich is opposing the bill because of the attitude of Standard Oil. His position is regarded as one of fiscal conservatism.

RAN AWAY ON A BRIDGE.

Frightened Team Crashed Into Runway Gate on Williamsburg Structure.

A team of horses belonging to the Manhattan branch of the Department of Health was badly injured on the Williamsburg Bridge yesterday by running with terrific force against the runway gate at the Brooklyn terminal.

John Connor of 128 Carroll Street had just taken the team out of the repair shop, and his destination was Flatbush. While he was driving across the Williamsburg Bridge in the south roadway the team took fright at the tooting of steamboat whistles and ran away. At the Brooklyn tower the wagon crashed into another.

The runaway went down the sharp incline at a terrific gait. Policemen signaled to the bridge terminal, where the big gong was rung and the runway gate closed. Connor dropped the lines after a vain attempt to stop the runaways and crawled inside the wagon. He was not much hurt. The gate was partly wrecked.

TWO NATIONS AT BIER OF JOHN PAUL JONES

French and American Sailors Bear the Hero to His Tomb.

PRESIDENT APPEALS FOR NAVY

Says History Teaches That It Must Be Adequate—Man Who Never Surrenders Needs No Defence.

ANNAPOLIS, April 24.—Reverently attended by the official head of the Nation he loved and served so well, by the Ambassadorial representative of the land in which he died, by the Chief Executive of the State beneath whose sod his bones will find their final resting place, by naval representatives of the United States and France, and by thousands of men and women of the country whose first Admiral he was, the remains of John Paul Jones were placed to-day in the crypt beneath the grand marble stairway of Bancroft Hall, there to rest until the completion of the chapel in which they are to be deposited.

Crowds such as the ancient capital of Maryland has not known for many years lined the streets and stood expectantly about the railroad station long before the train bearing President Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt, members of the Cabinet, the French Ambassador, and Mme. Jusserand, and a large number of distinguished naval officers and civil persons was expected.

In constantly changing groups about the station yard were Admiral Sands and the entire Academic Board of the Naval Academy, and Col. Charles A. P. Hatfield, with two troops of the Thirteenth Cavalry, (of which he is commander,) and the regimental band, from which there was a blare of trumpets when, nearly three-quarters of an hour behind schedule time, the train entered the station and President Roosevelt emerged, accompanied by Admiral Sands and followed by the other members of the Presidential party. The President immediately entered an automobile, and, led by the cavalrymen, the party proceeded to the Naval Academy.

As President Roosevelt entered the grounds a National salute of twenty-one guns boomed out from the old United States ship Hartford, once the flagship of Admiral Farragut. Drawn up opposite the residence of the Superintendent to receive the head of the Nation was the Marine Battalion and the Naval Academy band.

An elaborate luncheon given by Admiral Sands, at which there were about 150 guests, preceded the formal exercises of the day.

Early this morning the casket containing the remains of the Admiral had been removed from the temporary vault in which they have rested since being brought from France, and deposited in the armory of the Naval Academy. There it was placed a little to the right of the centre, in front of the speaker's stand. The casket was quite hidden from view by a Union Jack, and upon it rested two crossed palms, a wreath of green, and the sword presented to the great Naval Commander by the King of France.

Out in the bay, miles distant, but most of them clearly visible from the Naval Academy, rode at anchor three great warships flying the tricolor of France, the Admiral Aube, the Condé, and the Marseilles, first-class cruisers all, under the command of Admiral Campion. Besides them were the United States battleships Alabama, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa, the cruisers Cleveland, Minneapolis, Des Moines, and Denver, and the yacht Mayflower.

From these came more than 1,500 sailors and marines, 200 of the former being from the French vessels. They lined the route to the armory taken by President Roosevelt and the other dignitaries.

When the President entered the armory it was to face ten thousand standing, cheering men and women. There would have been many more to greet him, but it had been announced that admission would be by ticket only, and the rule was rigidly enforced. The applause broke out afresh when the Oratorio Society of Baltimore placed on a terraced platform at the end of the armory sang "The Star Spangled Banner." When this was finished, Secretary of the Navy, Charles J. Bonaparte, stepping to the front of the speaker's stand, said:

"Fellow-countrymen, we have met to honor the memory of that man who gave our navy its earliest traditions of heroism and victory. The Commander-in-Chief of the Navy is of right the first to speak of such a man at such a time. You will hear the President."

The President's Speech.

The President spoke as follows:

"On behalf of the American people, I wish to thank our ancient ally, the great French Nation, that proud and gallant nation to whose help we once owed it that John Paul Jones was able to win for the Stars and Stripes the victory that has given him deathless fame, and to whose courtesy we now owe it that the body of the long-dead hero has been sent hither and that to commemorate the reception of the illustrious dead a squadron of French warships has come to our shores.

"The annals of the French Navy are filled with the names of brave and able seamen, each of whom counted death as a mistress when the honor of his flag was at stake; and among the figures of these brave men there loom the larger shapes of those who, like Tourville, Duquesne, and the Bailli de Suffren, won high renown as Fleet Admirals, inferior to none of any navy of their day in martial prowess.

"In addition to welcoming the diplomatic and official representatives of France here present, let me also express my heartiest acknowledgments to our former Ambassador to Paris, Gen. Horace Porter, to whose zealous devotion we particularly owe it that the body of John Paul Jones has been brought to our shores.

"When the body was thus brought over the representatives of many different cities wrote to me, each asking that it should find its last resting place in his city. But I feel that the place of all others in which the memory of the dead hero will most surely be a living force is here in Annapolis, where year by year we turn out the midshipmen who are to officer in the future the navy, among whose founders the dead man stands first.

EXAMPLE FOR FUTURE OFFICERS.

"Moreover, the future naval officers who live within these walls will find in the career of the man whose life we this day celebrate not merely a subject for admiration and respect, but an object lesson to be taken into their innermost hearts. Every officer in our navy should know by heart the deeds of John Paul Jones. Every officer in our navy should feel in each fibre of his being the eager desire to emulate the energy, the professional capacity, the indomitable determination, and the dauntless scorn of death which marked John Paul Jones above all his fellows.

"The history of our navy, like the history of our Nation, only extends over a period of a century and a quarter; yet we already have many memories of pride to thrill us as we read and hear of what has been done by our fighting men of the sea, from Perry and MacDonough to Farragut and Dewey. These memories include brilliant victories, and also, now and then, defeats only less honorable than the victories themselves; but the only defeats to which praise can be given are those where, against heavy odds, men have stood to the death in hopeless battle.

"It is well for every American officer to remember that while a surrender may or may not be defensible, the man who refuses to surrender need never make a defense. The one fact must always be explained; the other needs no explanation. Moreover, he who would win glory and honor for the Nation and himself must not too closely count the odds; if he does, he will never see such a day as that when Cushing sank the Albemarle.

"In his fight with the Serapis, Jones's ship was so badly mauled that his opponent hailed him, saying, 'Has your ship struck?' to which Jones answered, 'I have not yet begun to fight.' The spirit which inspired that answer upbore the man who gave it and the crew who served under him through the fury of the battle, which finally ended in their triumph. It was the same spirit which marked the commanders of the Cumberland and the Congress, when they met an equally glorious though less fortunate fate. The Cumberland sank, her flag flying and her guns firing with the decks awash, while, when summoned to surrender, Morris replied, 'Never; I'll sink alongside,' and made his words good.

SURRENDER OF THE CUMBERLAND.

"Immediately after the Cumberland was sunk the Congress was attacked, and her commander, Lieut. Joe Smith, was killed. After fighting until she was helpless, and being unable to bring her guns to bear, the ship was surrendered; but when Smith's father, old Commodore Joe Smith, who was on duty at Washington, saw by the dispatches from Fort Monroe that the Congress had hoisted the white flag, he said, quietly, 'Then Joe's dead.' Surely no father could wish to feel a prouder certainty of his boy's behavior than the old Commodore showed he possessed when he thus spoke; and no naval officer could hope to win a finer epitaph.

"We have met to-day to do honor to the mighty dead. Remember that our words of admiration are but as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals if we do not by steady preparation and by the cultivation of soul and mind and body fit ourselves so that in time of need we shall be prepared to emulate their deeds.

"Let every midshipman who passes through this institution remember, as he looks upon the tomb of John Paul Jones, that while no courage can atone for the lack of that efficiency which comes only through careful preparation in advance, through careful training of the men and careful fitting out of the engines of war, yet that none of these things can avail unless in the moment of crisis the heart rises level with the crisis.

"The navy whose captains will not surrender are sure in the long run to whip the navy whose captains will surrender, unless the inequality of skill or force is prodigious. The courage which never yields cannot take the place of the possession of good ships and good weapons and the ability skillfully to use these ships and these weapons; but its presence will often atone for many other shortcomings, and if with it are combined the other military qualities the fortunate owner becomes literally invincible."

"I wish that our people as a whole, and especially those among us who occupy high legislative or administrative positions, would study the history of our Nation, not merely for the purpose of National self-gratification, but with the desire to learn the lessons that history teaches. Let the men who talk lightly about its being unnecessary for us now to have an army and navy adequate for the work of this Nation in the world remember that such utterances are not merely foolish, for in their effects they may at any time be fraught with disaster and disgrace to the Nations honor as well as disadvantage to its interest.

LESSONS OF THE WAR OF 1812.

"Let them take to heart some of the lessons which should be learned by the study of the war of 1812. As a people we are too apt to remember that some of our ships did well in that war. We had a few ships—a very few ships—and they did so well as to show the utter folly of not having enough of them. Thanks to our folly as a Nation, thanks to the folly that found expression in the views of those at the seat of Government, not a ship of any importance had been built within a dozen years before the war began, and the navy was so small that when once the war was on, our opponents were able to establish a close blockade throughout the length of our coast, so that not a ship could go from one port to another, and all traffic had to go by land.

"Our parsimony in not preparing an adequate navy (which would have prevented the war) cost in the end literally thousands of dollars for every one dollar we thus foolishly saved. After two years of that war an utterly inconsiderable British force of about 4,000 men were landed here in the bay, defeated with ease a larger body of raw troops put against it, and took Washington. I am sorry to say that those of our countrymen who now speak of these deeds usually confine themselves to denouncing the British for having burned certain buildings in Washington. They had better spare their breath.

"The sin of the invaders in burning the buildings is trivial compared with the sin of our own people in failing to make ready an adequate force to defeat the attempt. This Nation was guilty of such short-sightedness, of such folly, of such lack of preparation that it was forced supinely to submit to the insult and was impotent to avenge it; and it was only the good fortune of having in Andrew Jackson a great natural soldier that honor for our flag is only worth while if New Orleans. Let us remember our own shortcoming, and see to it that the men in public life to-day are not permitted to bring about a state of things by which we should in effect invite a repetition of such a humiliation.

"We can afford as a people to differ on the ordinary party questions, but if we are both far sighted and patriotic we cannot afford to differ on the all-important question of keeping the National defenses as they should be kept; of not alone keeping up, but of going on with the building up of the United States Navy, and of keeping our small army at least at its present size and making it the most efficient for its size that there is on the globe.

"Remember, you here who are listening to me, that to applaud patriotic sentiments and to turn out to do honor to the dead heroes who by land or sea won prevented a repetition of the disaster at we are prepared to show that our energies do not exhaust themselves in words; if we are prepared to show that we intend to take to heart the lessons of the past and make things ready so that if ever—which heaven forbid—the need should arise, our fighting men on sea and shore shall be able to rise to the standard established by their predecessors in our services of the past.

"Those of you who are in public life have a moral right to be here at this celebration to-day only if you are prepared to do your part in building up the navy of the present, for otherwise you have no right to claim lot or part in the glory and honor and renown of the navy's past.

"So much for what we in civil life outside of public office and within it are to do for you, and must do for you in the navy. Let you in the navy remember that you must do your part. You will be worthless in war if you have not prepared yourselves for it in peace. You will be utterly unable to rise to the needs of the crisis if you have not by long years of steady and patient work fitted yourselves to get the last ounce of work out of every man, every gun, and every ship in the fleet; if you have not practiced steadily on the high seas until each ship can do its best, can show at its best alone, or in conjunction with others in fleet formation. Remember that no courage can atone for lack of that preparedness which makes the courage valuable."

"The Marseillaise" was rendered by the Oratorio Society, and the Secretary of the Navy then announced the French Ambassador, saying:

"In those exploits which made Paul Jones famous, French sailors were his comrades in arms. In the long and bloody war which gave us National life, France was our generous ally. This day were incomplete without a word from France. I ask you to hear her Ambassador."

Ambassador Jusserand said:

"The pious action and unconquerable energy of a son of America, one who served her in war, as a General, in peace as an Ambassador, has brought back to these shores the ashes of the famous sailor who first made known to the world that the new nation just bern beyond the seas was ment to be a great nation [illegible] on land and great on sea. In his [illegible] for the sacred relics of John Paul Jones Gen. Porter had no help but his patriotism, but for a good citizen this is help enough.

"The burial which is now awarded to the naval hero is such as he deserved, and it fits the circumstances of his life. This life, as the life of many other defenders of American independence, offers this characteristic trait, that a French element is in some way or other mixed with it. It is difficult to name Washington without remembering Lafayette and to name Franklin without thinking of his rôle in Paris.

"It is the same with Paul Jones, and on this day, when supreme honors are rendered to his memory, when the Chief of the State has praised him in words the value of which is immensely enhanced by the character and personal fame of the orator, it is a fitting circumstance that French sailors who crossed the ocean for this purpose be now seen mounting guard around his body."

The address of the Ambassador was followed by the singing by the Oratorio Society of Handel's "Round About the Starry Throne."

Introducing Gen. Horace Porter, Secretary Bonaparte said:

"For more than a century the mortal remains of our first great sailor lay in an unknown grave, lost to his country and the world. The generosity and patriotism of a distinguished citizen, already noted for eminent public service in war and peace, has freed us from this National reproach. I introduce to you Gen. Horace Porter."

Gen. Porter's Address.

Gen. Porter spoke in part as follows:

"This day America reclaims her illustrious dead. We gather here in the presence of the Chief Magistrate of the Nation and of this vast concourse of representative citizens of the Old World and the New to pay our homage to the leading historic figure in the early annals of the American Navy, to testify that his name is not a dead memory, but a living reality, to quicken our sense of appreciation, and to give assurance that the transfer of his remains to the land upon whose arms he shed so much lustre is not lacking in distinction by reason of the long delay.

"The two distinct natures Paul Jones possessed lend a peculiar interest to his personality. He displayed the fierce temerity of the ancient sea kings combined with the knightly courtesy of mediaeval chivalry.

"He was a many-sided man. On the water he was the wizard of the sea. On the land he showed himself an adept in the realms of diplomacy. While his exploits as a sailor eclipsed by their brilliancy his triumphs as a diplomat, he often showed himself a master both of the science of statecraft and the subtleties of diplomacy.

"For one who lived in an age of loose morals and spent his youthful years amid temptations which then beset a seafaring man he was singularly free from every form of dissipation. He had no fondness for revelry, jolly coffee house dinners, or drinking bouts, which formed the principal amusements in foreign ports.

"Notwithstanding the gravity of his nature he at times displayed a wit that could cut the sting from the keenest criticism and gild disappointment with a pleasantry. He fashioned epigrams in prose and poetry. Mrs. Livingston, in speaking of him in her diary as a conversationalist, said: 'He by turns delighted, amazed, and mystified us.' The Duchess de Chartres wrote: 'Not Bayard or Charles le Téméraire could have laid his helmet at a lady's feet with such knightly dignity.' The Marquis of Vaudreuil, the French Admiral with whom Paul Jonec once made a voyage, said: 'His talents are so wonderful and of such diversity that each day he brings forth some new proof of cleverness.' Franklin spoke of the 'strange magnetism of his presence, the indescribable charm of his manner.'

THINGS THAT SADDENED HIM.

"His heart was not often attuned to mirth; its chords were frequently set to strains of sadness. For years he was engaged in a struggle against insubordination, treachery, jealousy, neglect at home, and abuse abroad. His enemies opened their flood gates of calumny. No misrepresentation of his acts was too gross, no distortion of history too monstrous. These well-concerted attacks of the pen succeeded in large measure in setting him before the Old World in an aspect that was a vicious caricature of his true nature, and even gave so erroneous an impression of him in this country that more than a century of time has been required to correct it.

"He had to learn that in public life all hours wound, the last one kills. He lived to realize that success is like sunshine—it brings out the vipers, and that the laurel is a narcotic that prevents others from sleeping.

"Worn out with the fatigues of arduous service at the untimely age of 45, alone in a foreign land, he surrendered to death, the only foe to whom he ever lowered his colors. By some strange and unaccountable fatality he was covered immediately with the mantle of forgetfulness. In all the annals of history there is not another case in which death has caused so conspicuous a man to drop at once from the height of prominence to the depth of oblivion."

The Oratorio Society's rendering of "Maryland, My Maryland," served as the prelude to Secretary Bonaparte's introduction of Gov. Edwin Warfield of Maryland, who eulogized Paul Jones and Gen. Porter, and dwelt upon the appropriateness of burying the famous Admiral at the Naval Academy.

The audience rose and remained standing while the body bearers, selected from the petty officers of the United States and French warships, lifted the casket and bore it from the armory. Just outside it was placed upon a truck drawn by a long line of sailors, and the procession moved slowly toward Bancroft Hall. Cavalrymen, marines, sailors, and midshipmen lined the route, presenting arms as the body was borne past.

The way was led by Chaplain Henry Clark, United States Navy. He was followed by a file of marines, the midshipmen, officers, and then by the Naval Academy band, playing the Dead March from "Saul." The two brigades of midshipmen followed forming in double line outside the imposing entrance to Bancroft Hall as they reached that point. The casket, which had the next place in the line, was followed by the French and American naval officers, the President and Admiral Sands, Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, and the French Ambassador and Gov. Warfield and Gen. Porter.

When the casket had ben placed beneath the stirway, where it is to rest under constant guard, Chaplain Clark said a brief prayer and the ceremonies were at an end.

President Roosevelt re-entered his automobile, and, escorted by the cavalrymen and battalions of midshipmen, returned to the residence of Admiral Sands. Soon thereafter he and the others of the Washington party boarded the special train, which left for Washington.

HEARD MESSAGE CLICKED WHICH FAVORED MINES

Colliery Manager's Testimony at Coal and Oil Inquiry.

Got Better Treatment, However, When He Told Railroad Official What He Had Overheard.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—At the hearing before the Inter-State Commerce Commission under the Tillman-Gillespie resolution, resumed to-day, Daniel Howard, manager of the O'Gara Coal Mining Company, near Clarksburg, Va., on the Baltimore & Ohio, testified he had not been able to get a full supply of cars until the middle of last month, and that he never got enough for two-thirds of the capacity of the mine. He said they had made continuous appeals for more cars, that they could increase their output and keep the miners employed. Sometimes, he said, they would get a good run of cars, and again they would not get any for two days.

He was asked by Mr. Glasgow how they fared in the matter of cars as compared with other independent mines and not with the Fairmount Company. He had read that the Baltimore & Ohio had bought stock in the Fairmount, and he "did not think a parent would neglect its child." At one time, he said, he had been a telegraph operator, and the knowledge then acquired enabled him to understand a message from the Superintendent of the division clicked to the trainmaster to give certain mines preference. When the preferred mines got their cars, there was none left for his mine. He took the matter up with Mr. Hale, Superintendent of Transportation, since when his mines had received better treatment. He added that Mr. Hale did not deny the information he had received by overhearing a message was correct.

J. I. Lewis of the Federal Coal and Coke Company, near Fairmount, testified that they had not been able to operate to their full capacity because they could not get cars enough. The hearing was adjourned until to-morrow.

T. S. Davant, Freight Traffic Manager for the Norfolk & Western, said that at one time the Chesapeake & Ohio, Baltimore & Ohio, and Pennsylvania gave the Norfolk & Western to understand that if the Norfolk & Western went into Washington they would go into the Norfolk & Western territory. Mr. Davant, replying to Mr. Glasgow, said the Pennsylvania did not control the Norfolk & Western and Chesapeake & Ohio.

He was asked if he had ever attended a conference between the tidewater and all-rail lines representatives on New England rates. He said he had attended a meeting some time before April 1, 1905, when there were present Mr. Newman of the New York Central, Mr. Murray of the Baltimore & Ohio, Mr. Prevost of the Pennsylvania, Mr. Stevens of the Chesapeake & Ohio, and Mr. Johnson of the Norfolk & Western. The relative adjustment of rates of all-rail lines and tidewater lines to New England was discussed. The all-rail lines were under the impression that the tidewater lines were getting too much of the business and wanted their rates raised. Asked if it was proposed that the all-rail lines would lower their rates if the tidewater lines did not raise theirs, the witness said there was an intimation to that effect. Finally it was decided to continue the existing rate.

BAN ON A HEART WINNER.

Post Office Department Calls Friend of the Lovelorn a Fraud.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The lovesick and the scorned of Cupid received a bitter blow to-day at the hands of the Post Office Department through the issuance of an unfeeling order placing the ban of fraud upon the efforts of L. J. Smith of Binghamton, N. Y., who sought for a modest fee to procure, even to compel, happiness eternal for lovelorn maidens and languishing swains throughout the country.

Mr. Smith, under the variable aliases of J. B. House, A. J. C. House, and A. S. House, advertised that in consideration of 10 cents he would tell how to fascinate and control any person whom anybody desired to influence. But the dime sent, there came in reply only a little pamphlet entitled "Love and the Secret of its Success."

A careful perusal of its few pages disclosed to the eager searcher the glittering fact that there was a potion called "Dew of the Orient" which had been discovered by an ancient Hindu, and could be had at $1 a bottle. But the cold-blooded cynics of the Post Office call the variegated House a fraud.

SCULPTORS DINE SIR PURDON.

He's No Foe to Modern Art, Says Museum's Director.

The National Sculpture Society gave a dinner last night to Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, Director of the Metropolitan Museum, and Edward Robinson, the Assistant Director. The dinner was held in the rooms of the society in the American Fine Arts Building, in West Fifty-seventh Street. President Karl Bitter presided and welcomed the guests of the evening.

Sir Purdon in a very brief speech told the society that no one need fear that he was prejudiced against modern art, saying: "I do not admire a thing because it is old and I am no slave to the praise of ancient art as sung by the critics. In fact, when a boy I always thought Michael Angelo's work too brutal, and I don't think I have lost that idea yet."

Edward Robinson recounted the progress made at the museum during the last few months. Thomas Hastings and Frederick Dielman also spoke. Among those present at the dinner were Robert W. De Forest, Daniel C. French, D. O. Mills, Richard H. Hunt, Gustave Kobbé, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mansfield, and Mr. and Mrs. John De Witt Warner.

ALBANY BURGESSES DINE.

The Officers of the "Queen's Own Rifles" Their Guests of Honor.

The annual dinner of the Albany Burgesses Corps, an organization that has been in existence since 1833, was held in the Manhattan Club last night. Many of the members later attended the military tournament in Madison Square Garden.

At the dinner the officers of the "Queen's Own Rifles" from Toronto, which regiment is exhibiting at the Garden, were the guests of honor. Sir Frederick Borden, their commander, made a speech.

Major James Otis Woodward presided, and, besides Col. Osgood, the principal guest, there were present Col. Henry Walker of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston, Gen. Allyn Lewis, the Rev. Paul Birdsall and the Rev. Charles McCaffrey, Chaplains; Capts. H. F. Williamson, C. S. Byrne, J. C. Summers, and H. M. Tibbetts; Lieuts. Gerritt Smith, Dr. A. B. Hecker, and E. H. Fleming of the Corps, and Lieuts. F. C. Endicott and T. T. Duke of the Fifth Infantry, Dr. Warner of the Old Guard, and ex-Police Commissioner Avery D. Andrews.

There were regrets from President Theodore Roosevelt and Mayor McClellan.

BURGLAR STUNS A WOMAN.

One of Two Men Strikes Restaurant Keeper with a Chisel.

Mrs. Georgia Collas, who conducts a restaurant at 567 Ninth Avenue, and lives over the restaurant, went upstairs yesterday afternoon, and found two young men trying to force an entrance into her apartments with a chisel. She ran toward the men, when one of them struck her on the head with the chisel.

Mrs. Collins fell unconscious, and when she recovered consciousness fifteen minutes later the man had disappeared. The chisel, however, lay on the floor beside her.

The police believe the men escaped by climbing to the roof and going down the stairs of another house in the block.

Ossining Not to be Divided.

For some time past there has been a movement under way on the part of a number of residents of the upper part of Ossining village to break away from Ossining and incorporate as the Village of Ossining Heights. There was a special election yesterday on the proposition, and it was defeated. Thirty-two votes were cast in favor of the idea and thirty-five against it.

Jockey Dickson Missing.

James M. Dickson of 420 West 124th Street reported to the police of the West 125th Street Station yesterday that his son, Sidney Dickson, a jockey, 19 years of age, had been missing since Monday night. He asked that a general alarm be sent out for his boy. He had been riding for "Fred" Johnson at Aqueduct, his father said. One rumor was that the boy had gone abroad.

DRUG STORE TIMES BUILDING

"Dealing with us is like buying at wholesale."

When you buy anything at a drug store you pay a good many profits. The manufacturer, salesman, broker, wholesaler and retailer all add a share of what you pay. That is why so many people complain of the cost of drugs. The ordinary druggist cannot help it, he has to make a living and as his sales are usually small, he must add a large margin of profit—which comes out of your pocket. This applies in every line of drug-store goods; perfumery, toilet articles, patent medicines, sick-room supplies, and even prescriptions.

BUY OF US.

We are the largest retail buyers of drugs in America. We deal direct with manufacturers, purchasing in immense quantities for cash. We obtain the best products of the most reputable and responsible makers at the lowest prices. Our customers have two very decided advantages. Drug supplies come to us first hand and are therefore fresh and pure. By dealing direct we cut out all intermediate profits and save our trade all that it is possible to save.

You cannot buy at wholesale, but you can obtain anything you need in the drug line from us at prices so low that it will pay you to make us your druggists.

Expense is a very important consideration when there is sickness in the home. It is better to buy comforts than drugs. When you must have medicine, buy of us, and you will have more to spend on comforts than if you pay higher prices elsewhere.

You Need Not Pay The Highest Price To Get the Highest Quality

"Hegeman quality" is recognized as the highest in the drug line. Nobody can get better goods than we have because they are not produced. If you think you get as good elsewhere, be sure of one thing—you pay more.

Our policy is not one of reckless price-cutting but of careful buying and equitable selling. When we save our money in buying, our customers save money. But we never allow low price alone to tempt us. Quality is the first consideration, we demand the very best products made. When we are offered a lot of drugs or medicines, we ask, Are they fresh? Are they pure? Are they in perfect condition? Is there any better to be had?

There is Safety and Saving in Buying of Us.

Safety because every medicine we sell is fresh, pure and perfect. Saving because we buy low for spot cash and give our customers the benefit.

PARIS PREPARES FOR MAY DAY TROUBLES

Troops Massed in Readiness for Great Demonstration by Workmen.

WILD NEWSPAPER REPORTS

Coming Elections Held Responsible for Efforts to Exaggerate the Gravity of the Situation.

PARIS, April 24.—The gravity of the strike movement throughout the country, which assumed alarming proportions last week during the height of the excitement caused by the San Francisco disaster, has momentarily improved, but the people have been wrought up to a state of apprehension concerning the imminence of a crisis on May 1, when all the ranks of labor will make a gigantic demonstration for an eight-hour day. The authorities are adopting extreme military and police precautions. The garrison of Paris is being rapidly strengthened, and it is expected that 60,000 troops will be available here May 1.

In the mining regions there is another camp in which an army corps is ready for eventualities, and similar precautions are being taken at other centres.

The labor organizations do not conceal the fact that it is their intention to make a supreme effort. These bodies are partly composed of Anarchists and Revolutionists, who counsel violence, but the responsible leaders insist that the movement has a pacific object, similar to the American eight-hour demonstrations. Nevertheless, it is feared that the lawless element may get the upper hand. Some of the newspapers even assert that the movement is the prelude of a revolution, in which the prolétariat intends to overthrow the existing régime.

Some of the reports picture the business and residential parts of Paris as about to be sacked, the streets barricaded, and, in brief, a veritable renewal of the Commune. This has had the effect of greatly alarming the more nervous of the people, some of whom are sending their valuables abroad and are preparing their residences to resist attacks.

The actual state of the labor agitation is as follows:

About 40,000 miners in the North are still striking, and frequent affrays take place, but the presence there of 25,000 troops and wholesale arrests of the ringleaders have measurably restored calm. In the same part of the country the iron and glass workers of Denain are on strike, but most of them resumed work to-day owing to the stern repression of the authorities.

At Brest all branches of labor have voted for a general strike similar to the general strike at Lorient and at many other points.

In Paris the striking postmen have resumed work, but 4,000 book printers, 6,000 employes of the jewelry trades and 4,000 persons employed in the paper trades are still out. These strikes, how- lence.

The military and police are extremely vigilant. Squads of soldiers are stationed outside and inside the factories whose workmen are on strike, and mounted patrols traverse the streets.

The foregoing is merely a precursor of the national labor movement to be inaugurated May 1, when it is expected that the proletariat will quit for a day, and perhaps for a longer period of time. The masons and many other branches of labor decided to quit from May 1 to May 15 without violence. Employes of grocers, dairymen, butchers, and bakers and all purveyors of food supplies, as well as hotel servants, are meeting to-night, and there is promise of a decision for a similar cessation of work.

A complete suspension of operations throughout the building, food, industrial, commercial, and other branches is probable. Fears are entertained that the gas and electric and other utilities on which the public is dependent will be affected; but the companies assert that they have no fear of interruption. Special precautions are being taken to prevent the interruption of metropolitan and other means of communication.

In the meantime the Government appears to have awakened to the necessity of stern precautions. This is indicated by the assembling of troops. An official communication to-night announces that the Ministers will meet on Saturday to complete final precautions.

M. Clémenceau, who as Minister of the Interior bears the brunt of responsibility, first sought to avoid intervention by the military, but now is energetically gathering the civil and military forces. When three of the chief agitators visited M. Clémenceau to-day he brusquely declared that they were outside the breastworks, as they had favored violence, and he therefore refused to treat with them.

It is probable that the approach of the elections is responsible for some of the wild exaggerations which are afloat; but nevertheless the situation at best is menacing and full of possibilities of danger.

BOMB AT LOUBET'S HOME.

Deadly Machine with Burning Fuse on Ex-President's Window Sill.

PARIS, April 24.—A dispatch to the Journal from Montélimar, Department of the Drôme, to-day, says that the authorities there found a bomb, to which a burning fuse was attached, on the window sill of the library of former President Loubet's villa, where he and his family are spending their Easter vacation.

The fuse was extinguished, and an examination of the bomb showed it to be an extremely deadly nature.

RUSSIAN PRISONERS ESCAPE.

Men in Uniforms Obtain Their Liberty by a Daring Ruse.

WARSAW, Russian Poland, April 24.—At 3 o'clock this morning seven men in carriages and attired in uniforms of the gendarmerie and police drove up to the prison here and presented a false order for the delivery of ten political prisoners who were to be tried to-day, saying that they intended to convey them to the citadel.

The prisoners were delivered to the men, who then drove away.

At daylight the carriages were discovered empty on the outskirts of the city, the drivers bound and gagged, and the discarded uniforms inside the vehicles. There was no further trace of the political prisoners or of the men who had rescued them.

REMORSEFUL, TRIES SUICIDE.

Moody's Misdeeds Caused Death of His Wife and Her Uncle.

Remorse for having caused the death of a man and a woman, according to his own written confession, led Frederick Palmer Moody to attempt suicide yesterday morning in the Harlem House, at 2,100 Third Avenue, by leaving the gas turned on in his room. A porter passing through the hall outside smelled the gas and broke open the door. Moody was unconscious and was carried to the Harlem Hospital. He had not recovered consciousness up to a late hour last night.

Though he registered as "James Smith of Trenton, N. J.," letters found in the man's pockets identified him as Moody. Detective Flood has a warrant charging Moody with bigamy and has been hunting for him since Christmas. Even now while he lies unconscious, the man is watched constantly by a policeman, and if he lives will be taken to prison and held for trial.

Behind the attempted suicide lies a tragedy of which the family of Henry Schoen, a coffee and tea merchant of 127 Pearl Street has been the centre. The trouble began when Moody married Mr. Schoen's daughter four years ago. The daughter died last month, and her uncle, Meyer Baum, killed himself a few weeks ago.

When Moody married Florence Schoen he was a clerk in a Wall Street broker's office and earned a fair salary. From the very start, though, he failed to care for his wife. They lived with her parents in a comfortable home at 291 Hewes Street, Williamsburg. Last Fall Moody, having fallen into bad habits, lost his job. Then he deserted his wife and Mr. Schoen had him brought to court for abandonment. The Magistrate told him to get work again and pay his wife at least $5 a week. He failed to follow the Magistrate's orders and on Christmas Day he was in court again. The case was adjourned for two weeks.

Leaving the court, Mr. Schoen went to his office at 127 Pearl Street. He had been there only ten minutes when a man unknown to him walked in hurriedly.

"If your son-in-law is Frederick Palmer Moody," said the stranger, "he married my niece last night."

By that time Moody had disappeared. Mr. Schoen went to District Attorney Clark of Kings County, and Mr. Clarke gave him a letter to District Attorney Jerome. The case was taken to the Grand Jury immediately, and an indictment for bigamy was returned against Moody. Until yesterday all efforts to find him failed.

Meanwhile, more sorrow came to the Schoen family. Cast down by the unhappiness of his niece, of whom he was very fond, Meyer Baum, Mrs. Schoen's brother, threw himself from the tenth floor of 51 Maiden Lane. That was on Jan. 16. Six weeks later the young wife died.

A young man walked into the Harlem House night before last and registered as "James Smith." He looked to be about 25 years old; his clothes, though slightly worn, were of good material. Assigned to a room, he write several letters, and before midnight he went out and mailed them. As a later examination showed, he took great care to close every opening in his room through which the gas might escape. Then he turned on the gas and lay down to die.

The following letters were found in the man's pockets.

My Dear Palmer: Come back to your wife, who cannot live without you. Don't listen to any silly gossip you hear. I hate Walter. Meet me Saturday night and don't bring Walter with you. FLORENCE.

On a table near the bed was the following short note:

Desperate—unable to control myself. Nervous wreck for last six months. Impulse at moments makes me liable to do anything. Life has been a perfect hell. Had I used my own judgment, in preference to that of friends whose company has been my downfall, a man and a wife might be alive instead of dead. The informer I should have doubted. He caused me to start on my downward career.

There was another letter, written to "Dear Florrie," and signed "Mam." It was dated last August, and advised young Mrs. Moody to stick to her husband, and said that any man who would try to separate husband and wife was a bad sort to choose.

From the letters found on him it seemed that Moody had once suspected some one of superseding him in his wife's affections, but had later been convinced of his mistake. The contents of one or two of the letters were not made public by the police.

MAY PAY ALLEE LOSSES.

Reported Plan of Relative of Loan Association's Ex-Secretary.

PATERSON, N. J., April 24.—It is understood that the Manchester Building and Loan Association will not lose a dollar because of the transactions of George W. Allee, its former Secretary. A relative of Allee, living in Schenectady, N. Y., is said to be willing to make good all money found to be owing to the association from the former Secretary, and it is reported that the matter was adjusted before Allee surrendered yesterday to the authorities.

The wife of this relative is said to have been a guest of Mrs. Allee in this city for several days. Allee admitted yesterday that he had seen the relative referred to in New York, although he at first denied that he had been out of the city.

The Echo Lake real estate owned by Allee is desirable property, but is said to be heavily mortgaged. There is a probability, however, that it will increase in value, and it is thought this will be deeded over as security.

BAKER'S OVENS EXPLODED.

Blew Two Bakers Into the Street and Started a Fire.

When the fire was turned on last night under the big bread ovens in the bakery of John Schuler, at 302 First Street, Hoboken, there was an explosion. The ovens were riven apart and everything between the ovens and the sidewalk was blown into the street. This included two bakers, who are now in St. Mary's Hospital, in Hoboken.

It is supposed that in some manner the ovens became filled with gas which exploded when the fire was turned on. Gustave De Rhaks of 302 First Street, Hoboken, and Joseph Schmidt of 320 Madison Street, Hoboken, were the bakers injured. They were burned and bruised. The explosion did about $4,000 damage. A fire company quickly smothered the blaze that followed the explosion.

TWO WILLIAM RAUSCHS.

Each a Nephew of Testator, and Each Claimed $1,500 Bequest.

Vice Chancellor Pitney heard testimony in Newark yesterday in an action to interpret a clause reading: "I leave to my nephew, William Rausch, $1,500" in the will of the late Leonard Rausch, of Jersey City, who died on July 20, 1904.

Emil Schumann, executor of the estate, caused the suit to be brought, as the decedent had two nephews named William—one, Frederick William Rausch of Brooklyn, and the other William Frederick Rausch of New York City.

Each laid claim to the bequest. Evidence was heard as to which nephew was commonly called "William" and which answered to "Fritz." The names were hopelessly mixed.

The case was decided finally by the Vice Chancellor in favor of the Brooklyn William.

CZAR TO OPEN DOUMA IN RUSSIA'S CAPITAL

Decision a Surprise After Long Seclusion at Tsarskoe-Selo.

CONSTITUTION WITH A STRING

Fundamental Law as Finally Drafted Leaves Few Powers in Parliament's Hands.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 24.—Emperor Nicholas has finally decided to come to St. Petersburg, greet the representatives of the people, and personally open the first Russian Parliament on May 10. His decision comes as a surprise, as it was supposed that after his long absence from the capital he would not dare to leave the shelter of the Palace of Tsarskoe-Selo. Premier Witte and other advisers, however, urged that it would be a great blunder to miss such an opportunity.

A most elaborate programme for the opening of Parliament has been prepared. Imperial heralds will pass through the streets summoning the representatives of the people, and an imposing military escort will accompany the Emperor to the Tauride Palace, where Parliament will assemble.

It is rumored that the Emperor in greeting Parliament will announce general amnesty for political prisoners and the abolition of martial law.

The final draft of the "fundamental law" was published to-day. It consists of seventy articles, and constitutes Russia's so-called "Constitution." The main point gained by the people in their fight against the Crown is the incorporation in the "fundamental law" of the provisions of the imperial manifesto of Oct. 20, creating a Parliament and thus making it impossible for the Emperor hereafter without usurpation to withdraw what he has granted. Otherwise the modifications of the "fundamental law" are entirely in the direction of supporting the Emperor's present powers against the assaults of Parliament.

He not only retains absolute control of the army and navy and foreign relations, with power to declare peace or war, but he keeps in his hands the vital prerogative of declaring cities, districts, and provinces under martial law or "in a state of reinforced security." Inasmuch as any exceptional state of security involves the suspension of civil rights, and as normal conditions have not existed in Russia for years, St. Petersburg having been "in a state of reinforced security" since 1882, the personal guarantees granted can be wiped out by a stroke of the Emperor's pen.

A very important provision makes no no law operative until published by the Ruling Senate. The Senate, a purely bureaucratic institution, therefore becomes the judge of the "constitutionality" of the acts of Parliament. Immunity from arrest and domiciliary visits, &c., are spoiled by many exceptions. The right of freedom of residence which seems freely granted is subject to the "existing regulations." This, of course, leaves the Jews confined to the Pale and the peasants chained to the glebe unless Parliament later changes the existing regulations.

A suspicious feature in connection with the Emperor's power to dissolve Parliament and order new elections is that no provision is made for fixing a time within which the new Parliament must be convened.

AMERICAN PLOT IN RUSSIA!

ST. PETERSBURG, April 24.—A violent attack on Americans was made to-day in the monarchist convention at Moscow by M. Shmakhoff, the celebrated reactionary, who attempted to stir up anti-foreign feeling by declaring that the revolution in Russia was inspired and directed by American Masonic organizations, working through the Jews and the Social Democrats.

The object of the conspiracy, he said, was to overthrow the throne and the Church, all that Russians hold dear. He called on his hearers to hold no truce with the Liberals.

M. Shmakhoff was loudly applauded when he intimated that it was necessary to arouse the populace against reformers, Jews, and foreigners.

FLAUNTS WITTE'S REQUEST.

Sebastopol's Commander Refuses to Allow a Deputy-Elect to Return.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 24.—A sensation has been caused by the action of Gen. Neplueff, commander of the fortress of Sebastopol, in flatly refusing to accede to Premier Witte's request to allow M. Sipiaguine, a nephew of the murdered Minister of the Interior of that name and one of the members elected to the lower house of Parliament from the Crimean Province, to return to Sebastopol.

M. Sipiaguine, who is under a decree of perpetual banishment from Sebastopol on account of his participation in the disorders there, telegraphed to the Premier for permission to return, and Count Witte in turn wired Gen. Neplueff to the effect that in his opinion a member-elect of Parliament should not be excluded from the city in which he claims to reside.

There could be no better illustration of the results of a division of authority, the military commanders being absolutely independent, than this open flaunting of a request of the Premier's.

KIEFF, Russia, April 24.—Governor General Soukomlinoff to-day received a dispatch from Premier Witte saying that he had been advised that the police of Kieff were threatening to expel a hundred Jewish families owing to irregularities in their papers, and requesting that they be allowed to remain if they were peaceful citizens.

MUST BUY AMERICAN CARS.

Board of Aldermen Regulates City Automobile Purchases.

Only American makes of automobiles may hereafter be purchased by the city under a resolution adopted by the Board of Aldermen yesterday. Furthermore, the city departments must not pay more than $4,000 each for the machines they use.

This stand was taken on a report from the Finance Committee urging the fixing of these rules. Dock Commissioner Bensel then was authorized to purchase two machines without public letting, one to cost $2,500 and the other $4,000. All machines owned by city departments must be lettered with the department name hereafter, and are to be used only for departmental business.

The board adopted resolutions of sympathy over the death of Gen. Martin T. McMahon, Judge of the Court of General Sessions.

LITTLE SCARE IN THEATRE.

Chorus Girl Screamed When a Bulb Short-Circuited in Swing Scene.

In the swing song in the second act of "The Rollicking Girl," at the New York Theatre last evening, one of the swings, which are wound with electric light bulbs, short-circuited and caused a momentary flash.

One of the chorus women screamed, and for a short time there was some excitement in the house. As there was no repetition of the flash, the audience settled down and the performance went on without further interruption.

To Abolish Senior Wranglerships.

LONDON, April 24.—The special board for mathematics of Cambridge University will recommend important changes in the mathematical tripos, involving the abolition of the senior wranglership. It is recommended that the lists of successful candidates be published in alphabetical order, the idea being to relieve students of the necessity of competing for places, that they may be free to devote themselves to other studies.

TRAINS TO RUN IN 1908

Public Service Corporation Gives Up Plan for Its Own High-Speed Line—Concessions from McAdoo Interests.

The Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, which operates the trolleys of Essex and Hudson Counties, made an agreement yesterday with the Pennsylvania Railroad and the McAdoo tunnel interests by which it promises to abandon its own plans for a special Jersey terminal and high-speed line to this city.

By this agreement the Pennsylvania Road and the McAdoo tunnel interests will build a high-speed electric line that will take passengers of the Pennsylvania at Harrison, and of the Public Service Corporation at Park Place, Newark, and land them in Manhattan, at Church and Cortlandt Streets, in fifteen minutes. These two companies are to co-operate in building the main Jersey terminal at Harrison.

President McCarter of the Public Service Corporation issued this statement yesterday:

"Negotiations which for some time have been under way between Public Service, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and the McAdoo tunnel interests were consummated yesterday afternoon at the offices of the Public Service Corporation, in the Prudential Building, by the signing of various agreements between the respective interests.

"By these agreements Public Service has transferred to a real estate company owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company its large terminal site on Park Place, adjoining Proctor's Theatre.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad and the McAdoo tunnel interests jointly agree to co-operate in the construction and operation of a high-speed electric line that will give rapid, direct, and frequent service from Newark and Hudson County to the several projected terminals in Manhattan at rates of fare consistent with rapid transit development.

"Public Service Corporation agrees to operate its surface systems both in Essex and Hudson Counties so as to facilitate the transfer of passengers as conveniently as possible to the stations of the high-speed line. In view of the co-operation thus provided for, it is deemed unnecessary to construct the tunnel and high-speed line contemplated by Public Service or the proposed additional surface lines in Hudson County laid out by the tunnel interests.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad will construct a large transfer station at Harrison, where all of its trains will stop, and which will be the point where the motive power will be changed from steam to electricity.

"The line should be finished and in operation not later than 1908. The distance from the Park Place terminal to the terminals at Church and Cortlandt Streets, New York, should be covered easily in fifteen minutes, and twenty-five minutes should suffice for the journey to the uptown terminal.

"The various interests represented unite in the belief that the transportation facilities afforded by this high-speed line, working in co-operation with the surface systems, will produce an enormous increase in population throughout the territory served."

CARRIED OFF THE SAFE.

Then Burglars Blew It Up and Stole the $4,200 It Contained.

Michael Venderloskey, a retired farmer, who lives at Floral Park, L. I., has never believed in the safety of banks. He has always kept his ready money locked up in a two-foot iron safe in his house. Last night he decided, with his wife, to make a neighborly call.

"We can leave in perfect safety," he said to his wife; "here's $3,800 in bills and $400 in gold in the safe and nobody can touch it."

"It's a good thing," she replied; "you can never tell about these banks. They're liable to break at any moment."

Then they locked up and went out. While they were gone burglars got into the house, laid two mattresses on the ground under the front windows, picked up the safe, and dropped it out. Then they hauled it to the barn, where they blew it up. When Venderloskey and his wife returned they found the wreck in the barn and the money gone. Sheriff Gildersleeve is looking for the robbers.

SAFE FOR THIS SEASON, THINK RACE TRACK MEN

Don't Fear Higgins's Message Will Revive Cassidy Bill.

CASSIDY WON'T HELP, ANYHOW

Too Late for This Session, He Says—Poolrooms Still Without News Service.

The veto of the Coggeshall bill and the message explaining his action given out by Gov. Higgins Monday night, when the veto was announced, failed to convince those interested in racing that there was any cause for fear, so far as the season now under way is concerned, that the Cassidy-Lansing Anti-Race Track bill would be revived.

Jockey Club officials were advised early in the day that both sponsors of the Cassidy-Lansing bill had agreed that it was too late in the session to attempt any revival of the measure, or to introduce another of similar purport.

It was pointed out that the Coggeshall bill had been introduced some time before the Cassidy-Lansing bill, and an attempt was made by representatives of The Jockey Club to foster the idea that there was no relation between the Governor's veto and the measure to stop gambling on the race tracks.

When it was suggested that there was a disposition to classify the Coggeshall bill as a measure to shut off the Cassidy-Lansing bill by increasing the racing percentage to the agricultural societies throughout the State there was nothing further said along this line.

The outspoken attitude of Gov. Higgins was the source of some satisfaction among the poolroom men, who declared that The Jockey Club would be less inclined to arrogance if it realized that the continuance of racing demanded every ounce of political power that could be brought to bear.

"One would think," said the proprietor of a poolroom in Thirty-fourth Street who is one of the biggest operators in the city, "that The Jockey Club occupied a position so impregnable that it could afford to do without the influences which are behind us. They will soon find out where they are wrong, especially since Gov. Higgins has publicly lined himself up with the Cassidy-Lansing crowd. It's a good thing to make them sit up and take notice, and the Governor has accomplished that, if nothing else.

"Everybody who knows anything about politics in New York knows that the ward leaders take care of many of their people by giving them poolroom jobs. There are more heelers placed with us than in any other way, considering the number of poolrooms, and if we are forced to make a real fight to put racing out of existence we shall be able to show considerable political strength.

"If we really get into the game it will only be when the realization is brought home to us that The Jockey Club means to pursue for all time its policy of keeping advance information away from us. We understand now what we were a little in doubt about for the first few days at Aqueduct—that as long as the track authorities are on the level in trying to hamper us there is very little profit in handling the Eastern races. Up to date all the rooms are losers on them.

"There is not a room in town which would dream of taking a big bet as things are new except on a newspaper odds pay off. We can't get the scratches or the overweights so we can rely on them, and it's not often that we succeed in getting track odds in time to do us any good. Then we can't be sure that they are correct.

"It's no sure thing, though, that we wouldn't be better off if there was no racing at all on the Metropolitan tracks than the way things are. In such an event we would still have the Western races to do business on and there are plenty of New Yorkers who go to the local races every day who would turn to the West if they had no chance to get a bet down where they could see the horses run."

It is certain that the Governor's declaration did not result yesterday in any lessening of the restrictions enforced at Aqueduct to prevent racing news from leaking out. The Pinkertons were as busy as they have been on any day since the opening of the season, and the matter sent out by telegraph was as rigidly censored.

The rooms were unable to get anything like complete information, and there were not a few of them which failed to make any pretense at posting odds, doing business only on a hand book basis.

There were those in touch with the situation who argued that Gov. Higgins might have put an anti-racing bill through if he had started early in the session. This was denied by others, who declared that the Governor's record from the time of the Constitutional Convention had been consistently against race track gambling, and that it is very doubtful if he could have put a measure through wiping out betting on the tracks, no matter how hard he might have tried.

"I took absolutely no part in the passage of the Coggeshall bill," said the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer last night. "The Cassidy-Lansing bill, which I refused to advocate for reasons stated by me at the time, was an entirely different matter."

It was Dr. Slicer whose opposition to the Cassidy-Lansing bill, on the ground that it was a poolroom move, had much to do with killing that measure. It was through Dr. Slicer that the agreement was reached with The Jockey Club by which the turf authorities took their steps against the poolrooms.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—One of the most interesting spectacles of the present session is the attitude of Senator Cassidy toward his Anti-Race Track Gambling bill. There were many intimations when the Cassidy bill was first introduced that it would not be forced to a final issue, but every such intimation was hotly resented by its author.

Yesterday the Governor issued a statement in connection with the veto of the extra rake-off bill of Coggeshall's that was exactly in line with contentions made heretofore by Cassidy. It was expected that, the administration having come out flat-footed against the evils on which Cassidy held forth, the Senator would at once move that the committee smothering his bill be discharged from further consideration of the measure, and so put squarely up to the Senate whether or not it would support Gov. Higgins's attitude. But Cassidy made no move.

When the Governor's veto, in which he intimated that the State was being bribed by the race track interests, was shown to Cassidy last night Cassidy said he would make no statement at that time, but would see the Governor to-day. To-night he said he did not see the Governor.

"Do you intend to make any move to revive your bill?" Cassidy was asked last night.

"I am too busy trying to clear up my local legislation to pay any attention to it now," he said.

"The bill is in a much stronger position as a result of the Governor's statement, is it not?"

"The Governor did not say anything that I have not already said," was the reply. "I do not believe that we would have time to put the bill through now. I have no sympathy with grand stand plays at the end of the session that can do no good."

There is still a possibility that Gov. Higgins may send down an emergency message on this bill, but this is believed to be the only thing that can revive it. As it stands now, it is going through its death agony in the Codes Committee, and no one other than Cassidy is likely, except under pressure from the Governor, to have it brought out for debate on the floor.

GIVE 'EM THE SITTING ROOM.

Servants Should Have It One Night a Week, Says Miss Rhodes.

Speaking before the charities conference in Orange yesterday afternoon, Miss Elizabeth M. Rhodes of New York, Secretary of the Inter-Municipal Research Committee, which has been conducting a research into the employment agency problem, declared that housewives ought to let their servants have the use of the sitting room one night a week.

"If you trust them with your husband, your children, and your silver," said Miss Rhodes, "why not trust them with the use of your sitting room at least one night a week? A girl would rather meet her friend outside than entertain him in the kitchen.

"After she has been working hard all day in the kitchen there is a limit to her desire to be in the same room in the evening. In a letter I received from a maid recently she stated she had stayed in one place for nearly nine years because her mistress allowed her the use of the sitting room."

Failure in this line on the part of the mistress was, Miss Rhodes declared, the main cause of the nomadic habits of domestic servants.

DIAMOND BADGE FOR CHOATE.

Alpha Delta Phi's Give It to Him, Along with a Dinner.

The Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity gave a dinner in honor of Joseph H. Choate at Delmonico's last night. More than 200 members were present, and they presented to Mr. Choate a diamond badge in remembrance of his services as President of the Alpha Delta Phi Club for ten years.

Mr. Choate made a speech, but it was said on behalf of the fraternity:

"Mr. Choate is here to have a heart to heart talk with his fellows and we don't want any of the newspapers to hear what he says. We're going to have a good time and have it to ourselves."

Other speakers were Hamilton W. Mabie, who presided; Francis Lynde Stetson, Peter B. Olney, and Senator Everett Bolby of New Jersey. Leters were read from Donald G. Mitchell, Justices Henry B. Brown, Oliver Wendell Holmes, and William R. Day of the Supreme Court of the United States, Daniel Coit Gilman, President Raymond of Union College, and Everett P. Wheeler.

Among those present were Judges William J. Wallace and Alfred C. Cox of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Edward Patterson of the State Supreme Court, William R. Willcox, Russell Sturgis, Gen. Henry E. Tremain, Charles E. Sprague, Truman J. Backus, James Armstrong, the Rev. Dr. Flagg, S. Wright Dunning, W. K. Post, George J. Peet, Bartow S. Weeks, James K. Hackett, Edward M. Colie, and Alfred C. Chapin.

AN IMPROMPTU DOG FIGHT.

Cage of Fox Hounds Fell from a Truck and Pandemonium Followed.

Sixteen foxhounds in a cage were being pushed on a truck down the Barclay Street Ferry slip at Hoboken yesterday afternoon. They were the property of J. R. Holloway, and were on the way from the Meadow Brook Club to his home in Orange.

The truck broke and the cage fell with a jar. One of the excited dogs nipped another on the foreleg, and in an instant there was a bedlam of biting, snarling, barking hounds. A large crowd gathered, and half a dozen hoodlums added to the confusion by encouraging the fighting. Twenty men armed with poles jabbed at the dogs for fifteen minutes until the animals were exhausted. Several of them were badly bitten.

MILES'S CHECK STUBS SEIZED.

District Attorney Clarke of Brooklyn yesterday secured possession of the check stubs of William O. Miles, the lawyer and ex-Assistant District Attorney, convicted of defrauding the city by false sewer claims. A search warrant compelled Miles to open his office safe and deliver the stubs. The District Attorney says that the prosecution of Miles has just begun and intimates that new charges will be made as the result of the confession of another person convicted on a similar charge.

Miles was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, and to serve one year in the penitentiary, but is out on bail pending an appeal. His bond has been raised from $1,000 to $2,500.

ALDERMEN LOSE BEFORE COURT OF APPEALS

Act Divesting Them of Franchise-Granting Power Upheld.

FURTHER APPEAL POSSIBLE

Tammany Members May Take Case to Supreme Court—Enterprises Involving $500,000,000 Tied Up.

ALBANY, April 24.—The Court of Appeals to-day sustained the act of the last Legislature taking from the Board of Aldermen of New York City the power to grant public franchises and placing it in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

The decision is handed down in the case of Wilcox, appellant, vs. Mayor McClellan, and Pettit, appellant, vs. Mayor McClellan.

Tammany members of the Board of Aldermen declared yesterday that they would take an appeal to the United States Supreme Court, to complete their test of the constitutionality of the legislative act transferring the franchise-giving powers to the Board of Estimate.

L. Laflin Kellogg, attorney for the contesting Aldermen, was in consultation with his clients last night, but said he would have no announcement to make until to-day.

"I have not yet seen the decision of the court," he explained, "and, although I have been using the long-distance telephone, I cannot get at the exact points of the court. When I get the decision to-morrow I shall have an announcement to make. In the meantime, I can only say that we shall do everything in our power to combat the action of the Legislature, and if there is any possible basis for an appeal it will be taken."

Alderman "Little Tim" Sullivan declared himself in favor of going to the United States Supreme Court, and so did Alderman Dowling, another Tammany spokesman.

"I do not see how an appeal can be taken," declared Corporation Counsel Delany. "The matter is one affecting the State purely and the constitutionality of one of its statutes."

Hanging on the constitutionality of the act in question is the fate of enterprises involving fully $500,000,000, for the Board of Estimate cannot act on any pending franchise matters until the case is finally settled.

Among the matters pending in the board which would be held up during an appeal if one should be taken are the nineteen subway routes laid out by the Rapid Transit Commission, the four extensions sought in the Bronx by the Southern Boulevard Railway, the twenty-two extensions sought by the Union Railway, thirteen extensions and five alterations sought by the New York City Interborough Railway, the New York and Port Chester franchise, the Connecting Railway franchise, the Livingston Street and Lafayette Avenue line of the Nassau Road in Brooklyn, the franchises of the Seaboard, Manhattan, and Kings County Refrigeration Companies, and the franchises of the Atlantic, Commonwealth, and Star Telephone Companies.

TO RUSH INSURANCE BILLS.

Gov. Higgins Urges Immediate Passage of Two Amended Measures.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—Gov. Higgins today sent to the House a message urging the immediate passage of the two amended insurance bills which passed the Senate the latter part of last week.

One is the measure relative to perjury and the other is that generally known as "The Big Bill."

It was the unanimous opinion of the Assembly that the bills should go over until to-morrow in order that the members might have an opportunity to study the amendments put in by the Senate.

PENALTY ON PAWNBROKERS.

Assembly Passes Bill Fining Those Who Collect on Stolen Goods.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—The Assembly today, by a vote of 78 to 20, passed what Mr. Oliver of New York called "an act calling upon the Provident Loan Society and the pawnbrokers of New York to prove they are not in league with thieves."

The measure was fought by Palmer, Oliver, and Bohan, and defended by its introducer, Prentice. Palmer said it was faulty in construction and would also work great injustice, in that it would often make a pawnbroker liable to a heavy penalty, though entirely innocent of wrongdoing.

The bill provides "that pawnbrokers who, having received any property which has been stolen or embezzled, asks or receives any money or other valuable thing, or a promise thereof, for the delivery of such property to the person rightfully entitled thereto, after notification that such property has been stolen or embezzled, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and forfeit $50."

FRAUD IN ASSEMBLY COUNT.

House Republicans Disconcerted When Clerk's Figures Were Challenged.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—The Democrats administered a shock to the Republicans in the Assembly to-day by charging that the desk was passing bills by dishonest count. Feeling ran high for a short time, and the whole force of the House machine was put to work to get enough members into the chamber to make good the count as announced by the desk.

The bill up at the time was that which affected the Board of Aldermen of Niagara Falls, which was returned by the Democratic Mayor, O. W. Cutler, without his approval. It devolved upon the House to pass the bill over his veto.

The roll was called, and the Clerk announced, "Yeas, 78; nays, 40." There appeared to be about forty Republicans in the House. Messrs. Tompkins and Palmer, Alfred E. Smith, and Mr. La Fetra immediately challenged the roll call. The desk was disconcerted, and looked to the Speaker to be helped out. The Speaker looked to the majority leader. He met the emergency and moved that the Police Department of the House find the absentees.

In this contingency, Palmer sought to show the strength of the Republicans by moving to reconsider the vote by which the bill had apparently been passed. This vote was also productive of an apparent discrepancy between the roll call and those present. The Democrats finally could find but 68 Republicans actually voting. The Clerk held that 78 had voted.

In one instance the Speaker held that a member had voted before going out. The Democrats greeted this observation with jeers. Majority Leader Moreland got his party out of an ugly situation by moving the previous question.

ANTI-PASS BILL AMENDED.

Senator Brackett Vainly Attempts to Strike It from Calendar.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—If the Anti-Pass bill introduced in the Senate by Mr. Brackett goes through as amended today, it will be illegal for the railroads to give passes under any circumstances. Senator Brackett asserts that his bill as introduced is in the interest of the people and that in time it will be found that his attitude had been correct.

To-day Senator Quinn said that the bill had been introduced in the interests of the railroads, and that the State itself would be hurt by the passage of the bill as Brackett originally framed it.

Senator Grady, who has dropped his former plan to have the railroads carry the legislators free while they are on duty, had an amendment added to Brackett's bill to-day providing that the State Controller shall purchase at the lowest price possible railroad tickets, which shall be issued to legislators who desire during the session to travel between their homes and Albany. In consideration of receiving this transportation, which the State will pay for, members must assign their mileage money to the Controller. The amendment prevailed by a vote of 26 to 12, and Brackett immediately moved to reconsider the vote.

"I want to warn my Republican friends that it will be a bad piece of politics at this stage for them to vote for the amendment," he said. "It is a salary grab."

Grady denounced Brackett for bringing politics into a purely economic matter. He said that the State allowed him $30 for mileage, and he was forced during the session to spend $120. He challenged Brackett to show how the amendment was a "grab," and Brackett made no reply. The motion to reconsider was lost by the same vote.

"With a tear in my heart," said Brackett, "I move to strike the bill from the calendar."

"That's very touching," said Grady and Elsberg in the same breath, "but we'll have a vote on it just the same."

The motion to strike the bill from the calendar was lost, and the bill goes over for three days for reprinting, when Brackett will make another fight against its final passage.

VOTING MACHINE BILL PASSES

Senate Adopts Measure—McCarren Advocates and Grady Opposes It.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—The Stanley bill, providing that voting machines shall be used in the next election in eight districts in Manhattan, two in Kings, one in Queens, and one in Richmond, passed the Senate to-day. It has already passed the Assembly.

Senator McCarren spoke for the measure, and said he hoped that the test would be so successful that in time voting machines would be universally used. Grady, who opposed the bill, said that if McCarren liked them so well he would move an amendment that their use be confined to Kings County. This amendment was lost and the bill passed as originally framed.

SPENDS ROCKEFELLER MONEY

Secretary F. T. Gates's Answers Somewhat Surprise a Newark Lawyer.

Frederick T. Gates of Montclair, N. J., confidential secretary of John D. Rockefeller, is serving as a petit juror in an assault case now being tried in the Court of Quarter Sessions, Newark. Mr. Gates was selected yesterday after a searching examination by the defendant's counsel, who was somewhat surprised by the answers.

"What is your employment?" asked the lawyer.

"I am engaged in the business of distributing John D. Rockefeller's benevolence," was the reply.

After Mr. Gates had repeated the answer at the request of the attorney, he was readily accepted. The case is now on trial.

HEALEY'S FINE SEND-OFF.

Delegation and a Band on Pier When Union President Sails.

It is not often that the head of a National labor union who is going to Europe is escorted to the pier by a delegation, including one or two millionaires and accompanied by a brass band, but this was the experience of President Timothy Healey of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen yesterday.

Mr. Healey sailed on the Caronia for Liverpool as one of the labor members of a committee appointed by the National Civic Federation to investigate municipal ownership abroad. The Civic Federation pays expenses, but Healey's union also gave him a purse containing $1,000.

Among those who saw Mr. Healey off were M. E. Ingalls, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Big Four Railroad; Prof. Frank Goodnow of Columbia University, and several prominent business men who are members of the Civic Federation. There were also at the pier about forty or fifty labor men and members of Irish societies.

HORSE GOT HIM ARRESTED.

Knew His Old Stable, and Insisted on Going There.

When Detective Sergeants McMullin, Reith, and Manning of the Central Office were in a stable at 423 East Ninetieth Street looking for a stolen horse and wagon yesterday, the missing animal ran in from the street. He was formerly kept in that stable and when he passed it, being hungry, he took the bit in his teeth and bolted into the door.

In the wagon was Otto Weinz, 18 years old, of 1,235 Lexington Avenue. When the detectives arrested him, they say, he confessed that he and two other boys stole the horse. From his statements the two boys were later captured at their homes. They were Albert Curtis, aged 16, of 121 East Eighty-third Street, and Herbert Moss, aged 20, of 115 East Eighty-third Street. They were taken to Headquarters.

Henry Greenberg, a dry goods dealer, of 1,484 Seventh Avenue, owns the horse and wagon. Weinz was trying to sell them.

METCALFE BILL PASSES.

Despite Bitter Attack on the Critic by "Jimmy" Oliver.

ALBANY, April 24.—Jimmy Oliver made a bitter attack on James S. Metcalf, the dramatic critic, in the Assembly to-day, when the Murphy bill, to prevent unjust discrimination by theatrical managers in the matter of admittance came up.

Oliver was taunted with the charge that he was representing Tim Sullivan, who controls several theatres. After denouncing Mr. Metcalf, he said that the motives which impelled him in his fight against the measure were not of cardinal importance, and that he was "defending the dignity of the Legislature of the State of New York when he objected to special legislation for the benefit of the critic in question."

Notwithstanding Oliver's heated demands, the bill slid through by a vote of 87 to 17.

LAX METHODS IN STATE BUILDINGS DEPARTMENT

Albany Grand Jury Censures Conduct of Capitol Employes.

REPORT GOES INTO DETAIL

Weighmaster of Coal Was Remiss—Chiefs Used Subordinates to Further Private Ventures.

ALBANY, April 24.—The Albany County Grand Jury to-day reported to the court on its investigation of the allegations of misappropriation of coal paid for by the State for the Capitol boiler house. The jury found that "certain employes of the State Department of Public Buildings were guilty of improperly performing their duties."

The jury declared that the weighmaster was sometimes absent from the boiler house when coal was delivered, and that on his return he took the weight for granted without personally verifying it.

The jury further found that the chief engineer and chief clerk of the department were interested in a private corporation manufacturing machinery for a certain system of forced draft and that they have permitted the use of machinery and shops of the State for the manufacture of certain parts of the machinery.

It was also found that certain other employes of the State were directed to go to various places in Albany and other parts of the State to perform services for the private concern, and that while they were so absent they received pay from the State.

The Grand Jury concludes its report with these recommendations: "While there is reasonable doubt whether these employes can be said to have committed a misdemeanor or other crimes, yet it is quite apparent to the Grand Jury that these practices constitute an improper performance of duty and misconduct in the employment for which they are employed by the State.

"The Grand Jury believes that these irregularities should not be permitted to pass unnotcied, and it is recommended that a copy of this report and of the evidence taken in relation to these matters be submitted to the proper authorities for further action, and the Grand Jury requests the court to make an order transmitting to the Trustees of public buildings of the State of New York this report, and said evidence, both of which are herewith respectfully filed with the court."

The Chief Engineer in the State Department of Public Buildings is James Johnson. The Chief Clerk is Elmer Blair, and the Weighmaster Glen Dunham. They are all residents of this city.

ALBANY'S ADJOURNMENT DATE

Senate Finance Committee Selects May 3 — Assembly Had Chosen March 31.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—The Senate to-day took the first positive steps looking toward final adjournment of the Legislature.

The Finance Committee, in the absence of Chairman Malby, adopted a resolution amending the one sent from the Assembly fixing adjournment for March 21 to read that adjournment shall take place on May 3. This will be part of the Finance Committee's report to the Senate to-morrow, and action on it will be taken by that body then, after which the resolution will go to the Assembly for concurrent action.

TO CONTROL FIRE INSURANCE.

Smith Bill, Prohibiting Combinations, Passes Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 24.—The fire insurance lobby was hard hit to-day when the bill introduced by Mr. Smith of the Second New York District to prevent pools and combinations among fire insurance companies passed by a vote of 88 to 15. Mr. Smith, Mr. Cox of Erie, and Mr. Averill of Monroe led in advocacy of the bill, and Messrs. Prentice, Agnew, and Rogers opposed it. Rogers said he doubted the wisdom of the measure.

The plea was made that the insurance companies were doing the fair thing relative to the San Francisco disaster, and therefore should not be an object of attack. Cox said he had no patience with such a plea, declaring that the excellent organization of the Fire Insurance Trust was helping to arbitrarily raise the rates in certain cities, to offset the large sums which must be paid out for the losses in San Francisco.

Cox wanted uniform rates, based only on "reason, equity, and fairness." The arbitrary manner of fixing rates at this time, he said, made it impossible for policy holders to have fair treatment. Averill declared that, whether or not the measure passed the Senate, it should have the approval of the House, if only for moral effect. He said the fire insurance combination should be made to know that the people were determined to have something to say relative to fire insurance, as well as to life insurance.

Smith declared all the opposition was coming from the agents and companies. His bill was primarily in the interests of the people. The House took him at his word and rushed his bill through. A strong fight will be made against it in the Senate.

BERTMONT BEAT ATHENS FOR WOODHAVEN STAKES

Second Choice Won Easily After a Jostle Near Finish.

TWO POST FAVORITES FIRST

Ebony and Belle of Pequest Were the Best Backed Winners of the Day at Aqueduct.

Conditions changed again at the Aqueduct track yesterday, and horsemen found a new variety of going to tangle up estimates of form, for while the course had dried out in a style to amaze the trainers there was dead turf just under the surface, which was very dry. The going may have had something to do with the mistakes of backers, but though four favorites were beaten in six races all the winners were well backed as "good things" by the shrewder division among the horsemen.

For the Woodhaven, at four and a half furlongs, Athens, from the Sydney Paget stable, was backed with the utmost confidence by the stable connections and the crowd in the clubhouse, because of a private trial. Athens ran just about up to his private showing, but at that failed to win, as a horse that was even better showed in the running of the race, when Bertmont, carrying the colors of W. H. Snyder, went out in front with Athens. The pair drew out clear of all the others, and contested every foot of the first three furlongs, Bertmont then drawing out a trifle before Athens, and after a slight jostle about the last furlong pole coming away and winning rather easily from Athens, which was eased up after the jostle. Aside from any interference, however, Bertmont ran the better race, and won in the fastest time of the season for four and a half furlongs, 0:54.

The nearest thing to a surprise that the afternoon's results brought forth was the victory of Chimney Sweep from a fair lot of horses in the mile handicap, fifth on the card. Red Knight and Tommy Waddell were the best backed of the five that ran, Tommy Waddell starting favorite. The start was the prettiest of the season in New York, the five horses breaking all abreast and running so close together that until they had gone nearly a quarter of a mile it was impossible to say which was first. Red Knight then showed in the lead, lasted there to the middle of the turn, and then gave way to a finish, which was in front to the bend into the stretch. There Tommy Waddell and Chimney Sweep went on together and fought it out, Chimney Sweep winning cleverly by two lengths from Tommy Waddell, with Sailor Boy third.

Ebony and Belle of Pequest, both starting favorites under the weight of the money bet on them, won their respective purses in pronounced style. Summary:

HORSES FOR BREEDING.

Stallions Placed with New Bureau for Free Service.

Four horses, gifts to the Breeding Bureau recently established by The Jockey Club, have been accepted by the Breeding Committee placed in charge of that matter by The Jockey Club, and under the plans formed for the bureau will be placed in service in approved places in New York at an early date. The horses are Margrave, presented by August Belmont; Juvenile Maxim, presented by J. A. Bennett; De Reszke, presented by H. T. Oxnard, and Glenwood, presented by a Western breeder interested in the work of the bureau. The stallions are to be available for the uses of farmers and breeders without charge for service.

All are grand horses, possessing size, substance, and general good looks, and should cross admirably with the native mares of New York State.

Mated with the trotting bred or general farm mares their progeny should be fined down, and will make ideal saddle, driving, or general utility animals.

The famous "Morgan horse," noted all over the country, is a result of crossing the trotter with the thoroughbred, and every dealer in America remembers this breed of horses, and there is general regret that the breed is almost extinct.

This Bureau of Breeding, or its intent, is no new idea in other countries. In France the Government stallions are a part of the breeding interest of the country.

The premiums to be offered by The Jockey Club through the various Agricultural Fair Associations will be a great incentive to the owners of yearlings by thoroughbred sires, and it is said that such premiums will be substantial enough in themselves to encourage the farmer in breeding to these horses, to say nothing of increasing the marketable value of his horse.

BROOKLYN'S HORSE SHOW.

Judge Moore and A. G. Vanderbilt Principal Rivals for Ribbons.

Judge William H. Moore carried off the honors at the opening night of the fourteenth annual horse show of the Riding and Driving Club of Brooklyn, which was held in the club menage, Prospect Park Plaza, last night. Society was well represented among the spectators, many New Yorkers being present.

The interest centred in the meeting of the entries of Judge Moore and Alfred G. Vanderbilt. They met in three classes, Mr. Vanderbilt sustaining two defeats. In the single harness class, which is the Challenge Cup preliminary, Judge Moore's champion Forest King defeated a big field, Mr. Vanderbilt's imported Witchman Elgitia being unplaced. Judge Moore's Fife won from Mr. Vanderbilt's Polly Prim in the victoria class, but in the pairs of harness horses Polly Prim and Full Dress outclassed White Gate Majesty and White Gate Swell. The work of the judges was watched by a big crowd, which included:

Commodore and Mrs. Robert E. Tod, Mrs. E. R. Ladew, Senator and Mrs. F. G. Gardner, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Loew, Miss Emily H. Bedford, Mrs. John Gerken, Col. John N. Partridge, Miss Mollie C. Maxwell, Lehman Strauss, William H. Moore, ex-Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff, Alan Pinkerton, Jay F. Carlisle, J. W. Harriman, Miss C. Adelaide Doremus, Mrs. Harvey Ladew, Philip Livingston, Miss Dorothy Broistedt, Hamilton H. Salmon, Miss T. M. Whiting, Reginald W. Rives, George H. Coutts, Clarence H. Robbins, George C. Clausen, Francis L. Noble, E. T. Bedford, Herbert L. Pratt, W. R. Grace, Mrs. Charles Frederick Cartledge, Mrs. James G. Marshall, Mrs. W. Stanton Elliott, Miss Angeline Bronder, Dr. E. B. Ackerman, Mrs. J. Harsen Rhoades, Jr., Miss Beatrice M. Oltrugge, Mrs. Charles F. Hubbs, B. R. Meserole, William N. Dykman, Theodore F. Miller, and W. L. Candee.

Twelve out of the twenty-three original entries declined the issue in the single harness horse class. Judge W. H. Moore entered his famous Forest King, for which he recently paid $15,000, and his last year winner of hackney championship at Madison Square Garden, Fackenham Princess. A. G. Vanderbilt was represented by his recently imported hackney, Nitchman Elgitia. Miss M. C. Maxwell drove Adonis, while Jay F. Carlisle entered Revenue and Eloquence. The splendid action of Forest King at once attracted attention, and he was early selected as the winner of the blue ribbon.

W. Stanton Elliott rode the winner of the saddle horse class, defeating a big field. J. McDonald rode the second horse, which was Miss Adelaide Doremus's Lady McDonald. Summary:

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Jockey Herman Radtke, the $25,000 recruit to the list of Eastern riders, is under suspension for the remainder of the Aqueduct meeting, the first meeting on a New York race track at which he has ridden. As the meeting has but two more days to go, however, Radtke will have lost but three days' riding, his suspension taking in yesterday. The boy was disciplined by the starter for misbehavior at the post when he rode Fay in the last race Monday, Radtke's riding more than the filly's superiority, finally placing her winner in that race.

Calabash, running as the property of W. S. (Kansas) Price and the winner of the first race at Aqueduct yesterday, was bid up to $2,200, or $1,000 above his entered price, by Michael Clancy, and then was retained by the owner for $5 additional.

Owners wishing to scratch their horses at Aqueduct yesterday were required to do so with something of a show of secrecy, the track officials trying in that way to hold back the information of withdrawals as long as possible from the poolroom correspondents. Previously the scratches were announced publicly when the horses were withdrawn, but yesterday there was no notice of withdrawals until the official list of starters and riders was made public.

The apprentice jockey, Horner, attached to A. J. Joyner's stable and the rider of Athens in the Woodhaven Stake at Aqueduct yesterday, entered a complaint of foul riding against Baird, who rode the winner, Bertmont, alleging that Bertmont had crossed and impeded Athens near the finish. The Stewards dismissed the complaint.

Roseben, winner of the Carter Handicap ten days ago, had a breezing gallop of six furlongs in 1:22 yesterday, in preparation for his race in the Sterling Stake at one mile to-day.

L. W. Miller, a retired New York business man, yesterday purchased at foreclosure sale the famous J. D. Willis stock farm on the outskirts of Middletown, N. Y. Mr. Miller bid in the property for $10,010, which is considered a very low price. He will remodel the residence for a Summer home. The property is a well-known stock farm, and was the home of Harry Clay, a celebrated trotting stallion, which is buried on the place, a handsome monument marking the grave. Many fast trotters were raised on the farm.

For the relief fund for the sufferers from the earthquake and fire in San Francisco, Goodwin Brothers, publishers of "The Official Turf Guide," have presented a set of "guides" covering all the racing in America for ten years, in twenty volumes, two for each year. The books are to be found in an elaborate and distinctive style for this one occasion. The "guides" are to be offered for sale to the highest bidder on Saturday at the Jamaica Clubhouse of the Metropolitan Jockey Club, and the proceeds of the sale are to be turned over to Mr. Schiff, Treasurer of the New York Red Cross Association, for the earthquake fund. Bids for the books also will be received at the office of Goodwin Brothers, 1,440 Broadway, New York.

Big Steam Yachts Sold.

The big steel screw steam yachts Susquehanna and Buccaneer have been sold and are at Morse's yard in South Brooklyn refitting, preparatory to going into early commission. Susquehanna is the 233-ton triple-screw steamer formerly owned by the late Joseph Stickney, and has been sold by his daughter to J. P. White, while Buccaneer is a 160-ton craft formerly owned by J. Rosenbaum and sold to Leonard Richards. She is being practically rebuilt.

AMERICANS BEAT QUAKERS

Ex-Champion Bostons Overwhelm the Washingtons—Four Teams a Tie for Third Place.

No material change was made in the standing of the National League teams as the result of the four games played yesterday, only the much-confident Chicagoans lost the second game to St. Louis and lost their place, while Boston also dropped back. In the American League the Greater New Yorks trimmed the champion Athletics and now are tied with the Washingtons, Clevelands, and Detroits for third place. To-day the Eastern teams change their scene of operations, the champion New Yorks playing their closest rivals, the Philadelphians, while the Greater New Yorks will begin a series of four games at Washington. The Brooklyns play at Boston.

GIANTS LUCKY TO WIN.

Brooklyns Score Seven Runs in One Inning, but Are Defeated.

The Brooklyns made a bold bid for victory over the Giants at the Polo Grounds yesterday, but were unsuccessful by a score of 8 to 7. The tail-enders gave as fine an exhibition of batting as the most enthusiastic "rooter" would wish to see, and they scored seven runs in one inning against the world beaters. The Giants had scored but four runs at the time, and the lead of the Brooklyns seemed to be a winning one. But with the exchange of pitchers, the situation soon took on a different aspect.

With Jordan at first base in place of Gessler, who was released to the Chicago National League team for Pitcher Knoll, the Brooklyns showed the snappiest kind of work in their preliminary practice. Manager Donovan pitted Eason against Wiltse, and if the Brooklyn pitcher had been properly supported, there would have been no necessity for his removal. Both Mertes and Dahlen in the second inning reached first on lucky infield hits, but Mertes was declared out by being hit with a batted ball. Strang's fly to right field was missed by Lumley, and the side should have been retired on Wiltse's out from second to first base. But after Lumley's mistake Bresnahan hit for two bases, and Browne for a single, and four runs were scored.

This seemed to be a decided advantage, but after the Brooklyns had finished their part of the fourth inning there was quite a change in the aspect of affairs. Nine men faced Wiltse, two faced McGinnity, and five earned runs out of seven were the result. The New Yorks lessened this advantage by a run in the fifth inning, Browne getting first on called balls, reaching second on a steal, and scoring on Donlin's single. In the sixth the champions tied the score on two bases on balls, Pastorious having taken the place of Scanlon, Devlin's two-base hit, and McGinnity's single. The eighth and winning run was made by the champions in a ridiculously easy manner. Jordan missed McGinnity's fly, but McGinnity was forced out at second by Bresnahan. The latter got to third on Browne's single, and while Browne simply trotted down to second, Bergen threw down rather high, and Bresnahan tallied. The score:

BENDER'S PITCHING EASY.

Greater New Yorks Beat Athletics in Last Game of Series, 7 to 4.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—In the teeth of a northwest gale that carried a belated breath of Winter's rigors in its path, and which limited the attendance to 2,000, the Athletics were defeated in the final game of the series by the Greater New Yorks by the score of 7 to 4. Bender's pitching was slammed, banged, and biffed to all corners of the field, but amid all the cannonading the Indian was fortunate enough to keep the hits fairly well scattered, which, with splendid support up to the final inning, restricted the victors' runs to three. Had Bender and Schreck not made inexcusable wild throws in the ninth inning Mack's men might have carried off the honors.

Clarkson, the former Harvard pitcher, performed very creditably in the box for New York. He was inclined to be erratic, but his support came to his assistance, and except in the ninth inning the Athletics found run getting a difficult problem. In direct opposition to New York, however, the champions made the most of their hits, but three being wasted. The visitors made two hits in three different innings, but in each instance they were unproductive of runs.

The infield of both teams played fine ball, Cross, Yeager, Williams, and Murphy handling many difficult chances in commendable style. Double plays by the infield cut short prospective runs in two instances. The score:

Taxameter Tells How Far Auto Goes.

The American Taxameter Company has just been incorporated in the State of New York with a capital of $200,000 to introduce into this country and sell the taxameter. This instrument was introduced into Paris over a year ago, and over 6,000 are now in use in that city. In other European cities it is also widely used. The instrument is delicately adapted to record the exact distance traveled by an automobile or carriage, but its use is chiefly confined to automobiles, particularly to automobiles for hire, such as electric vehicles, broughams, and omnibuses.

The patrons of these machines are enabled to see exactly the distance they have been carried, and it thus acts as a protection against extortionate charging. It is also a check on the driver, for it is possible to determine just how far the cab has been driven.

DANIELS LED SWIMMERS IN THE OLYMPIC GAMES

Mitchel Still in Bad Shape and May Only Compete in the Discus-Throwing Event.

ATHENS, April 24.—The events of the Olympic games scheduled for to-day were divided between the Zappeion and the Phalerum. In the former there was a continuance of the fencing and other contests held yesterday, including a special international match between German and English fencers, while in the Phalerum the boat races and swimming matches occurred. The royal guests attended by King George divided their attention between the two localities arriving early at the Zappeion to see the German-English match, and then going to the Phalerum, where a royal barge awaited them, to witness the aquatic events.

The American representatives made their first appearance in actual contest to-day in the swimming races. Here C. M. Daniels, the world-famous New York record holder, and Marquand Schwartz of St. Louis raced, and both won places in the final heats to be contested to-morrow. Daniels won the first heat of the 100-metre race in the closest kind of a contest with Healey, the Australian swimmer, defeating him by one-fifth of a second over the course. The Americans smile confidently, however, when the time was announced, 1:17 3-5, and said that their idol could do much better. J. H. Derbyshire, the crack English swimmer, was third in the heat. Marquand Schwartz finished third in the second heat, winning the right to race to-morrow. Radmilovic was the winner of the heat in very slow time, 1:41, with Halmay, the widely heralded Hungarian, second in 1:43, and Schwartz almost even with him. There were twelve starters in the second heat and six in the first.

One heat in the mile was contested. In this event H. Taylor, the great English swimmer, won a ridiculously easy victory, finishing the distance a full 200 yards ahead of his nearest competitor. J. A. Jarvis finished second to him, with Scheff, the Austrian, third. Taylor's time was 28:28, while the watch registered 37:07 3-5 when Jarvis crossed the line, swimming easily ahead of Scheff. The event will be finished to-morrow.

In the rowing races, which completed the aquatic programme, there was the greatest excitement and the wildest enthusiasm when in the twelve-oared barge race for the various international navies the Greeks won both first and second places. The Italians were third in this race, and won both the others. These were for four-oared gig crews and for six-oared galleys. French and Greek crews were their competitors. No time was announced to-night for any of the rowing races. This feature of the contests is most unsatisfactory, the judges discussing the results as though the fate of nations depended on them and withholding any official decisions until late at night, when they are only partially proclaimed.

The international fencing match in the Zappeion was won by England by a score of nine bouts to two. The victory of his countrymen was enthusiastically applauded by King Edward, who was in attendance, and by Queen Alexandra. Their success was also popular with the Greeks, who seem to favor the English and American contestants above those of any other country. Shooting and tennis completed the Zappeion programme.

James S. Mitchel of New York, the American weight thrower, is still weak, and says he probably will not compete except in one event, the Greek discus throwing. American Minister Jackson was present throughout the swimming contests.

SUNDAY BASEBALL HERE.

New Yorks and Philadelphias Will Play for Sufferers.

For the first time in the history of organized baseball a major league championship game will be played on Manhattan Island next Sunday, the Greater New Yorks and champion Athletics of the American League meeting at American League Park, 166th Street and Broadway, the entire receipts of the game going to the relief of the sufferers of San Francisco.

Ordinarily such an event could not occur here, for aside from the question as to whether the game would be in violation of the law, a clause in the lease of the grounds forbids any playing at the park on Sunday. The difficulty was easily overcome, however, by the appeal of the officials of the club to the Trustees of the Blind Asylum, owner of the grounds, and when apprised of the worthy object of the contest, gladly gave their consent. When the matter was referred to Mayor McClellan he saw no reason why such a game should be stopped by the authorities, and finally Police Commissioner Bingham said that under no circumstances would he interfere.

Both clubs will present their strongest teams in the game. The American League champions have agreed that "Rube" Waddell, the great left-handed pitcher, shall be in the box, while opposed to him will be "Happy Jack" Chesbro, whom many experts believe will come near duplicating his brilliant performance of 1904, when he was regarded as the leading pitcher in the country.

Lady Navarre's Tennessee Derby.

MEMPHIS, April 24.—Charles Ellison's good three-year-old filly Lady Navarre, ridden by T. Burns, won the rich Tennessee Derby in a hard drive down the stretch by a length from M. P. Tichenor's California Derby winner Good Luck. Ellison also secured third money with James Reddick. The time was 1:56¼ for the mile and an eighth.

AUTOISTS OFF FOR RACES.

Record Entry of Cars for Atlantic City Meet Beginning To-day.

A big delegation of automobilists left the city yesterday for Atlantic City, where the three days' racing events will begin this afternoon. The practice trials that have been made over the beach track during the last few days have shown fast time by the high-powered cars, and exciting sport is looked for both in the regular racing car events and in the stock touring contests. The total number of cars entered for the twenty-one events is sixty-eight, the largest number ever received for any beach automobile contest in the vicinity of New York.

The racing machines include the 80 horse power Darracq that Hemery drove to victory in the Vanderbilt Cup race last October, to be driven by Guy Vaughn or S. B. Stevens; the 30 horse power Grout steamer, which Harry Maynes will drive; C. A. Schroeder's 80 horse power Darracq, with William Wallace, Jr., at the wheel; Walter Christie's 110 horse power Christie, with George Robertson as the driver; W. H. Hilliard, with the 80 horse power Napier; A. L. Kull, with the Wayne Kite; Montague Roberts, with the six-cylinder 60 horse power Thomas; E. Cedrino, piloting the 24 horse power Fiat, Jr.; R. L. Lockwood, with the Reo Bird, and H. N. Harding in the English Daimler.

The racing will begin at 2 o'clock each day on the beach, when the tide is low. A grand stand has been erected which will accommodate 8,000 people.

BILLIARD CHALLENGE VOID.

Slosson Will Ignore Sutton's Claim Because of Irregular Conditions.

The blanket challenge which George Sutton, the Chicagoan, issued last week to the winner of the eighteen-inch balk-line championship, two counts in balk, will be ignored by Champion George F. Slosson. This was officially stated by Slosson yesterday, and his attitude toward the challenge is sustained by the donors of the trophy. It is stated that never before in the history of billiards has such a challenge been issued while the result of a tournament was still in doubt and the champion's title undecided. The nearest approach to it was when Schaefer challenged Slosson within fifteen minutes of his winning a title several years ago. Schaefer got in his challenge on that occasion a few minutes in advance of Frank Ives.

The contention was made yesterday that at the time Sutton issued his challenge and posted his forfeit it was possible for him to have won the championship because of ties that appeared probable. Had such a condition come to pass a challenge against himself would have been void. Slosson therefore takes the ground that the challenge is irregular, and refuses to recognize it, especially as the donors of the valuable cup take his view of the matter. Unless there is a rechallenge from Sutton or from some other player all possibilities of a match before the warm Summer weather sets in are very doubtful.

It was also made known yesterday that a compromise was effected with William F. Hoppe, the eighteen-one champion, who refused to enter the recent tournament without a bonus of $5,000, and $2,000, which he claimed was due to him for expenses. Hoppe received $1,000 cash bonus, and will also receive the full amount of his claim. Sutton received $1,000 cash bonus, and Cure, the Frenchman, $2,700. The total sum of these cash bonuses was deducted from the prize money of the tournament, which reduced the winnings of the champion and others to a considerable extent. At the end of this week Slosson, Sutton, Schaefer, Hoppe, and Cure will leave for Chicago, where they will engage in a tournament at 18.2, which will begin May 5, for a purse, and the net gate receipts.

CROWD APPLAUDS MARINES.

Navy Night at Military Show—Receipts for 'Frisco Fund.

The navy took its turn as the feature of the military and athletic tournament last night in Madison Square Garden. Rear Admiral Joseph B. Coghlan acted as reviewing officer, and in consequence the bluejackets and marines held the posts of honor. Again the big amphitheatre was less than a quarter filled with spectators, but those that were there provided considerable enthusiasm. The band last night did not fail to recognize the entrance of the reviewing officer, as it had done on the opening night, and Admiral Coghlan was escorted to the reviewing box by Col. Samuel M. Welch, commanding officer of the night, Sixty-fifth Regiment, N. G. N. Y.; Capt. J. F. Myer, Major Charles B. P. Babcock, Major Joseph D. Howland, and Major C. L. De Bevoise.

The receipts of the night were contributed to the San Francisco fund.

The street riot and volley firing drill of the United States Marines from Washington, commanded by Capt. John F. Myer, was interrupted at the beginning by the troops from the review rushing into the arena in a disorderly fashion, so as to find seats in the empty places that surrounded the arena. They not only distracted the attention of the spectators, but the effect of the salute to the Admiral, the ruffles of the drum and bugle, were entirely lost. The marines went through their physical drill without music, and then formed in hollow square, deployed by the flank, and at double time indicated the methods of dealing with street riots. Their soldierly bearing was excellent, and brought forth merited applause.

Prominent among those present last night were Lieut. Gen. Fred D. Grant, Col. Havard, Chief Surgeon of the department; Col. Pullman, Chief Quartermaster of the department; Col. Sniffen, Chief Paymaster; Col. Heistand, Military Secretary; Col. Scriven, Chief Signal Officer; Capt. W. T. Johnson, Fifteenth Cavalry, aide de camp; Capt. Bowley, Artillery Corps, aide de camp; Capt. Knabenshue, Twelfth Infantry.

The athletic events for the various championships of the Military Athletic League resulted as follows:

100-Yard Handicap, Final.—Won by H. J. Edwards, Twenty-second Regiment, (6½ yards;) C. E. Peabody, Twenty-second Regiment, (8 yards,) second; W. Cook, Sixty-ninth Regiment, (7 yards,) third. Time—0:11.

Chapin, Twelfth Heat; F. G. Poggenberg, Twenty-second Regiment, second; P. J. Flat, Forty-third Company, Coast Artillery, third. Third Heat—Won by J. J. Smith, Twelfth Regiment; J. S. Maloney, Thirteenth Regiment, second; J. J. McAleer, Twelfth Regiment, third. Fourth Heat—C. A. Morris, Seventy-first Regiment; A. P. Crolius, Twenty-second Regiment, second; A. AUTO COMMITTEE READY TO DISCUSS A. A. A. TOUR

Paul Deming Calls First Meeting for Next Week.

CUP RULES MORE STRINGENT

Glidden Run Practically Fixed to Start in West—Vanderbilt Race Entries Soon to be Made.

Word was received at the offices of the American Automobile Association yesterday from Secretary Sidney S. Gorham, who is now in Chicago, that Paul Deming has completed the selection of his Touring Committee and has called a meeting for next week in this city. Mr. Gorham is expected to return to New York late this week to superintend the removal of the American Automobile Association's offices from 31 West Forty-second Street to the Metropolitan Life Building, Madison Avenue and Twenty-third Street, and it is expected that he will announce the members of the committee at that time.

It was with universal satisfaction that automobilists heard that Paul Deming's committee was about to meet, for it means, first of all, some definite statement regarding the route and conditions for the coming Glidden tour. Private owners and manufacturers have been anxiously awaiting some positive information on the subject for some time. Numerous routes have been proposed, and an effort was made by the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers to adopt some satisfactory plan for the award of the trophy. The committee finally reported that it could not suggest any plan. The supreme difficulty was the impossibility of making class distinctions, and thus offering honors for cars of varying horse power. Under the conditions governing the deed of gift, this could hardly be done, as no provision is made for any discrimination, and the cup must go to the car making the best showing in the tour.

This leaves a wide latitude for the committee. Mr. Glidden was averse to imposing a number of technical rules, which he believed would detract from the enjoyable features of the tour. His idea was to make the tour chiefly one for pleasure, and he did not want it hedged around by annoying rules. The method adopted last year was probably too lenient, for considerable dissatisfaction was found, although the winning car, Percy Pierce's Great Arrow, was adjudged by all as eminently entitled to the honor. The rules this year, however, are practically certain to be more stringent. Paul Deming and some members of his committee have been trying to devise some plan that will meet with as general satisfaction as the circumstances will permit in awarding the cup to one car amid a large number of competing machines of different types, power, and weight. What this method will be is not known, and intending competitors are awaiting the results of the coming meeting with considerable interest.

Despite the opposition that has been aroused almost entirely by New England automobilists, it seems certain that the tour will start from a Western point, probably make a short run through Canada, enter New York State, and finish in this city. The advisability of making a detour into New England is being discussed. Should the Glidden tourists leave New England entirely out of the route a separate New England tour is likely to be organized by some of the Massachusetts clubs.

BEELL THROWS PIENING.

Wins Two of Three Falls Easily—Bothner Gets Decision.

In the liveliest wrestling match that has been seen in New York for many a day Fred Beell of Milwaukee defeated John Piening last night at Grand Central Palace before a big crowd, after losing the first fall in 22:45 on an arm lock and crotch hold. He got the second fall in 4:35 on a hammer lock and arm hold, and the third fall in 8:31 on a similar hold.

George Bothner got the decision after an hour's bout with no fall over Harvey Parker.

From the start the Beell-Piening bout was as lively as the Bothner-Parker bout was mild. The men were at it from the word go. Piening seemed to believe he could end the match in jig time and overbore the Wisconsin man with a rush, but Beell, though he went under at the start, was equal to the occasion, and extricated himself speedily and gained the upper hand. Several times the men were on their feet in the first fifteen minutes, and were thrown terrifically to the mat, to the delight of the crowd, with Beell generally more than holding his own. He markedly held the favor of the crowd.

Parker and Bothner met at 140 pounds.

In the closing minute each was very aggressive. Bothner showed great skill in evading dangerous holds, and Parker great persistency and ingenuity in his search for a decisive hold. When time was called Bothner was on the mat.

Referee O'Donnell announced Bothner as the winner on points. This was greeted with mingled cheers and groans, equally persistent, even Bothner's friends admitting there was little to choose between the men. So manifest was the disapproval of the crowd that Referee O'Donnell withdrew from further officiating.

Princeton's Caledonian Games.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 24.—Princeton track enthusiasts were treated to some surprises to-day in the thirty-fifth annual Caledonian games, which were won by the sophomores with a score of 50 points. The freshmen were next with 33 points. In the broad jump Simons, who won the intercollegiate last year and was the first one selected to represent Americans in the Grecian games, was defeated by Connors, '08, with a jump of 21 feet 6 inches; the 100-yard dash also proved a surprise when Gamble, '09, crossed the tape in 10 second flat; in the two-mile run Eisle made some record-breaking time, coming in with a brilliant dash at the end after 9:31¼. The judges scarcely believed the record at first, because of a heavy wind which must have impeded the runner, so when the measurements were taken it was found the starting point was 240 yards ahead of what it should have been. Even then Eisle's time was splendid under the weather conditions, and he will have another chance to try for the Princeton record in this event.

THE TARIFF IN TROUBLE.

Free trade seems to be, to some protectionists, as the Sunday school lad thought a lie was, "an abomination in the eyes of the Lord, and a very present help in time of trouble." One of the Senators and one of the Representatives from Illinois have proposed in their respective houses that the taxes on imported building materials be suspended when such materials are intended for use in the stricken City of San Francisco.

It is reported that some of the more cautious protectionists will oppose this proposition on the ground that it is bound to give rise to a general discussion of the tariff. For our part we should say that the proposition is so humane, its object is so obviously a worthy one, and the spirit that prompts it, coming as it does from sincere protectionists, so generous, that the Democrats might with propriety engage to forbear debate on the general question of the tariff and to unite in passing the measure with as near unanimity as possible. Yet we are bound to confess that this sentiment on our part is not so liberal as it may seem, for the suspension of these particularly oppressive and absurd taxes on the prime necessaries of life in the case of a great catastrophe is undoubtedly an object lesson in sound taxation that the people will not be slow to understand. The taxes are acknowledged, by this action, to be harsh in proportion to the neediness of those who have in the long run to pay them. There are many thousands who pay them in the form of rent to whom the burden is necessarily as heavy, or nearly as heavy, as it is to the victims of the earthquake and the fire in San Francisco. The tenants of the human hives on the east side, with no steady revenue, and with families to support, are logically and reasonably to be compared to the homeless San Franciscans, in the oppressiveness of taxes on building materials, and may as fairly ask the rich beneficiaries of the tax to remit it in their favor.

These are considerations that cannot be excluded from the public mind when the proposition of Senator CULLOM comes up for discussion. They are the inevitable suggestions of common sense in the presence of universally known facts. It is quite natural that the protectionists should feel perturbed at the thought of their presentation in debate. The situation is embarrassing and humiliating for them, and they may be expected to wish to avoid it if practicable. We sincerely trust that it will be made as easy for them as possible, and that all reasonable assurance will be given by the opposition leaders that general discussion will be shunned. The proposed action is wise and necessary. Let us help it along in every feasible fashion.

WE PRAISE THE GOVERNOR.

Gov. HIGGINS's aid in the cause of reforming mortgage taxation is not to be despised, and the City Club is well advised in welcoming the gentleman whose signature is necessary as an ally to garner where they sowed. There is no sort of use in quibbling whether or not the original bill was well drawn, and whether or not the Governor's criticisms were sincere or mere justifications of his own consistency. For aught we care the Governor may pose as the rescuer of the bill—as we think he will in years to come. The "bill's the thing," not the credit for it.

New Yorkers may perhaps have one or two local measures closer to their hearts, but taking the State through, we doubt whether there is another measure more interesting to more voters, or one upon which their minds are more clearly made up. The Legislature understands pretty well the views of those who elect their representatives and the Legislature has about faced in an impressive manner. The bill should be sent back to the Governor with all his objections obviated, and the quicker the better. Then if he has a fresh set of objections we shall have something different to say about him as an ally in the cause of mortgage tax reform. We think this is better policy than putting him in a hole by passing the bill over his veto and embarrassing the Republicans in the coming campaign. We have supported the bill as a measure of sound taxation. We supported it with its alleged faults—which we have not admitted at their proclaimed value—and we support it all the more in its improved form, which broadens its application, and includes the hypothetical tax dodgers under the first version. If the bill was good before it is better now, and we prefer to praise the Governor and lead him along to signature, rather than to antagonize him by ill-natured criticism. We did not think much of his veto, but we think a lot of his signature.

PARLOR SOCIALISTS.

We wonder who the parlor Socialists are who were denounced by Secretary TAFT at New Haven? His speech has a reminiscent sound to us. Like childhood's chimes, his remarks bring back to us something lingering in memory. Says the excellent Secretary:

> The right of property has played quite as important a part in development of the world as the right of personal liberty. The certainty that a man can enjoy what he produces or saves furnishes the chief inducement to economy and self-control. Without it we would alternate between starvation and plenty.

Here we are on firm ground. We recognize our own sentiments, and they are well put. It is another part of the New Haven speech which puzzles us. We wonder who are the "morbid thinkers among college graduates" in the Secretary's mind. Whom are we thinking of, whom does the Secretary recall to us as > a graduate of a university who is swayed only by his feelings and has developed into a parlor Socialist?

Not for worlds would we dissent from the Secretary's proposition that > all sane graduates will set their faces against foolish doctrines like the schemes of Socialistic committees to distribute private property.

That is all right. We have said so ourselves. It is singular that the words in another's mouth seem to recall something to us. We wonder if the Secretary's memory is equally poor? We wonder whether our readers are able to fill in any blanks, and say whom the cap fits, and who ought to wear it?

THE GUILT OF STANDARD OIL.

Commissioner GARFIELD has compiled a bomb which, according to the Washington correspondent of The Chicago Tribune, will presently be exploded under, in, or near the Standard Oil Company. The bomb is now at the White House awaiting the application of the spark that will set it off. The Chicago Tribune's correspondent is confident that it will "make an explosion that will astonish the country." Commissioner GARFIELD's inquiry into Standard affairs was made under the authority and command of a resolution of Congress. Chagrined by the way in which the country got the laugh on him over his Beef Trust report, Mr. GARFIELD, it appears, has dived very deep into Standard secrets, and has come up prepared to make disclosures that will cause that hardened octopus to writhe and groan.

Aside from the broad general crime of doing business on a large scale and making a great deal of money; aside, too, from the long list of atrocities committed in its usually successful attempts by cruel and inhuman methods to drive competitors off the face of the earth, the Standard Oil Company will be held up to the execration of the country in Mr. GARFIELD's report as a slayer of competition and a discourager of independent effort through the guilty cheapness of its own processes. Here is an instance: In the Kansas field crude oil is worth about 75 cents a barrel. Through its own pipe lines the Standard pumps the oil to Ohio or Indiana at the cost of a few cents a barrel. The independent refiner, however, must pay a heavy freight rate. Oil ready for refining, which costs the Standard 80 cents a barrel in Cleveland, for example, costs the independent refiner $1.40 a barrel.

The problem of finding a remedy that will exalt the independent refiner and bring the Standard to its knees is perhaps not so simple as it looks. The railroad rate must be inquired into, of course. When the Hepburn bill passes the Inter-State Commerce Commission will doubtless order considerable reductions. But can it, without passing the line of confiscation, order and establish rates low enough to annul the advantage over the independent refiner which cheap pipe-line transportation confers upon the Standard? Probably not. Mr. LODGE some time ago proposed an amendment to the Hepburn bill declaring pipe-line transportation of oil to be inter-State commerce and putting it under the control of the Inter-State Commission. The Commission would gain nothing by ordering the Standard to increase rates on its own pipe lines. That would affect only the bookkeeping, and would not touch the unholy profits. Nor would a joint resolution or Executive ukase fixing the price of crude oil in Indiana or Ohio at, say, 90 cents a barrel afford any relief. The independent men would be killed off and the Standard would go on just the same.

New England is another field where by means of the revolting cheapness of its pipe-line transportation the Standard makes the path of its independent competitors steep and rocky. Pipe lines bring its crude product from Ohio to New Jersey, where the petroleum is refined and then by tank steamers transported to Bridgeport or Providence, whence the collusive New Haven Railroad distributes the stuff to the trade. Here again the independent competitor must pay high freight charges, and Commissioner GARFIELD is said to have discovered that the New Haven Road refuses to make a joint rate on oil from Cleveland to New England points. Again the problem of the remedy recurs. It is not at all probable that equality of condition as between the Standard and its competitors can be established by freight rate reduction. The pauper labor of the pipe lines enables the octopus to grin defiance at competition and regulation.

Confiscation of the pipe lines or a Federal license or tax upon their operation would, of course, help out the independent oil men. But this plan is open to the objection that it would make the consumer howl. Every plan, every remedy suggested by experience or sanctioned by economic theory seems to be affected with futility, unconstitutionality, or impracticability. The foundation evil is the cheapness of pipe-line transportation. This is the cudgel with which the Standard beats out the brains of its rivals, this is the source of the power it heartlessly uses for the oppression of the people. For relief we must look for a new cure, some original and startling remedy. The ear of the country awaits the explosion of the Garfield bomb. Meanwhile the eyes of the people are fixed on the White House.

A RUSSIAN "CONSTITUTION."

The dispatches from St. Petersburg as to the approaching meeting of the Douma are, as they were bound to be, calculated to arouse conflicting feelings in the breasts of the friends of liberty and of the Russian people. On the one hand we have the information that the Czar has unexpectedly made up his mind that he will open the National Assembly in person. On the other hand we have word of serious restrictions on the Douma in the so-called "fundamental laws."

These restrictions are interpreted, and are probably intended, as strengthening the bureaucracy and limiting the effective influence of the people's representatives. The most important of them, as reported, is the reservation to the Senate of the right to announce laws and make them effective. The Senate is, in fact, merely an appointive body made up from the bureaucracy, and this power, if exercised as we have every reason to suppose that it will be, amounts in practice to a veto on all legislative action of the Douma. On the face of it it is a power of nullification. No Western nation would tolerate it for an instant. It is in substance the negation of the representative principle, for logically it can matter little what the Douma has the formal right to do if it cannot actually be done until an outside body has given its formal consent. Imagine for a moment what our own Congress would amount to if it were put in the hands of a lot of department heads and chiefs of bureaus to annul the action of the two houses.

But it is not safe to trust solely to logic in the interpretation of the situation in Russia. The significant fact, the fact that tells, is that the Czar is to present himself in person to open the sessions of a representative body, that he is to give to the assembling of that body all the solemnity his participation can give, that is to say, that he is to recognize in it an authority that resembles his own. This in substance is the first step in abdication. It is to all intents and purposes the admission of the possibility of surrender, the admission that there may be limits to autocracy. Now a limited autocracy is an absurdity. It makes no difference that the limitations are professedly self-imposed. There they are, and the Autocrat acknowledges them. And it must be recalled that in the body in which he recognizes this degree of authority, narrow as it is, there is a large majority openly demanding a much more radical advance, and the Czar knows it. Count WITTE has told him: "You may by surrendering a part save the remainder; if you will surrender nothing, nothing can be saved." That advice he has listened to. What will follow immediately no one can tell. But what is perfectly sure is that revolutions—and this is in effect a revolution—do not go backward.

EQUINE NIDIFICATION.

It must be admitted that some of the most vigilant and ingenious intellects at present going are in the service of the German press. No female of the equine genus can nidify anywhere within their purview without having her nest, be it never so carefully hidden, discovered by these acute investigators, and the eggs carried off to adorn the Museum of Berlin. The sole criticism one has to make is that possibly an accession of horse sense would diminish the finding of mares' nests.

Now the ever-watchful German press has discovered a smoldering mare's nest in the embers of San Francisco. We understand the Berlin Tageblatt and the Hamburger Nachrichten to have a respectable standing among the newspapers of Germany. The latter resents the action of the President in "the refusal of German aid." The former, waxing exceeding bold, lays it down that the action of the President is an extension of the Monroe Doctrine, and a "declaration of ethical independence of the Old World."

All this is very strange. Not the least strange part of it is the ignoring that it is not only "German aid" but all foreign aid that the President has declined, with thanks and most politely. He has declined it upon the simple and sufficient ground that the calamity, great as it is, is not beyond the American power of alleviation, so far as it can be alleviated by money. The American subscriptions, fast nearing twenty millions, fully bear out this view. And undoubtedly, in this matter, the President represents the American people. If we were not able to cope with the disaster ourselves, we would most willingly and gratefully accept foreign aid, "German" or other. But we are.

The case is like that of a farmer with a large farm and a large family, one of whose barns has been burned out, and whose neighbors come trooping in with friendly offers of assistance. His natural impulse would be to tell them, if the facts justified him in telling them, that he was very much obliged to them, but that the family was quite able to do whatever could and should be done. It would not occur to him that any one of them could take such an assurance in bad part, least of all that one of them would seize the occasion to declare his belief that a mare was even then hatching her brood in the ruins of the barn.

If the Aldermen are well advised they will not take an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States from the decision of the Court of Appeals sustaining the act transferring their power to grant franchises to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. The Supreme Court is addicted to the habit of recognizing the authority and the competence of the State courts in deciding questions of State Constitutionality.

The densest district of Manhattan has under 720 per acre, the densest block 1,200. The "10,000 per acre" of excitatious imagination would compress the whole human race within the limits of New York, for 10,000 multiplied by 209,218 equals 2,092,180,000.—Federation for April.

The earth's population is estimated to be 1,487,900,000, which is 29 to the square mile. Were New York as thickly populated as the district on the east side numbering about 730 to the acre the city would hold 152,729,140 inhabitants, or nearly twice the population of the United States. If the whole area of Greater New York were peopled as densely as the section south of Fourteenth Street and east of Broadway the city would comprise 90,549,610 inhabitants.

We presume that the words "Copyright, 1900," appearing upon one of the pictures of the San Francisco fire printed by an enterprising contemporary yesterday applied only to the picture as it originally was, a photograph of San Francisco from the harbor, and not to the voluminous columns of smoke ingeniously added in New York day before yesterday. But why was the phrase "Copyright, 1900" absent from the picture as it appeared in later editions? Did our contemporary mean to surrender its precious rights for the general weal?

It is regrettable that among the many other thrilling pictures of the San Francisco fire printed by the same newspaper there should have been included by mistake pictures of the Baltimore fire of 1904. That, we fear, may occasion unjust suspicions as to the genuineness of our contemporary's enterprise.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Coggeshall's Bill and Cassidy's. Gov. HIGGINS has done well in vetoing the abominable Coggeshall bill, by which the race track managers, acting through their friends in the Senate and Assembly, hoped to buy the perpetuation of their gambling monopoly by giving to the county fairs an increased percentage of the profits. The Governor has done even better, or at least he has much emphasized the excellence of his act, by accompanying his veto with a very clearly expressed statement of his reasons for not carrying out the wretched bargain that had been arranged. Everybody, clerical or layman, voter or politician, who has had anything to do with the drawing or the passing of the Coggeshall bill should read the message with care, in order that he may know exactly what he tried to do and be ashamed of it. The Governor points out that the present immunity of the race track gamblers has been purchased; that it never would have been permitted if the conscience of "up the State" had not been quieted by the distribution of a few hundred thousand dollars, and that this sort of barter is utterly offensive to good citizens and honest men. As he puts it, "If the present tax were expended for general purposes the moral sense of the community would scarcely tolerate race track gambling, but the largess of a quarter of a million dollars, distributed annually among agricultural fairs throughout the State, has created a selfish and unnatural community of interest which is to be deplored." The Governor suggests that the State can better afford direct appropriations for the support of the agricultural societies than to perpetuate this form of gambling by continuing or increasing the revenues of the societies from such a source. That is true, but it is not to say that these societies, more than others, should be supported at the public expense. The thing for Gov. HIGGINS to do now is bring the Cassidy bill back to life by a special message and to exert such legitimate influence as he possesses to secure its passage. Possibly, by this time, he would have the support of some whose belief in the beauties of "sterilized betting" was so amazingly great. Even Dr. SLICER might be brought around after a while, and, if he were not, it is almost certain that his associates in the "Conference of Religion" would not again allow the name of their organization to be used—or misused—as it was in the first fight against the Cassidy bill.

"Force of Life" Vindicated! United States Commissioner RIDGWAY's decision in the "Force of Life" case is quite the most—well, call it "remarkable"—pronouncement of a judicial nature that has come to our attention for many a year, and we wait with eager impatience to hear how it will be received by the members of the medical profession and by such laymen as are even a little enlightened as to the methods and consequences of such "treatment" as Mr. RIDGWAY praises so highly. "The mail-order medical business," according to him, brings the patient more directly within the control of the prescribing physician than would usually be the case, especially so in instances where the patient has not specialists at his command, and all at an expense the ordinary person can meet. We learn, too, from this new light of medical science, that beyond doubt this kind of doctoring is a "benign influence" in the community. The Commissioner knows personally of patients who, after the doctors had given them up, were cured permanently by "so-called patent medicines." Furthermore, he held that there was nothing to prevent anybody from accepting and employing such method of medical treatment as most appealed to him or her; that there was nothing to show that the "Force of Life" Company had employed fraudulent or deceptive means in the conduct of its business, and that on the contrary the testimony of such of the company's patients as was offered in evidence showed that they were pleased with the treatment received. What has the able and energetic counsel of the County Medical Society to say to all this, and especially to the reference to the evidence that was presented for the Commissioner's consideration? Of course Mr. RIDGWAY's general statements as to the nature of medical practice, licit and illicit, are all absolutely and grotesquely false. If no proof of fraud or deceit on the part of the Force of Lifers was offered him, he could do nothing except to say so, and if there was no such proof, we are glad that he did say it, but in that case what becomes of all the stories supplied to THE TIMES and other trusting newspapers when this company was first dragged from its virtuous obscurity by the County Medical Society? If there was nothing fraudulent or deceptive in the "Force of Life" business, then Mr. CHAMPE S. ANDREWS and his detectives will have a lot of explaining to do, and Gen. O'BEIRNE and the politicians and capitalists associated with him were the victims of most cruel calumny. We have our own opinion, and a strong one, as to where the wrong lies and as to the quality of Commissioner RIDGWAY's decision, but we prefer, for rather obvious reasons, to defer the expression of it until after a few other people have spoken. Certainly, however, justice has not had her last word in this case yet.

Right Man and Right Place. Everybody who has had an opportunity to observe, or a right to judge, the work done by Gen. FUNSTON in San Francisco credits him with energy and competence. Suddenly confronted with a difficult and dangerous task, he seems to have risen promptly to all its necessities. As might have been expected from his training and record, he assumed the initiative without waiting for orders, ruthlessly slashed away all red tape that interfered with the giving of instant relief, and trusted boldly to his own judgment, without a thought of the weighty responsibilities he was taking on his shoulders. Apparently the judgment was good. All his acts have been approved by his military superiors, and probably Mr. E. H. HARRIMAN—a man not easily deceived in the valuation of efficiency or likely to use compliments without meaning—expressed the local civilian opinion when he said that "it was fortunate that a Government post was located here, and especially so that it was in charge of Gen. FUNSTON." And this is the officer who was so savagely denounced for the means he adopted for the capture of AGUINALDO, whose other achievements in the Philippines were called the wild imaginings of a press agent, and whose rapid advancement created so much jealousy. His success does not prove that the volunteer is better than, or even as good as, the regular, always or even often, but it does illustrate the admirable American habit of developing a competent man wherever there is a pressing need of one.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—As Elliott Woods, the Superintendent of the Capitol, was walking with "Uncle Joe" Cannon from the street cars to the Capitol this morning, Mr. Woods noticed several pairs of crows that were building their nests up in the carvings of the columns around the dome.

He pointed them out to "Uncle Joe" and remarked: "I think those crows are getting too familiar. I will send a man up there and drive them out."

"Oh, no, let them alone," said the Speaker, gazing interestedly at the noisy intruders that were cawing to one another. "We must concede something to our Democratic brethren."

In a short time ex-Senator W. A. Peffer of Kansas will be able to pose as the only man who ever read The Congressional Record index all through. Peffer was a Populist and wore the longest beard ever seen in Washington, and it gave rise to the popular idea of Populists as persons who all wore long whiskers—a highly erroneous idea.

When he retired from the Senate in 1895 his former colleagues employed him to compile a summary of the Congressional Record from its beginning, classified by topics. Peffer has been at work ever since, and announced the other day that he had got down as far as 1897. He says he will finish the work in this Congress.

Van Cortlandt Golf Course Neglected.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit an appeal through your valuable paper to the Commissioner of the Bronx for more attention to the golf course at Van Cortlandt Park. On Saturday last golfers were of one opinion—that the course was in deplorable condition. The "fair green" bears the appearance of having been "rooted" over by hogs. This could be overcome by the use of a steam roller. Again, the Superintendent has a number of aged men employed, who spend much of their time in twos resting on the handles of hand rollers. If these relics were replaced with husky fellows, who were required to give the city a full day's work, the links at Van Cortlandt could be kept in splendid condition at much less expense than it is now costing the city. Busybody Answered.

The Nora Springs (Iowa) Advertiser recently published an article in which it was stated that "somebody who was too lazy to move was neglecting his horse and permitting the animal to go without food and water." The writer recommended that a humane society be organized to look after the case, and the following reply is now published in the southeast corner of The Advertiser:

AN ANSWER.

First A Humane society should be someone that can tell the truth and not a Liar. This smiling faced busybody who has nothing more to do then hung around street corners and tell Lies about his neighbors affairs. And who has not even the care of a cat and wouldent have one around his premises. This Animal and Fowl hater has been seen sneeking like a snake in the grass behind his wood pile on his knees a throwing over his fence at his neighbors chickens in the street.

We Animal and Poultry keepers of Nora Springs wouldent enjoy any thing more han to face some Lieings called Humane societst in what he has to say.

So organize at once We waunt your personal remarks. NORA SPRINGS CITIZEN.

A Comparison.

From The Boston Herald.

It is something of a relief to find Senator La Follette allowing that the United States Supreme Court remains as unsullied and ideal today as when created by the Constitution. It is so different from some of the current talk from higher up.

EMERGENCY WATER SUPPLY.

Plan for Averting a Fire Horror Like San Francisco's.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The destruction of the great Western city by earthquake and then fire makes me believe there is a plan by which we can avoid such a catastrophe. Any city having a water front ought to be saved from fire by use of its great water supply even if its water main be broken. There is a possibility of trouble at any time of a broken water main caused by deterioration or explosion or an insufficient supply of water at the time most needed, which in either case would mean the fate of a city, if a fire had gained any headway.

Fire boats could be used to pump the water with large pumps through pipe laid along the streets and connected up to the point where the fire engines are stationed to help force the water to the fire.

Sections of pipe in 8 or 10 feet lengths, made of light steel, would be attached to a 10-inch flexible hose on the hydrants aboard the fire boats. A 20-inch volume from two 10-inch openings would be sufficient for the purpose.

When not in use these lengths would be stored along the docks under cover in number, 500 to a shed, and at different parts near the centre of the city. At each place a hand wagon should be ready for use. In case of emergency they would be easily conveyed to places where they are to be run.

These sections would have flanges with rubber washers and slip bolts attached, so that they could be readily joined and so furnish the city with an independent supply of water.

This system is practical and could be made to work to perfection.

Rebuilding San Francisco.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You very properly say in this morning's issue of THE TIMES concerning the plan to use steel and cement in rebuilding San Francisco, that "the question of cost" is in the way.

When the Chicago and Portland fires had done their dreadful havoc, Congress, if I remember rightly, decreed a gap in the tariff on all building materials that should go to the rebuilding of those cities. This made, or would have made, a vast difference in the expense that was to be incurred.

In spite of the hornets' nest that a proposition to dispose of unnecessary cost, in this way, would precipitate in Washington, why is it not sensible and sane? The California earthquake has certainly knocked out a world of values, and if it can, as a sequel to this, knock, even temporarily, a hole in our mountainous tariff, there would be some small reparation made for its disasters.

Ship Construction the Model.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the reconstruction of San Francisco the construction of modern steamships supply much of the style and method that should be adopted: Beams, frames, stringers, and decks of steel, and plated outside—without masonry—only the intersections being filled with cement.

No structure experiences the cross strains imposed upon ships, and none is more securely fireproof. J. E. McCONNELL.

Clothing for San Francisco.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Might I make the suggestion that if stores and manufactories of women's and men's clothing of all kinds would send them to be distributed to the San Francisco sufferers rather than cash contributions they would be doing real good?

There must be many manufacturers of garments who would contribute in this way.

Duty of the Insurance Superintendent.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It may be safely assumed that the Superintendent of Insurance of New York State will take measures to protect the interests of property owners at once by preventing companies that are really bankrupt by reason of the San Francisco conflagration from securing new business. The chances are that the Superintendent, whose powers are absolute in matters of this kind, will require each company to make a sworn statement of its gross liability in what is known as the burned district, the boundaries being given, with further information as to the amount of reinsurance, with a list of the companies in which such reinsurance is placed, and after that an estimate as to the probable loss that the company in question will have, gross and net.

Function of the "Muck-Rake" Man.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The man with the "muck-rake," in stirring up and exposing to the light of day the evils and corruptions of our business and National life, is doing a necessary work appropriate to the spirit of the times, and he has only just begun. Before he gets through there will be something doing in our United States.

In exposing evil and corruption in high places idol worship is abolished and the Truth is more clearly revealed. The man who does this is a more useful member of society than the man with the "big stick," who would suppress and cover it up. OBSERVER.

Mutual Life's Affairs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having been so concerned with the San Francisco calamity we have rather lost track of the affairs of the Mutual Life. Are the McCurdy Trustees out, as demanded by the English policy holders at their January meeting? Have they ascertained why the Finance Committee paid the President $150,000 salary, and why they replaced the competent and upright head of the legal department by the late head council, during whose administration the questionable methods were introduced? Have they ascertained the profits of the Finance Committee from the use of the Mutual's funds?

American Example for the Chinese.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an editorial paragraph this morning you say: "The Chinese do not come here to trade with each other, but to make money out of us." What a pity these poor, ignorant heathen do not profit by the examples of the philanthropic American who goes to China, not to make money or increase his trade—dear me, no!—but to benefit the unfortunate people there. Of course America gains nothing by trade with China. That is the reason no alarm was felt over the recent boycott movement.

Gambling Places in Full Swing?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is it that gambling places are doing business in the City of New York unmolested, although with the full knowledge of the police?

Why is it that the police have "received" word not to touch these places, although three weeks ago they were engaged in obtaining evidence against them?

Why do these men, (the "plain clothes" men,) when told of this condition, shrug their shoulders and state that they dare not act?

Some Errors in a Poem.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I correct briefly two errors made in printing in yesterday's TIMES my sonnet "San Francisco—April, 1906"? The word "mine" (1.8) should have been "ruin"; the word "carnal" (1.7) should have been "casual." While this is a matter of no importance to a busy world, and while the errors were, I suspect, due to my unhappy penmanship, still it would gratify me very much to have you print this note of correction. THE MAURICE FAMILY.

A Record of Benefactions and Good Works That is Unknown.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A paragraph relative to the sale of land for the sum of $300,000, given to the Diocese of Long Island some years ago, as you say, by "a man named Maurice," that appeared some days ago in your columns attracted my attention.

This "man named Maurice" was many years ago an honored Senator of the State of New York, when Christian gentlemen were well in evidence in that body. The family were friends and near neighbors of the great Gov. De Witt Clinton, whose mansion at Maspeth yet stands, but in ruinous state. The Maurice family has served God in its generations, always devout and loyal members of the Episcopal Church. Their home was for many years "an open house" for the great of the land, and many distinguished prelates and dignitaries have in the past enjoyed the unstinted hospitality and gifts of this family.

The two surviving sisters, now octogenarians, after giving over years and privately of their substance to the Church, her missions and charities, North, South, East, and West, with princely liberality, until doubtless barely enough is left for their existence, (and no doubt all of that has been designated,) are passing their remaining days in great privacy and simplicity—the "simple life" indeed—until they may be called to their eternal home, yet constantly and judiciously distributing any surplus that may remain.

The diocesan house upon Remsen Street, Brooklyn, when opened several years ago, had its chapter room furnished by these ladies with fine old mahogany furniture taken from their home. St. Saviour's Church, Maspeth, the design of the elder Upjohn, consecrated many years ago by their friend, the great Bishop Wittingham, and its parochial school were built and endowed by the Maurice family. Of their benefactions and good deeds upon every hand, made without ostentation, and in fact hidden under a bushel, the public should at least know of at this time, for they may never upon this earth be known otherwise.

The Morals of the Stage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The remarks of Mr. Bronson Howard at the "Actor's Church Alliance" in your issue of to-day gives me great pleasure, and ought to give those of us who are not actors something to think about.

The idea that all who adopt the stage as a profession and as a means of living, or a majority of them, are unusually immoral in one way or another, is preposterous, but the way to correct this state of things, if it existed, is by "social recognition," when posible, and not by ostracism.

> "Honor and shame from no condition rise;
> Act well your part; there all the honor lies."

In my estimation, there is far more demoralization in bridge whist and horse racing, as they are played, than in any performance any manager would dare to put upon the stage in this city, if not in this country.

Niagara Falls for Use and Beauty.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In regard to Niagara Falls and the question of its use for water power. Is it not true that the falls are receding toward Lake Erie at quite a rapid rate, and that the time is quite measurable when they will cease to exist, and that should they meet with a change in the rock formation that catastrophe may be much hastened?

Would it not be possible to permit the use of the falls as a source of power for six days, and forbid such use on Sunday, thus restoring them to their full size on that day, while permitting their use to the fullest extent on the days during which only labor should be done?

The result would be to retain the falls in their present grandeur much longer than would otherwise be the case, and to permit the fullest use of the water as a source of power.

The Presidential Temper.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I agree entirely with the temperate and well-timed comments of "Observer" (printed in your issue of this date) on the Presidential attitude and temper.

By way of commentary, I beg to call attention to the headline, so often seen in the newspapers, of: "The President Misrepresented" or "The President Misrepresented Again." Things have come to such a point that no one cares to report any conversation had with the President, as a sharp contradiction may be expected nearly always to follow. It reminds me of the lines of Pope:

> "You call me proud. Yes, I am proud to see > Men not afraid of God—afraid of me!"

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have never kept a close run of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, but I believe some laws have been declared unconstitutional, and the court was not rebuked or censured by the Chief Magistrate of the Nation and sustained by the people.

Congress may now pass an act to explain a law to make the intention of Congress clear, which leads us to rejoice that the Supreme Court "still lives" and may be trusted to decide justly without fear of rebuke or censure any law that is or may be passed by Congress which may come before the court for its decision. Against Dynamite.

From The Washington Star.

San Francisco's remarkable plight, with a great fire devouring block after block and the water mains broken and the Fire Department useless, afforded the best test to which the use of dynamite could be put as a means of checking the advance of the conflagration. Judging from all the reports the explosions did practically no good, and some fire-fighting experts are of the opinion that the demolition of sound buildings facilitated rather than checked the progress of the flames. One of these is Chief Engineer Horton of Baltimore, whose experience in fighting the great fire in that city two years ago gives weight to his words.

Different.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Maxim Gorky sneered, all the more bitterly because there were few to observe it.

"Here you Americans," he said, "found me a bigamist in an hour, and it has taken you three years to find that you can't find whether one of your Senators is a bigamist or not."

Then he absorbed such solace as there was in a gallon of tea.

EARTHQUAKE.

Enormous, foul in venom-brewing sleep
The Midgard Serpent rings the rolling earth;
Unsounded Ocean hides his mighty girth;
Through hollow caves where gloomy rivers leap
His scaly lengths are drawn. The ranges steep
Stand rooted o'er him; gardens, plains of dearth
And cities rich in action, passion, mirth
Of men, have place above him. Brooding deep,
Anon the Serpent dreams of heavy ills—
Of Earth's last dawn—the war on Vigrid's plain
Where Thor shall slay him, writhing. Over all
The swollen coils a fearful shudder thrills;
Then Earth, too, shudders; mountains rend in twain,
And massy walls and towers crashing fall.

MRS. FISKE CHARMING IN CHARMING SHORT PLAY

John Luther Long's "Dolce" Produced at the Manhattan.

AN AFTERNOON OF ACTING

Mr. Arliss, Mr. Mason, and Miss Ellscu in Admirably Sustained Studies of Character.

Dolce, Contessa di Cassall.........Mrs. Fiske
Shandon.........John Mason
Servant.........Charles Terry

Mrs. Fiske, reverting to a very agreeable former method, was seen for the first time at the Manhattan Theatre yesterday afternoon in John Luther Long's "Dolce," a one-act play, printed in one of the magazines some years ago, but not hitherto acted. In "Dolce" the old, old story of the fairy princess and her lover—a story beginning this time in the Little Italy of Philadelphia and ending in a studio in Florence—is again told, gracefully, appealingly, and with a surprising quality of fresh and piquant charm.

Author and players conjoined to make "Dolce" a delight, for Mr. Long has contrived to present his little tale in simple but natural dramatic form, and Mrs. Fiske and Mr. Mason filling in the outlines with feeling, understanding, and imagination, give to the figures a gratifying semblance of reality. It has, in fact, been a long time since Mrs. Fiske played anything so well as she does the Countess di Cassall, in childhood a runaway from her Italian home, a street singer; then the comrade and sweetheart of Shandon, the struggling American painter, who is ever thereafter to hold her in loyal and loving remembrance.

Now—when the play opens—Shandon has a studio in Florence, where the Countess is his visitor, conscious of his identity, but not yet ready to reveal to him the fact that she was the little girl of his early struggling days. For she, too, has been loyal to her first love, and only seeks the assurance that her faith has not been misplaced. Has he married in the meantime, this artist; has he children, or does his heart still yearn for the little girl who sang and played the tambourine, who danced for him and posed for him, and shared his poverty, his sorrow, and his joy? Now and again quick womanly intuition gives her the answer she is seeking, again there comes a doubt.

The night before he had begun to tell her the story of the early studio days—she will hear the story finished now—he must repeat it all. Finally, he consents. She was a runaway Princess, and one day the people from her far-off home came and dragged her back. Once a year he has had a letter from her, first in childish scrawl, then in the hand of fashion. But he has never been able to find her. And he had gone on loving and hoping and waiting for fifteen years.

Well, what then? Is there an end to the story? She is all impatience. If there is he does not know it, so the Countess must finish it for him.

And the end finds this pair of reunited lovers in each other's arms.

Not since the days when she used to play Cyrienne so charmingly has Mrs. Fiske acted with such spirit, such variety, vivacity, and apparent spontaneity as in this. In character her Dolce is buoyant, graceful, easy, full of changeful moods, reflected surely and unmistakably in face and voice and action.

And in Mr. Mason the actress has the capable and sustained co-operation of a sincere and sympathetic artist.

To fill out the afternoon Mrs. Fiske's two excellent little plays, both tolerably familiar, were given. In "The Eyes of the Heart" Mr. Arliss repeated his superb performance of Monsieur d'Ancelot, the little old grandfather whose sight and understanding are from within now that the daylight has faded from his eyes. It is a complete and satisfying study in character, a miniature full of interesting and engrossing detail. Miss Emily Stevens of the supporting players, was most worthy of a word of commendation.

The final play, "A Light from St. Agnes," again afforded opportunity for the vigorous, colorful acting of Mr. Mason, Miss Ellscu, and Mr. Mack.

It was in fact an afternoon of varied and sustained excellence in acting, such acting as one does not get too often.

BENDER LOSES HIS CASE.

Civil Service Commission May Investigate Political Contributions.

ALBANY, April 24.—The Court of Appeals to-day affirmed the decisions of the lower courts denying the application of State Fiscal Supervisior of Charities Harry H. Bender for a writ of prohibition to restrain the State Civil Service Commission from investigating the alleged solicitation of political contributions in his district.

The charges were preferred to the commission by the Civil Service Reform Association.

"BIG" FELTON ARRAIGNED.

Man Who Shot Guy Roach Charged with Running a Gambling House.

"Big" Frank Felton, the gambler who was alleged to have killed Guy Roach in 1904, but was never tried, was arraigned before Justice Wyatt of Special Sessions yesterday on a charge of keeping a gambling house in West Thirty-fourth Street. The place was raided on Monday night by the police of the Tenderloin Station.

The complaining witness in the case is James Finn, a Brooklyn salesman, who says that he lost $1,500 in Felton's place on a "brace" faro game. The warrant against Felton was sworn out by Assistant District Attorney Corrigan and handed to Capt. Hodgins for service. Both Felton and Michael McGue, who had been arraigned on a similar charge, were held in $500 for examination on May 2.

COAL MARKET EASIER.

Opening of Anthracite Washeries Affects It—No Strike Change.

The opening of the washeries at the collieries of the anthracite coal companies resulted yesterday in an easier market for the smaller sizes of steam coal. There was no change in the prices of pea coal or the larger sizes of buckwheat, but Buckwheat No. 3 dropped 10 and 15 cents a ton, and was more plentiful than it has been for many weeks.

The usual Tuesday conference took place yesterday in the Jersey Central Building between President George F. Baer and the other anthracite Presidents. It was stated that the conference was informal, and that nothing of a decisive character will be done until President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers declares a strike or accepts the terms of the operators. The latter will not, however, wait indefinitely for Mitchell.

J., April 24.—Fifty miners at work in the Richard Mines, near Rockaway, narrowly escaped death this noon when tons of surface dirt and hanging wall in Shaft No. 1 caved in, destroying a large section of track and several pumps. WALLACE TO HEAD COMPANY.

Former Panama Chief Engineer Will Be President of New Concern.

The new corporation will take over all the stock of Westinghouse, Church, Kerr & Co., and, desides conducting a general engineering and construction business through that concern will operate as a holding company for the securities of electrical enterprises.

The organizers of the new corporation refuse to make public as yet the details of their plan. It is known that Kean, Van Cortlandt & Co. represent a large interest in its financial backing, and, according to a statement given out at the office of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson yesterday afternoon, the Westinghouse interests will not retain a majority of the stock.

"An Immigrant Party" last night in the Chamber Music Room of Carnegie Hall was one of the novelties that attracted society. It had been arranged by Miss Constable, Miss Frances Hoppin, Mrs. Richard Worsam Meade, Mrs. Francis L. Pruyn, Miss Anne Hyde Clarke, and the Messrs. William F. Beekman, Edward Rush Duer, Langdon Geer, Frederick S. Hoppin, Jr., Harold I. Imbrie, Arthur C. Nash, and Guy Van Amringe, for the benefit of the West Side Juvenile Club. The affair was on the order of the famous Mi-Careme parties that Miss Constable and her brother Howard Constable gave when they had a studio in East Sixteenth Street. There were bridge tables for those so minded, smoking allowed, and the affair was as jolly as could be. Some went as Tyrolean milkmaids, beggars, Russian refugees, Italian street diggers, Irish immigrants, and otherwise. There was a Spanish dance by one of the women who assisted in getting up the affair, and a number of other attractive stunts. Among the patronesses, in addition to those named above, and most of whom were present, were Mesdames W. M. Benjamin, Thatcher Adams, E. O. Anderson, Charles de Rham, Jr., Alfred Ely, W. Among the passengers sailing on the White Star Line Oceanic to-day will be Miss Dorothy Payne Whitney, daughter of the late William C. Whitney, and Mrs. and Miss Bend.

WOMEN REPUBLICANS TO STUDY SOCIALISM

As Preliminary Mrs. Flint Wants Maxim Gorky Deported.

DIVORCE LAW CONSIDERED

Members of Association Promise to Write 175 Letters to Senator Dolliver on the Subject.

The Woman's State Republican Association decided at its annual convention at Delmonico's yesterday to take up the study of Socialism, and one of its members proposed that the club take action to have Maxim Gorky deported. This was Mrs. R. M. Flint.

"Should not we as women take some action against this man?" she asked. "People of such character should not be allowed in this country. Of course when he arrived it was not known how he was living, but he came here and expected to be received, and I think he should be deported. Gorky is the embodiment of Socialism."

Other members spoke on similar lines, but no action was taken.

The club appointed a committee to consider a subject for study, and after some discussion it was decided not to use the word Socialism. This was the subject that was finally adopted:

"The study of Republicanism and the dangerous encroachments of other parties."

In the discussion which led up to this, it was practically agreed that party differences were at the present time largely wiped away with the exception of those of the Socialistic Party, with which, Miss Helen Varick Boswell said, the Republicans would have to cope, particularly in the labor field. Apropos of a motion to be sent to the President, when he forms a committee to consider the uniform divorce laws, to which the association wishes to have women appointed, Mrs. Cornelia Robinson said:

"When the question of uniform divorce law is taken up, we shall find that the Socialists are against it as a body. It is not that they are opposed to divorce, but they do not believe in marriage."

The Rev. Charles T. Snow of the Baptist Church, Brooklyn; Robert Erskine Ely, Dr. Samuel McCune Lindsay, Secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, and James Henry Hicky, were the speakers. Prof. Ely condoned his excessive use of statistics by telling the story of a small Boston girl. The little maiden was alone in the street car.

"Do you pay full or half fare, little girl?" asked the conductor kindly. "How old are you?" The small Bostonian drew herself up haughtily.

"I will pay full fare," she said in icy tones, "and keep my statistics to myself."

Mr. Ely said things about the "bad-good citizen whom we have to wrestle with."

"The man ho goes off to play golf on Election Day should be ostracized," he said, "and I would almost say that the women friends who encourage him to do it should be treated in the same way."

Dr. Lindsay urged the Republican women to write letters to Senator Dolliver asking him to work for the passage of the child labor bills.

"Letters do a great deal of good," he said. "I remember one man in Pennsylvania who was the most difficult person I ever had to tackle. I stayed with him day and night almost, and he would talk amiably of everything in creation but my bill. Finally he asked one day:

"'Is this bill of yours the one in which Miss So-and-So of Pittsburg is interested?' When I answered in the affirmative he said:

"'Well, she has been writing me a letter every day this session, and I want that bill put through in a hurry.'

"I know Senator Dolliver very well," said Mrs. R. C. Benedict. "He is interested in women's work and will be glad to do all he can."

Then the 175 women of the association promised to write 175 letters to Senator Dolliver, and disbanded after singing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." They listened to frivolous music of the ragtime brand while luncheon was served.

ELEVATOR KILLS A WOMAN.

She Tried to Leave a Moving Car and Was Crushed.

Mrs. Margaret Bitard, wife of Leonize Bitard, a tailor of 18 Brown Place, the Bronx, was instantly killed by an elevator in the St. James Building, 1,133 Broadway, yesterday afternoon. She had called at the office of the New York Central Realty Company to pay off one of the last installments on some land which she had purchased on French Avenue, Tarrytown.

The realty office is on the seventh floor. On the fourth floor the elevator man, John Stone, stopped the car to take on a messenger boy. Mrs. Bitard, evidently thinking that the ground floor had been reached, made a quick step forward to leave the car just as the boy got on. As she was behind the elevator man he did not see her move, and before he could bring the car to a stop she had been crushed to death, the descending car having struck her head. Stone was arrested.

MUTUAL BOARD MEETS TO-DAY

But the Truesdale Report Won't Be Made Until Next Week.

The Truesdale investigating committee of Mutual Life Trustees will make no report to the meeting of the board to-day, and that session will probably be confined to routine business. The final report of the committee, which is now in process of preparation, will go to the board at a special meeting to be held next week, in all probability.

The work of stripping the costly Hanover Bank Building offices of the New York Life is now under way, the plan being to take the financial department of that company up to the home office at 346 Broadway.

MISS VER PLANCK WINS CUP.

Successful in Ladies' Handicap at the Fencers' Club.

Miss Virginia ver Planck won the silver cup given by Miss Margaret Stimpson yesterday as a prize in the handicap competition at the ladies' annual tea of the Fencers' Club, in the Windsor Arcade.

Of the fifteen bouts fenced three were won by Miss Mildred Dick, three by Miss Rosalie Jones, two each by Miss Betty Collamore and Mrs. Theodore Irwin, who is comparatively a beginner; one by Miss Enid Alden, and four by Miss ver Planck. Miss Jones, being the only senior in the competition, was required to give a handicap of three touches to Mrs. Irwin and two to her other opponents. To Mrs. Irwin was granted one point in each bout. Each contestant was required to fence with every one competing.

For quickness and form the best fencing done was in the last bout, which took place between Miss Dick and Miss ver Planck. The competition was preceded by a salute between Mrs. George Ethridge and Miss Stimpson, two of the club's best women fencers.

Carroll Beckwith, the President, presided, and the judges were Charles Tatham, J. Albert Hawkins, and Marshall Kernochan.

The function proved a tea in name only, for that beverage was not included in the refreshments served by Mrs. Ethridge and Miss Stimpson at the conclusion of the programme. Nobody missed it.

MRS. HOWARD GOULD SUED BY AN ARTIST

H. J. Thaddeus Demands $5,000 for Painting Her Portrait.

SHE DECLINES TO PAY IT

Says She Intended to Surprise Her Husband with Her Portrait, but the Artist Told Him of It.

Mrs. Howard Gould is being sued in the Supreme Court by Henry Jones Thaddeus, a portrait painter, for $5,000, the alleged value of a portrait of Mrs. Gould, painted by him at her request. Mrs. Gould refused to accept the portrait.

The case was called for trial before Justice Greenbaum yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Gould are in Europe, and Howe & Hummel, representing the defendant, asked for an adjournment for that reason, declaring that Mrs. Gould's testimony was indispensable. John H. Corwin appeared for Mr. Thaddeus. He said that his client had come from Wales at considerable expense to press the suit, and that he was opposed to an adjournment. Justice Greenbaum denied the motion for an adjournment and marked the case ready for trial.

The complaint sworn to by the portrait painter sets forth that he made a contract with Mrs. Gould to paint a full-length portrait of her. She agreed, he declares, to give him the necessary number of sittings. He adds that she did not keep all her appointments. The picture was finished, however, but she would not accept it or pay for it.

Mrs. Gould's answer to the complaint is on file. She says that she is not well enough versed in art to enable her to judge whether or not Thaddeus is an artist or a portrait painter. She does not deny that the idea of having her portrait painted originated with her. She says that it was her intention to have the picture made and give it to her husband as a surprise. Thaddeus, she says, called on her, and she engaged him to do the work.

One reason, she declares, why she refused to accept the finished product was that Thaddeus was not to tell any one that he was painting the picture, in order that she might carry out her plan of surprising her husband with the gift. Instead of maintaining secrecy, she avers, he told several people, and finally revealed the secret to Mr. Gould himself.

Mrs. Gould adds that the gown she wore was different from the one shown in the picture. She finally disposes of the matter by saying that she does not consider the picture a portrait of her at all.

LATEST THING IN BURGLARY.

Police Looking Into a Weird Story Told by a Newark Hat Clerk.

The police of Newark are investigating a burglar story told this afternoon by Richard Fairchild, a clerk in the Carlson hat store, at 192 Market Street, which for the many mysterious circumstances which surround it surpasses anything of the kind they have ever had brought to their attention.

When Robert C. Clark, the manager of the store, came to business yesterday morning, he found the place filled with gas and the cash drawer minus $55. The clerk did not show up at his usual hour and the day passed with many anxious inquiries for him. In the afternoon mysterious sounds were heard in the store. They were first feeble thumpings and then more pronounced thumpings. Investigation showed that the noise came from a large hat drawer under the showcase. This was pulled open and the missing clerk was found doubled up in it. He was dragged to the fresh air.

When Fairchild had recovered he said that last night a tall, broad-shouldered man entered the place and demanded what money there was in the drawer. Fairchild and the robber grappled and the big man subdued the clerk.

"Then," said Fairchild, "the man dragged me to the back of the store, grabbed the gaspipe from the stove, forced one end of it in my mouth, and turned on the gas. I lost consciousness and knew nothing until I came to in the hat drawer."

There was some one in the store all day Monday, and it is not considered probable that Fairchild could have got into the drawer without being seen. While he was telling his story his father entered the store to inquire about him. He was sent home and the story was referred to the police.

FUNERAL OF GEN. McMAHON.

Many Prominent Men Present at the Services in St. Francis Xavier's.

The funeral of Gen. Martin T. McMahon, Judge of General Sessions, was held yesterday morning in the Church of St. Francis Xavier. Many men prominent in public life were present.

The church was draped in black for the occasion. On top of the coffin, in which the body lay dressed in the full uniform of a Brigadier General of the United States Army, lay the jeweled sword presented to Gen. McMahon by Congress in recognition of the bravery shown by him at Spottsylvania and in many other battles.

The requiem mass was chanted by the Rev. Father John J. Wynne. There was no address. Immediately after the services the coffin was taken to Washington in a special car for burial in Arlington Cemetery.

The chief mourners, who accompanied the body to Washington, were the Misses Mary and Jane McMahon, sisters of Gen. McMahon, and his brother-in-law, Rear Admiral Ramsey of the United States Navy. Mayor McClellan, Recorder Goff, Gen. Anson G. McCook, Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard, Gen. N. E. Tremain, Gen. N. M Curtis, Gen. Horatio C King, Gen. E. W. Ripley, Major J. Langston, Justices Morgan J. O'Brien, Edward Patterson, Charles F. McLean, Joseph E. Newberger, and Charles H. Truax, Jacob A. Cantor, David B. Gilbert, Dr. L. Balch, and Col. W. L. Brown were the pallbearers.

The Rev. Father Campbell, President Hearn of St. Francis Xavier's College, President Quinn of Fordham University, and the Rev. Father Evers of St. Andrew's Church, occupied seats in the sanctuary. There were delegations in the body of the church from the Society of the Potomac, the Loyal Legion, and the Alumni Association of Fordham University.

PAID COUNTESS PALMAY $600.

"Baron" Seefeld Also Retracts—Then He's Discharged and She Sails.

Countess Ilka Palmay sailed for Europe on the Carpathia yesterday, after having ended her contest with the man who once passed for "Baron" Fritz von Gordon Seefeld. The "Baron," who was caught in Philadelphia after having jumped his bail, and was then confined in the Tombs for three months, had to give up $600 and sign a statement swearing that statements he had made about the Countess were false.

Seefeld borrowed $2,000 from the Countess, saying he needed it to help pay for his automobile. It turned out that he didn't own the automobile he had been using, but had borrowed it. At the first trial four of the jury held out against convicting him.

Seefeld's counsel went to the Countess and offered to pay $600 on the borrowed $2,000 if the case was dropped. The Countess refused to agree to any settlement unless Seefeld would sign a statement declaring that all his intimations against her character were false.

A statement was written out and taken to Seefeld in the Tombs, where he signed it. Then, with the consent of Assistant District Attorney Garvan, the "Baron" was discharged.

If President Roosevelt should send you a letter introducing a friend, would you honor that letter? If Bill Jones had written the same letter introducing the same friend, would you honor it equally? Here then is a moral. The worth of a letter of introduction depends largely on the reputation and position of the introducer.

An advertisement may be considered a letter of introduction, and the publication is the introducer. THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL offers to manufacturers of honest, appropriate wares an introduction to its 6,000,000 readers. These readers will honor such an introduction, far and away beyond the appeal of the "Bill Jones" publications.

To acquiring the confidence of these 6,000,000 readers we have given much time, much money, much thought. Can you estimate the value to your business of our introduction to six million believers?

Originated Laws on Temperance Instruction in all the States.

BOSTON, April 24.—Mrs. Mary Hannah Hunt, World and National Superintendent of the Department of Scientific Instruction of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and originator of the laws in all the States of the Union compelling scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, died to-day at her home, 23 Tull Street.

Mary Hannah (Hanchett) Hunt was born in South Canaan, Conn., on July 4, 1830. After completing a course of study at Patapsco Institute, near Baltimore, she became a Professor of Chemistry in that institution. She was married in 1852 to Leander B. Hunt, a manufacturer of East Douglass, Mass.

Mrs. Hunt was early impressed with the possibilities of a temperance reform, and, becoming convinced that a most practical phase of this reform would be scientific temperance instruction in the public schools, she visited almost every State in the Union during the three years from 1879 to 1882, delivering lectures in support of her views and plans. Since that time she had been incessantly active in the cause of temperance.

BURGLAR'S STRATEGEM DID NOT GO THROUGH

Woman's Timely Return Interrupted Thieves at Work.

ONE CAUGHT AFTER CHASE

Burglar Threw Mrs. Coleman Down Stairs—Had Her Valuables All Packed Up.

Mrs. Catherine Coleman went out shopping yesterday afternoon. On her return, as she opened the door of her flat, 2,037 Lexington Avenue, she was confronted by a strange man. He was very polite and said with a bow:

"The lady of the house is not at home."

"But I'm the lady of the house," replied the surprised Mrs. Coleman.

"Oh, you are, are you?" rejoined the man, and seized her by the throat and threw her downstairs to the landing below. Then he called to a companion within, and the two sped past the woman and ran down and into the street.

There they took different ways. The man who had spoken to Mrs. Coleman turned a corner and got away down a side street. The other rushed south on Lexington Avenue ,and was seen by Detectives Teevens and Sullivan. They overhauled him within a couple of blocks.

Mrs. Coleman identified him and he was arraigned yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Crane in the Harlem Court. He gave his name as George Howard, 259 West Forty-second Street, but the police believe that he adopted this name and address on the spur of the moment. He was remanded for forty-eight hours to give the detectives time to look into the case.

An examination of Mrs. Coleman's flat showed that the door had been forced with a jimmy. All her portable valuables had been done up in bundles, and it was evident that if she had delayed her return a few minutes the burglars would have got clear away. As it was they got away with nothing.

BILLIARDS FOR THE FUND.

Concert Hall Exhibition Nets $2,500 for San Francisco Sufferers.

Billiard champions and ex-champions gave an interesting exhibition of billiards at different styles of play last night in the concert hall of Madison Square Garden. In aid of the San Francisco sufferers the managers of the recent tournament, aided by all the players who took part in addition to a number of other local experts, amateurs as well as professionals, gave their services free for a benefit performance. The Madison Square Garden Company gave the use of the hall. This galaxy of billiard stars drew a crowd of about 500 persons, including many women.

Probably the most interesting of the various short games was the meeting of George Slosson, the winner of the recent tournament, and George Sutton, who got second place, but whose remarkable average of 100 in a five-hundred-point game will not soon be forgotten by every liver of billiards, in a one-hundred-point match at 18.2. Sutton ran out the game in his third inning with a splendid run of 51, making some difficult carrom shots. He was greeted with loud applause, but the score, 100 to 19, was anything but pleasing to Slosson, although he smiled genially.

The crowd showed that had a warm spot for Jacob Schaefer, for when the latter stepped to the table to give an exhibition of his fancy shots, he was applauded so generously that it was some time before he could begin his play. Willie Hoppe gave a clever exhibition of fancy work, and Cure and Ed McLaughlin also took a hand at this interesting phase of billiard skill and acquitted themselves most creditably.

Schaefer and Hoppe played a 100-point match game at 18.1 balk line, and the boy won handily by 100 to 16, Hoppe making one run of 51. He ran out in six innings. Curt and Cutler played a three-cushion carrom game, which was won by Cure in the twenty-first inning, his best run being 4. Cutler made 16.

The best amateur exhibition was given by Ferdinand Poggenburg and Calvin Demarest at 14-inch balk line. Demarest won in the eleventh inning, with 100 points to 88 for Poggenburg.

It was announced during the play that the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company would add $1,000 to the receipts. It was impossible to furnish a detailed statement of the proceeds of the benefit, but with the added $1,000 it was believed that the billiardists would have a purse of $2,500 this week to send to the San Francisco relief fund.

COLUMBIA'S ROWING SCHEME.

Yale and Harvard Graduates Asked to Compete in Regatta.

Columbia, Yale, and Harvard graduate oarsmen will pit their skill against each other at the Columbia Regatta on the Hudson on May 5, according to the statement of P. D. Bogue, manager of the Columbia Rowing Association, though the formal consent of the Yale and Harvard combinations are yet to be obtained.

Many of the graduates of the Morningside institution who have competed in the Poughkeepsie regattas are anxious to get into a shell again for a lively brush, and from present indications it is entirely probable that both Yale and Harvard will be on hand with graduate crews that will give a good accounting of their experience on their 'Varsity eights.

If this race of the graduate crews can be pulled off successfully this year, the event will probably be made an important feature of all future Columbia Regattas, and it is further probable that the meeting of these graduate crews will be a means of bringing together the 'Varsity eights of these three institutions.

The Columbia Regatta is to become a permanent institution at Columbia, according to reports, the purpose of it being to develop a more general interest in rowing at Columbia, in order to get more 'Varsity material in future years. Single sculls, fraternity eights, and dormitory eights will be entered, beside interclass and the intercollegiate graduate crews.

The Columbia 'Varsity crew is getting down to serious work now, and appear to be going very well, though made up mainly of new men. Probabilities are that H. B. Post, who stroked the crew in 1904, will return in a few days. Post was out early in the season, but owing to an affection of the heart was forced to quit work for a while and resign the Captaincy. Mackenzie is making good at stroke, and, if Post does not return to make him fight for the place, he will undoubtedly stroke this year's 'Varsity.

Lou Dillon "Doping" Case Up Again.

When John J. Adams, counsel for E. E. Smathers, the horseman, who is being sued by the Memphis Trotting Association for the return of the Memphis Gold Cup, which it is alleged was won by Major Delmar by reason of the "doping" of Lou Dillon, asked Justice Scott in the Supreme Court, yesterday, for an order to compel counsel for the Trotting Association to give him a copy of an affidavit made by Edward Saunders, he was met by the statement that Murray Howe, the Secretary of the association, was in San Francisco, and counsel had not been able to communicate with him.

There were two affidavits in the case. One made by George Spear, a driver of trotting horses, and the other by Saunders. Mr. Adams admitted that counsel had given them a copy of the Spear's affidavit. He said that that affidavit was of minor importance, but that the affidavit of Saunders was important for the reason, as counsel understood, it recited the fact that Saunders saw the horse "doped."

Justice Scott adjourned the hearing until May 8.

Unique Punishment.

Forcing a cigarette smoker to give up for one year the use of cigarettes is the novel sentence a Judge in Pennsylvania has passed upon a young man brought before him for obtaining goods under false pretenses. While the course of this court could not be followed exactly in many cases, there is something in the spirit of its ruling that will appeal to all who condemn indiscriminate punishment. The young man might have gone to prison for a year, but that would have marred his life. Besides there may have been members of his family dependent upon him for support, who during his absence would have suffered quite as much as he. Always pursuing conventional lines of punishment some of the shadows of the punishment falls upon innocent persons. This is inevitable. But in this case the offender is the only sufferer, and no one doubts that he will be very unhappy and sincerely sorry that he ever went wrong. And what other ends can punishment have in view?—Boston Transcript.

Receiver for Uhren.

Judge McCarthy of the City Court has appointed Irving J. Joseph receiver in supplementary proceedings for Bernard Uhren, an associate of Alfred R. Goslin, on the application of Joseph H. Cunningham, who obtained judgments against Uhren on Monday for $643. The bond of the receiver was fixed at $750. It was stated that Uhren cannot with reasonable diligence be found within the State.

Rice Production.

In 1886 the production of rice in Southwest Louisiana amounted to a little over 200 carloads, and six years later, in 1892, it had reached 7,000 carloads; while in the season of 1904, according to the official reports of the Rice Association of America and the Rice Millers and Distributors' Association, the crop of Louisiana and Texas aggregated 5,127,451 bags of rice, and during that season American rice was exported to almost every country of Europe, besides Cuba, Porto Rico, the Hawaiian Islands, and Central American States.—Sunset Magazine.

London Shop Girls.

The prettiest girls in the kingdom are in the London shops. In features, complexion, figure, animation of expression or what you will, they beat the stage all to pieces. As for the bejewelled girls you see at the Court functions, they are simply nowhere beside the shop girls. Put the dress and diamonds on the latter, and the black frocks and linen collars and cuffs on the former, and you would soon see.

Vetch for South Free of Duty—Other Decisions.

In a decision rendered by Judge Waite, the Board of United States General Appraisers sustained yesterday a protest filed by the N. L. Willett Drug Company of Savannah, Ga., regarding the rate of duty applicable to importations of vetch seeds. The action of the court is a complete reversal of its former practice, which has been to classify this merchandise as "seeds not specially provided for," with duty at the rate of 30 per cent. In accordance with the decision of the board, the vetch seed will hereafter be granted free entry.

Vetch is closely allied to the clover and alfalfa, and is of the same family as the pea and bean. It is used for pasture and forage and for making hay. The vetch is used extensively in Georgia and some of the other Southern States, and also in the Southwestern part of the United States.

General Appraiser Sharretts wrote a decision for the board overruling a claim made by R. F. Downing & Co. and others regarding the rate of duty applicable to carbon sticks used for electric lighting. In accordance with a finding of the Supreme Court, the customs tribunal holds the merchandise to be dutiable at 90 cents per hundred, and not at a lower rate as asserted by the importers.

The board partially sustained a claim filed by A. Strauss & Co. of New York. The board held that steel watch chains must stand duty at 45 per cent. as manufactures of metal.

Judgment Against Miss Munro.

Judgment by default was entered yesterday against Miss Norma Leslie Munro in favor of the Mrs. Osborn Company, dressmakers, for the amount now due on six notes dated May 1, 1905. It is said that Miss Munro is out of the State.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

JOHN M. DELMOUR.—John M. Delmour, agent, at 306 West Thirty-fourth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $1,208 and no assets.

BRAFMAN & BECKER.—Isaac Brafman and Jacob Becker, who compose the firm of Brafman & Becker, 224 and 226 East 127th Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $1,884 and no assets. They have only two creditors, Etta Forgotston, $1,410, and Henry Kuntz, $474. Mr. Brafman has individual debts of $430.

W. H. FURNISS COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the W. H. Furniss Company, dealer in mahogany logs at 391 Avenue A, show liabilities $18,442 and assets $794, consisting of cash, $33; accounts, $221; claims, $540. Among the creditors are Thomas Rummier & Sons, $7,452; Gillies, Roberts & Co., $4,072; Irvin Sellars, $4,771, all of Liverpool, and the Bank of the Metropolis, $1,000, secured.

CHICAGO CLOTHES DRYER WORKS.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Chicago Clothes Dryer Works of 136 West Twenty-fourth Street show liabilities $65,230 and nominal assets $23,905, consisting of materials, $4,000; machinery, $9,000; patterns and dies, $2,150; accounts, $4,887; notes, $670; contracts, $2,872, and cash, $416. Among the creditors are the Riverside Bank, $12,562, partly secured; Colonial Bank, $8,384, partly secured; W. S. Scott, East Orange, $8,482, secured; P. G. Hussey & Co., Pittsburg, $5,082; Bruce & Cook, $4,721, and estate of A. B. Darling, $4,102.

JOHNSON COFFEE COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Johnson Coffee Company, wholesale dealers in coffees and teas at 83 Water Street, by these creditors: Edward G. Mauger, Plainfield, N. J., $2,002; Nicholas Mauger, $2,002, and Victor R. Grimwood, New York, $1,002. It was alleged that the corporation is insolvent. On April 20 it made a preferential payment of $400 to the Derbyshire Coffee Company, and permitted another creditor to obtain a preference by a judgment. Seven of the creditors asked Judge Holt of the United States District Court to appoint John B. Overton, manager of the company, as receiver. The liabilities are $12,000 and assets $8,000.

HIRSCHBERG BROTHERS.—A petition in bankruptcy has been field against David and Adolph Hirschberg, composing the firm of Hirschberg Brothers, importers of fancy goods and manufacturers of dress trimmings and leather belts at 97 Bleecker Street, by Wentworth, Stern & Lowenstein for the following creditors: L. F. Robertson & Sons, $553; Atlas Embroidery Works, $1,066, and John Boyle & Co., $674. It was alleged that they are insolvent and have made preferential payments of $1,000. Edwin F. Stern said that the liabilities are about $18,000 and assets about the same, and it is expected there will be a composition with creditors. The trouble was attributed to inability to make collections. The Messrs. Hirschberg went through bankruptcy before, in 1899, when they had liabilities of $100,658 and assets of $56,550.

THOMAS F. J. MURPHY.—Thomas F. J. Murphy, dealer in jewelry, books, tobacco, and cigars at Callicoon Depot, N. Y., has filed a petition in bankruptcy here with liabilities $12,265 and nominal assets $6,725, consisting of stock, $1,500; paintings and ivories, $3,500; accounts, $100; shares in the Callicoon Acetyline Gas Company, $500, pledged for a loan of $300; paid on a real estate contract, $1,005, and saddle and music box, $20. The paintings and ivories are in the possession of John F. Delaney of Brooklyn, and consist of one oil painting valued at $2,000; ivory carving, $1,300; another ivory carving, $100, and an ivory crucifix, $100. Mr. Murphy inherited a collection of paintings from his uncle, who was a New York bookbinder. The largest creditors are Charles F. Starck, his father-in-law, $4,758, and William H. A. Murphy, $3,150. On May 12, 1903, the petitioner made a contract with Mr. Starck to purchase the business and store building for $7,758, and had carried on the business up to January last, when he surrendered possession of the business and store property to Mr. Starck. Mr. Murphy paid $1,005 on the contract, and he states that he and Mr. Starck are willing to have the contract and stock of goods go over to a trustee for the benefit of Mr. Murphy's creditors.

PETER BANNER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Peter Banner, merchant and real estate operator, of 648 Broadway, by Leo Levy, attorney for these creditors: Clarence F. Opper, $5,000; Julius W. Kempner, $5,000, and Stettiner Brothers, $15. It was alleged that he is insolvent, has made preferential payment in excess of $10,000, and transferred real estate at Long Branch to persons whose names are unknown to the petitioning creditors. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed Augustus H. Skillin receiver of the assets, fixing his bond at $10,000. Mr. Levy said that it was a very sad case, as Mr. Banner was very ill. Ex-Assemblyman M. R. Ryttenberg, Mr. Banner's attorney, said yesterday that Mr. Banner owns the building at 648 Broadway, valued at $500,000 and mortgaged for $400,000. He also owns the St. Urban apartment house at Eighty-ninth Street and Central Park West, valued at $1,500,000, mortgaged for $950,000, and against which there are liens and charges of $170,000. He was also the owner, through the Vallina Realty Company, of the apartment house at Seventieth Street and Central Park West, under construction, valued at $1,600,000, mortgaged for $900,000, which he has turned over to the contractors to be finished for the benefit of creditors. He owes probably $400,000 to banks and friends for borrowed money.

Stocks Irregular—Call Money Rates, 3@5 Per Cent.

Pool Liquidation Lighter—Steel Corporation's Good Quarter.

Although liquidation by pools and large individual holders of stocks was again under way in yesterday's market, the volume of such selling was appreciably diminished compared with the outpouring of securities on Monday, and as a consequence prices, while highly irregular and at times weak, managed to disclose a preponderance of gains at the close of the day. Operations for the fall were more extensive than on the previous day, thus offsetting, in some measure, the relaxing pressure from the pools. A source of support to the market in addition to the buying, naturally attracted by the heavy declines of recent days, was the announcement that the market would be spared heavy liquidation of insurance companies' stock holdings as a result of offers by banks to lend money on such securities. Action of this kind was taken by prominent banks in Hartford, the institutions of that city offering to place as much as $5,000,000 at the disposal of local fire insurance companies, and although no concerted measures of this nature were announced here, similar steps are being taken in individual cases. Deposits of Government funds with San Francisco banks also promised alleviation, inasmuch as corresponding amounts are saved to the banks of this and other cities for other purposes.

Much interest was displayed by Wall Street in the progress of the Russian loan offering yesterday in London and in Paris, and while up to the close of business definite information as to the success of the flotation had not been had, early dispatches indicated little in the way of enthusiasm to subscribe for the bonds. Nevertheless, they were quoted at slight premiums in both London and Paris, although in the latter city the disturbing labor conditions and the uncertainties of a general election militated against any material oversubscription of the Paris allotment. The carrying charges on American securities over the settlement in the London market again touched high figures and discount rates both in London and upon the Continent were firm. The foreign exchange market here was dull, with easier rates, but no further engagements of gold were announced, although demand sterling is still below the import point. Currency shipments were again heavy, through the agency of the Sub-Treasury and by express, to Pacific Coast points, and for the first time since the drain to the Pacific Coast began the banks reported a loss to the Sub-Treasury, this amounting to $2,600,000.

After the close of business the United States Steel Corporation made public its earnings statement for the quarter ended March 31 last, reporting net earnings of $36,634,000, an increase of $1,356,000 over the December quarter, and surplus of $16,067,000, after charges and preferred dividends, this representing a small decrease compared with the surplus of the previous quarter. The final surplus was $5,567,000, which compares with $7,323,000 at the end of the December quarter, the various differences being accounted for by increases of $3,200,000 in appropriations for various corporate purposes, including new construction. The net earnings reported are at a rate which, if maintained, would make the present the greatest year in that respect in the corporation's history, while the tonnage of unfilled orders on hand, 7,018,712, is the second largest ever reported, falling only 398,000 tons under the record figures of December in spite of the unprecedented activity of the last quarter.

BIG GAIN REPORTED IN U. S. STEEL EARNINGS

Increase of $13,600,000 Over Same Quarter of 1905.

MAY PASS 1902 RECEIPTS

Retiring Officers Re-elected by Board of Directors—Quarterly Dividend of 1¾ Per Cent. Declared.

The net earnings of the United States Steel Corporation for the three months ending March 31, made public in the regular quarterly report issued yesterday, amounted to $36,634,490, an increase of more than $13,600,000 over the earnings for the corresponding quarter in 1905. The showing for the first three months this year was also better than for the last three months in 1905. The company's profits for the past three months, although not quite equal to the best quarter in 1902, the record year in the company's history, were greater than the company's average quarterly earnings in that year. The net earnings of the corporation for the present year, if maintained at the level established during the first three months, will amount to over $146,000,000, compared with the $133,000,000 earned in 1902.

The balance of surplus for the quarter, after payment of all fixed charges and the regular dividend on the preferred stock, and after setting aside $10,500,000 for extraordinary expenditures, amounted to $5,567,000. The appropriation for extraordinary expenditures was larger by $1,500,000 than the amount set aside for similar purposes the previous quarter. There was a substantial increase in the amount set aside for the regular depreciation and reserve fund and the special improvement and replacement fund, which, together with the sinking funds on bonds of subsidiary companies, amounted to $7,325,608, compared with $5,620,243 set aside for the same accounts in the last quarter of 1905.

The unfilled orders on hand on March 31 amounted to 7,018,712 tons. This shows a falling off of nearly 600,000 tons from the unfilled orders on the company's books at the close of 1905, when they amounted to 7,605,086 tons, but with that exception the unfilled orders at the close of the past quarter were the largest on record.

The net earnings in March showed a large increase over the first two months of the year. In January the net earnings amounted to $11,856,375 and in February to $10,958,275 and in March to $13,819,840.

Despite the falling off in orders compared with the December quarter, it is officially said that the outlook for the company's business continues most satisfactory and that conditions now are as favorable as they have been in the recent past.

The Directors at yesterday's meeting re-elected the retiring officers and also the members of the Finance Committee whose terms had expired. It was said after the meeting that no action was taken by the Directors beyond the re-election of officers and the declaration of the usual quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock.

GOLD IMPORTS CHECKED.

Foreign Exchange Rates Firm—Absence of Stock Bills Held Responsible.

Foreign exchange rates were firm yesterday at a level which precluded the immediate engagement of any further amounts of gold for import. Foreign bankers who have been active in the gold import movement said yesterday that they were not in a position to say definitely whether further gold imports in the immediate future were probable or not.

At present exchange is showing considerable firmness, owing to the absence of the stock bills which were largely responsible for the recent decline, and foreign bankers are in doubt as to the probable course of exchange in the near future. Money rates at this centre, it was pointed out, will naturally play a prominent part in shaping the exchange market. Should interest rates advance here, a corresponding decline in exchange might bring the market to a point at which further gold could be obtained.

Apart from other considerations, it is possible, foreign bankers say, that even with low interest rates here large gold imports may occur, owing to the necessity on the part of foreign insurance companies of making transfers to New York to meet their losses in San Francisco.

YOUNG OUT OF U. S. TRUST CO.

Ex-Chairman of the Board of Directors Goes Over to Windsor Trust Co.

George W. Young, it was learned yesterday, has retired as Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, and has also withdrawn as a Director of that company. Mr. Young has been out of the United States Mortgage Board for several weeks, his name, at his own request, not having been included among the Directors elected at the recent annual meeting.

Mr. Young said last night that his withdrawal from the United States Mortgage Company was due to the fact that he had a much larger interest in the Windsor Trust Company and that he did not feel that he should retain a place in both boards. The Windsor Trust Company last September opened a branch downtown close to the offices of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, in Cedar Street, and the two companies are competing with each other for business. Mr. Young said that he arranged to retire from the Mortgage Company Directorate when the Windsor Trust Company moved downtown, but that he had been requested to withhold his resignation for a time.

Mr. Young was until about a year ago President of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company and when he withdrew from that position he became Chairman of the board.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, April 24.—Money was in good Stock Exchange demand, but the lending of Japanese money helped the market. Discounts were firm on talk of an increase in the rate of discount of the Bank of England.

Trading on the Stock Exchange opened dull, with occasional recoveries, but prices reacted at the close, owing to reports of further gold exports. Consols opened easier, recovered, and closed below the best quotations of the day.

Americans opened flat and rallied to above parity on good New York support. The local operations were narrow, prices drooped during the last hour, and the market closed weak.

Foreigners were affected by the labor troubles in France. New Russians weakened to a quarter per cent. premium and closed at five-eighth per cent. premium. Japanese were easy.

Imperial Japanese 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101⅛.

Bar silver steady at 30¼d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.35; Lisbon, 4.50.

Bullion amounting to £651,000 was withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day, of which £351,000 was for shipment to the United States, and the remainder to South America.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 24.—The local money market has a firm tone. Call loans, 5@6 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5½@6 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5½@6 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 6 per cent.; New York funds, 12½@16 2-3c discount; clearings, $27,291,636; balances, $1,643,877; Sub-Treasury debit, $20,019.

There was plenty of liquidation in the local market this morning, and stocks declined sharply all around. Local securities, as well as copper shares, came in for their share of the weakness, and much lower prices were seen. Around the noon hour the pressure was not so pronounced, and a few buying orders made their appearance, but the rallies were feeble and short lived. During the afternoon another drive was made, following the weakness in the New York market, but there was a considerably better feeling at the close, which was about midway between the highest and lowest points of the day.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The low prices of the first hour yesterday were made, not so much by liquidation as by very aggressive bear trading. The prompt recovery in the second hour indicated clearly enough the character of the selling. The market opened in an uncertain temper with most of the active stocks fractionally higher than Monday's closing. It was the sense of the shrewd traders that stocks would be a purchase on a weak opening, at least for a turn, but in the initial trading they were neither weak enough to buy nor strong enough to sell, and this was the state of things when the bear crowd shortly before 10:30 o'clock launched its attack. Union Pacific was traded down from 149¼ to 148 in successive transactions, which came out on the tape all in one string. This was done presumably on the idea that an abrupt break in Union Pacific would be more effective than a corresponding decline in any other stock. Similar tactics were employed in Amalgamated Copper, which, after having been stoutly supported in Monday's session above 107, sold down suddenly to 106⅝. United States Steel common was depressed at the same time to 41⅝. The inclinations of the professional trading element were strongly bearish, and its activities supplemented what had every appearance of an organized bear raid. The recovery, although not in any respect violent, was very prompt. The break and the immediate recovery to about Monday's closing prices together occupied less than an hour.

⁂

It was noticeable that, whereas the break in the first hour was accompanied by very heavy trading, with manipulative orders much in evidence, as in Union Pacific, the recovery took place on lighter trading. The break, in other words, was due largely to manipulation. The buying, as brokers saw it, was a good deal stronger than the selling. Many stocks were bought yesterday, brokers said, to be held. They will not come upon the market again as soon as they begin to show small profits. The buying differed in this respect from that which was intended last week merely to check the decline. Stocks that are bought only to steady the market are usually for sale again as soon as prices have recovered moderately.

⁂

There has been some very heavy selling for the short account in the last few days, and also a great deal of liquidation in quarters where speculative stocks had become unduly concentrated. One group of speculators sold 75,000 shares in the last hour on Monday. The same crowd was reported yesterday to be hammering the market, from which it would be inferred that the bulk of its selling late Monday afternoon was for the short account. One operator is reported to be committed to the bear side to the extent of 100,000 shares. His interest probably is much exaggerated, but there is little doubt that a number of the most active operators on the Stock Exchange are heavily short of the market. On the other side, the vulnerable bull accounts have been greatly reduced. The weakness of Brooklyn Rapid Transit this week has been due, it is said, to the liquidation of a mining man whose private speculations in the market have frequently in the last two years been a subject of comment. Here and there all over the Street private speculators, swinging larger lines of stocks than they could protect, have been letting go. There has been somebody to take stocks off the hands of such men, as well as from pools and lesser amounts from commission houses. The public has not been standing under. The conclusion must be that the buying on the whole has been of a very strong character.

⁂

People who follow the stock market even casually are more familiar with the short side than was the case ten years ago. Brokers say that where a few years ago only one client on an average ten would trade on the short side at all, about one-third of a modern clientele will trade as freely one way as the other. Older brokers remember the time when it was the mark of something almost like professional experience for a man to be familiar with the practice of selling stocks short, whereas nowadays nearly everybody understands it.

⁂

Consolidated Gas is the only important stock now prominent in the market which has not declined in the last ten days.

⁂

Tennessee Coal and Iron was traded in yesterday to the extent of more than 3,000 shares, at a decline of 5 points. The stock went through the break last week and through the decline of Monday without a single transaction. There had been so much comment in the matter that it was deemed expedient, no doubt, to show that there could be a market for the stock.

⁂

The strength of the United States Steel stocks yesterday was hopefully regarded. After having touched 41⅝ in the first hour the common stock recovered to 43, and the preferred, which had sold as low as 106¾, was subsequently seen at 108⅛. The recovery in these shares after midday cheered the whole market. Their strength was due, of course, to expectations of a very favorable statement of the last quarter's earnings, and for once the estimates did not exceed the truth. The prevailing information was that the earnings would be a little better than $36,000,000. They were, in fact, nearer $37,000,000 than $36,000,000. In the last hour both the common and preferred shares receded somewhat from their highest quotations under the profit-taking of traders who thought it wise to be on the safe side in case the statement should fall below expectations. The figures were not published until after the closing of the stock market. Enthusiastic bulls declare that the quarterly statement will suggest the resumption of dividends on Steel common.

⁂

It has been the understanding in Wall Street and probably also among investors and speculators at large that dividends would be resumed on United States Steel common as soon as a surplus of $100,000,000 had been accumulated. The total undivided surplus on Dec. 31 1905, was $84,788,450.67. The statement published yesterday shows a surplus for the March quarter of $16,067,000, which, if it could be continued that way, would bring the total surplus over the mark of $100,000,000. From the $16,067,000 surplus for the March quarter, however, $10,500,000 is deducted for various purposes, leaving a "balance of surplus" for the quarter of $5,567,000, which, added to the surplus brought over from last year, brings the total undivided surplus up to $90,305,450.67. It seems, therefore, almost certain that the $100,000,000 undivided surplus which was to have been accumulated before dividends would be resumed on the common stock will be exceeded this year, possibly in one more quarter, probably in two more, and from this time forward dividends doubtless will be talked of with increasing confidence. The management is not definitely committed to the policy, but it can hardly be denied that the prospect of dividends on Steel common, after a surplus of $100,000,000, has been held out so persistently that people will be greatly disappointed if a distribution does not follow. It is on this idea of a dividend within the year that Steel common is being bulled. Nobody can complain that the stock has not been well supported in the last ten days. Its relative strength has been, indeed, one of the conspicuous features of the market.

⁂

If the Steel stocks are held steadily to the bull side of the market it will help greatly to restore confidence.

⁂

Strange as it may seem, there are sagacious men who believe that conditions now favor a more prolonged period of reasonable interest in rates in Wall Street than could have been hoped for a fortnight ago. The flotation of the Russian loan, they argue, has released or will release a large amount of French gold. Foreign insurance companies will be obliged to remit heavily to this country to cover their losses in the San Francisco fire. The United States Treasury is releasing a great deal of money, more than it would have released probably without the incentive of San Francisco's necessities. Finally, it is argued that the United States Treasury's recently inaugurated policy touching gold imports will continue to facilitate such transactions. Even the money that is being transferred to San Francisco, they believe, will ultimately come back, at least a considerable part of it, since the need of it is to buy things in the East. A run on the San Francisco banks as soon as they resume business is thought probable, but after people have drawn their money to have the feeling of it, what can they do with it but to put it back? They haven't even houses in which to hide it, and they cannot, or, rather, will not, carry it in their pockets and sleep with it in the open.

⁂

A few weeks ago everybody was asking: "Where are the stocks?" It appears after all that speculators had a good many in their possession. The market had only to break to bring them out.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—Reading and United States Steel common were the active features of the local market, moving in sympathy with New York. Some liquidation was noted in the general list, but the buying was pretty good and held prices at or above yesterday's level. The demand for Cambria Steel was regarded as particularly good, as the company has about all the business it can do this year. Electric Storage Battery was a weak feature, declining on light trading. There was some good buying of Philadelphia Company, Philadelphia Rapid Transit, United Gas Improvement, and West Jersey & Seashore warrants.

Total sales, 40,019 shares.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 24.—With unrest brooding over Eastern markets local selling of securities was remarkably small. The circular on Diamond Match may have been the cause for the loss of a point in that stock. Chicago Telephone fell to 107½ on a few shares, suggesting the possibility that dividends will be cut, as has been reported. Union Traction common sold at 5¼, almost low level. Can common sold below 8 again, and Carbon common dipped back to 91. Otherwise the early market was fairly steady.

Late in the day Diamond Match eased further. Union Traction preferred, which sold at 16¾, rallied to 17.

Money, 5½@6 per cent. New York exchange, 30c@30c. discount.

The cotton market yesterday presented rather a sold-out appearance. After opening unchanged to 4 points higher prices yielded 4 to 10 points on further liquidation. Short covering and heavy Liverpool buying then turned the tide, and the recovery amounted to 11 points from the lowest on May, 12 points on July, and 9 on October. Late in the session some who had bought for a more substantial rally again sold out and the market lost most of the gain.

The feature of trading seemed to be transferring the long interest in May to July. Advantage was taken of the 16-point difference in price and the volume of May selling, and July buying reduced this to about 10 points.

The Liverpool market did not fully respond to Monday's decline here, and the early weakness brought buying orders in from there amounting, it was said, to 30,000 bales. Shorts covered freely on the slump and considerable support was given by prominent New Orleans and local interests.

It is learned on excellent authority that there is inquiry for steamers to bring full cargoes of cotton from Liverpool to New York for May delivery. Spot people said yesterday that this would indicate that May shorts could better afford to get the cotton and deliver it to the bull leaders than to cover their contracts here. One point made by the bears regarding the May deal is that the stock of cotton in New York certificates will expire on about 28,000 bales next month, and that the reinspection charges on this will cost about 13 points. This item, it was said, would be one of many items of expense to the clique in accepting May deliveries. Friends of the market, however, do not attach much importance to expense.

Liverpool spot sales were again 10,000 bales, at a further 5 points decline to 6.03d., against 4.12d. last year. Futures opened quiet and steady at 5 points decline, and closed steady 1 to 3 points off, May-June, 5.84; July-August, 5.84; August-September, 5.80; October-November, 5.60, and December-January, 5.59. Manchester yarns were steady and cloths quiet, but firm. The Southern spot markets were quiet and unchanged to 3-16 lower. The local spot market remained unchanged at 11.65, against 7.60 last year and 13.75 in 1904.

Cotton Opinions.

A. O. BROWN & CO.—The decline of late has been so severe that in the nature of things a rally seems to be due, and we certainly advocate purchases on declines.

DICK BROTHERS & CO.—The market seems to have discounted pretty well the effect of any depression following the San Francisco disaster, and on account of the huge short interest in all options the technical position would not seem to favor a decline on the liquidation theory.

T. A. McINTYRE & CO.—We are not anticipating anything better than a continued comparatively narrow traders' market.

E. F. HUTTON & CO.—We prefer the long side on all breaks.

Following are the opening, highest, lowest, and closing prices:

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market had an irregular opening, May first selling at a decline of ⅜c, while later positions opened ⅛@¼c better. For a time the feeling was weak, crop and weather indications at home and abroad being regarded as bearish. Later, however, there was a sharp upturn on reported damage by drought in the Southwest. The market closed firm at a net rise of ⅞@1¼c, without sales for export. Cash wheat closed quiet but firm. No. 2 red, nominal, in elevator, and 90⅝c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 88⅝c, opening of navigation.

CORN.—The market for corn ruled generally firm, opening at an advance of ⅛@¼c and increasing all around, with the close firm. Exporters took 128,000 bushels corn. Cash corn closed firm; No. 2 corn, 57c, nominal, in elevator, and 54½c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white and No. 2 yellow, 57c, all nominal, free on board, afloat.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 24.—The market was slightly more active to-day, though the opening was weak. Although some slight irregularities were apparent in the more active stocks, steadiness was the rule. Early losses were regained in some issues. Northern Central declined one-half, to 100¾, the lowest it has been for a long time. The demand for the bonds was slightly stronger, but at concessions in prices.

The decline in United Railways income bonds and common stock since the annual meeting of the company is causing much comment. Early in the month the free incomes were selling around 76, and several times they touched 75½, while the bonds deposited with the Baltimore Trust Company sold about a point lower. The deposited stock sold as high as 19, while the free brought around 18½. Since the annual meeting, however, there has been a continuous decline, and to-day the free incomes sold down to 71½ and the deposited bonds a point lower, while the deposited stock sold at 17. This decline in prices is generally credited to a feeling of impatience among the holders of the securities in regard to the company's plans.

The market closed steady, but dull. Sales, bonds, $64,500; shares, stock, 1,465.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Closes Strong After Early Weakness.

Mining Shares Monopolize Most of the Day's Trading—Prices Follow the Big Exchange.

After a promising opening the curb market weakened rapidly yesterday in sympathy with the recessions in prices on the Stock Exchange; but as the day progressed stocks recovered slowly, again following the movement of the big market, and the closing prices were in most cases above the low figures of the day. Mining shares were fairly active and closed strong. United Copper closed ⅝ up, after selling 5,200 shares, at 63⅝, but sold during the weak period as low as 61⅞. Utah Copper closed at 27, a gain of 2 points, after selling down to 23½. Boston Copper lost ¾ of a point on the day's trading, closing at 21½.

Industrials developed little activity. American Can sold 1,450 shares, with a loss of ½ point, closing at 61. The low price was 60⅝.

1. That your petitioner is a street surface railway corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, having filed its certificate of incorporation in the office of the Secretary of State of New York on the 29th day of July, 1905, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating a street surface railway in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York.

2. That your petitioner desires to obtain from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York its consent to and a grant of the right, privileges, and franchise to use a portion of Bowne Street, in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York, for street railway purposes, and for the construction, maintenance and operation of a single track street surface railway upon and along the surface of said Bowne Street, a description of such proposed railway being as follows: Beginning at a point southeast of Imlay Street, where it will connect with the track of the New York Dock Company, and running southeasterly along Bowne Street to and into the property of J. H.
